"Gaunt forbidding sentinels of the Kongo! What strange people dwell behind you—the dwarfs and others, with their poisoned implements of war—cannibalism with all its attendant horrors—a people that cannot tell us of their past. The ages gone by are all a blank to them. These people are akin to the beasts of the forest, inasmuch as they care only for the present. They live for the present. The past is gone. No records have been written of them.

"The war paint of vermilion colored pigments which is smeared all over their bodies adds to the hideousness of these savages, darting from rock to rock, hiding behind trees, lying hidden in the foliage overhead, waging war with all. Tragedy follows tragedy behind those Bulegga mountains in the Kongo, to the south of which lie the snow capped crests of rugged Ruwenzori."

First White Men on Islands.

The Belcher Islands, a group some eighty miles off the southeast coast of Hudson Bay, long charted but little known, were visited in September last by an exploring party on the Newfoundland schooner Laddie. Members of the party have just arrived home. Although the islands were sighted by Capt. Cook 150 years ago, and by other explorers since, it is declared that the members of the Laddie expedition were the first white men to land there. The islands, which lie in latitude 56 north, were found to be in a somewhat different position and in greater numbers than marked on the latest charts. In its fifteen days' exploration of the group the party found it to be barren, but abound in wild life, including foxes, arctic hares and geese.

To Stimulate Production.

The Government is planning an active campaign to stimulate agricultural production of all kinds in 1915. Hon. Martin Burrell is arranging for a series of conferences throughout the Dominion in January and February, at which the farmers of the various districts will be called together and given full information as to conditions in Europe, and the great demand for food supplies by the allies while the war is on. The best means of meeting those demands will be fully discussed by the farmers and those who address them.

Sauerkraut Unsalable.

A firm in Campbellford, Ont., which, as a result of the war, has 650 barrels of sauerkraut on their hands that it has been unable to dispose of, sought the assistance of the Department of Trade and Commerce. The Department sent notices to some of the trade agents abroad. The only reply yet to hand is from the agent at Bristol, who reports "no demand for sauerkraut in that district."

THE LAST RAID

Talk of German Invasion Recalls the Fenian Fiasco

Rumors of a German invasion of Canada by way of the United States recalls the Fenian raids of nearly a half century ago, 1866 and 1870, and the enforcement by the United States at that time of the neutrality laws.

Fort Erie was captured on June 1, 1866, after a short and picturesque but not very desperate battle. The Fenians quickly relinquished it and returned across the Niagara river to Buffalo. The Canadian frontier was crossed from St. Albans, Vt., on June 7, 1866. There was a short battle, and the Fenians, after a temporary success, were forced back into Vermont. Again, on May 26, 1870, the Fenians invaded Canada from St. Albans.

The Fenian campaign was elaborately and skilfully arranged. There were tens of thousands of Irishmen in the United States ready to take up arms and march boldly into Canada, not, they explained, for any sinister designs on the Canadians, but to strike the first solid blow for the liberation of the Emerald Isle. Canada was worried. England was aroused.

Fenians streamed toward the border from a score of American cities and a hundred villages. Guns and supplies were shipped to the boundary. Soldiers who had served through the civil war stood ready to lead. Thousands of privates with the smoke of Chancellorsville, Antietam, and Gettysburg still clinging to their frayed uniforms awaited the bugle call. Wealthy Irishmen in the great cities of the United States opened their purses for the cause.

After hundreds of mass meetings had been held in 1866 in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, and smaller cities and the railroads running toward the border had for weeks been filled with mysterious persons who seemed to have no particular business, there was a bold march on Canada across the Niagara river at Buffalo. Fort Erie was taken. This was in June, 1866. It was a village with about two hundred inhabitants. There were two fights, in which the Fenians were victorious. There were about fifty persons injured altogether and about a dozen fatalities.

Then the Fenians had to retreat because of lack of reinforcements. The United States authorities had held up all persons trying to cross the river. They had put an embargo on all shipments of supplies. The Fenians were being encompassed by Canadian soldiers from Toronto and they were menaced by American soldiers in the rear, who stood waiting to arrest them if they went back and to stop the passage of any reinforcements.

Initial success marked the advance of a Fenian force across the Vermont border from St. Albans, also in June, 1866. But again the inability of the invaders to get supplies or reinforcements undid their best efforts, and they had to retire from Canada.

A force estimated at perhaps three thousand got across the border, and the men fought very well in one skirmish. They had good generals to lead them and many seasoned soldiers in the ranks, but the Canadians easily drove them back, and they retreated in much disorder.

Again in 1870 there was a concerted and formidable move to invade Canada by way of St. Albans. More than 5,000 Fenians gathered at Potsdam, Malone, Ogdensburg, and St. Albans, and with arms concealed and under cover of darkness crossed the border and started triumphantly on a march for Montreal and Toronto.

There was a fight near Pigeon Hill, after which the Fenians became demoralized. They could not keep themselves supplied with food and ammunition, partly through lack of management and partly because of the action of the United States Government following a proclamation by President U. S. Grant warning citizens of the republic against aiding the raiders and ordering the American authorities to stop the Fenians' "unlawful proceedings."

As soon as the Canadians began to gather in force the Fenians fled over the border and this was the last of the raids.

Brothers.

A story that is causing considerable amusement comes from Salisbury Plain from a soldier to his mother in Toronto. The two principals in the anecdote are Lieut. Gerald Warner, of the 100th Grenadiers of Winnipeg, and Signaller R. Lindsay Warner, of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Brigade, of the 1st Canadian Contingent, who wrote the letter, Mrs. J. B. Warner, of Toronto, the mother of both soldiers, received the letter, and tells the story.

Signaller Warner received three days' leave of absence from Salisbury and having not seen London before, decided to spend his time there. Soon he found himself among the jostling crowds of Piccadilly Circus, and on all sides he was greeted with words of welcome. Quite suddenly, over the heads of the crowd he espied the khaki hat of a Canadian soldier.

Keeping his eye on the hat he drew slowly nearer, and suddenly, and to his very great surprise he found himself face to face with his brother—the superior officer, Lieut. Warner, of Winnipeg. Grinning, his hand flew to the salute, which was quickly returned by the officer.

"Enjoying London?" queried the officer.

"Yes, sir!" replied the signaller grinning.

"If you care to see me drop around to the —— hotel," said the officer, his face imperturbable.

"Yes, sir!" again replied the signaller.

The signaller clicked his heels together, saluted gravely, the officer replied, and the two passed on their respective ways.

A LITERARY GLUTTON

The most picturesque figure in the annals of Italian librarianship is undoubtedly Antonio Magliabecchi. While his official position as librarian to Cosmo III., grand duke of Tuscany, gave him considerable prominence, he is remembered more especially for his personal characteristics and his vast store of self acquired learning. He has been described as a literary glutton and the most rational of bibliomaniacs, inasmuch as he read everything he bought. His own library consisted of 40,000 books and 10,000 manuscripts. His house literally overflowed with books. The stairways were lined with them, and they even filled the front porch. In worldly matters Magliabecchi was extremely negligent. He even forgot to draw his salary for over a year, says the North American Review. He wore his clothes until they fell from him and thought it a great waste of time to undress at night, "life being so short and books so plentiful." He welcomed all inquiring scholars provided they did not disturb him while at work.

Perhaps the most extraordinary librarianship was that enjoyed by Diderot, who about 1765 decided to sell his library in order to provide a dowry for his daughter. The Empress Catherine of Russia heard through Grimm of the straits to which Diderot had been reduced and instructed her agent to buy to the library at the owner's valuation. In this way Diderot received not only 16,000 livres, but he was graciously requested to consider himself the librarian of the new purchase at a salary of 1,000 livres a year. Moreover—and this begins to sound like a fairy tale—Diderot was paid the salary for fifty years in advance.

Beginning War.

There was a great difference in the manner of commencing a war centuries ago to what there is now. Now the blow is frequently struck before the word, and there is no obligation to issue a formal declaration at all, the act of war constituting the declaration. But in medieval times no war ever began without a formal declaration by a herald, who in a most leisurely manner breathed defiance on the part of his royal master, exchanged innumerable bows with his enemies and departed in as dignified a manner as he came.—London Chronicle.

Settling Prairies.

Canada's fertile lands are being rapidly taken up by settlers. During the month of September alone no fewer than 1,731 homesteads were taken up, representing a total of nearly 277,000 acres. Considering that 1914 has been what is known as a non-emigrating year, the decrease as compared with September, 1913, is trivial. Many of these settlers not only took up free homesteads, but were in a financial position to augment the same by taking up adjoining lands, so that the total above recorded does not represent the actual amount of land settled during the month. All this means that Canada is rapidly developing her agricultural possibilities, and this in turn must ultimately develop the numerous and varied industrial and other resources of the country which are only waiting to be tapped. For the nine months ending Sept. 30, the total homestead entries for the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia were 19,854, representing the enormous acreage of 3,176,640. The war in Europe has been responsible for a marked "back-to-the-land" movement in Canada and elsewhere, and the records show that city men, and tradesmen in particular are taking part in the movement in greater numbers than ever before.

A PERIOD OF REST.

In the fall of 1914 many dairy cows dried off somewhat earlier than usual on account of scarcity of feed. Others stopped milking because their owners have let them get the habit of putting up their shutters at the same time that the cheese factory boarded up its windows. However long the period of rest may have been, six weeks or four months, cows will soon be ready for business as usual during 1915. Now the point arises, can the period of work be extended? That means careful preparation in a variety of ways.

One item may well be noted by the dairyman who has not yet endeavored to shorten that rest-period. It does not follow that a cow giving 1,200 pounds of milk or so during her first month will give as much during the whole season as the cow that gives only 800 pounds the first month. The first one may go dry in a little over seven months and then settle down to extended repose, while the second cow will be producing for ten months, enabling her owner to take advantage of good prices in fall and winter. Obviously, therefore, correct judgment as to a cow's production is to be based on a knowledge of the total weight for the season, not for the best month or two only, for that period of rest is a very variable factor.

Keeping track of the weight given by each cow is simplified by using the forms supplied free by the government. Write to the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, for samples of the record forms for three days per month, and those for daily weights. It will be still better to take samples as well so as to learn by the test how much fat each cow gives.

ELLIOT'S

Longest Walk In The World

HE CHANGED HIS MIND

By ROSCOE GILMORE STOTT

"Bunt" Wells of the Blue Grass league told me that the longest walk in the world was the trip a batter makes to the players' bench after a strikeout with the bases full. It has been a problem to me for a long time.

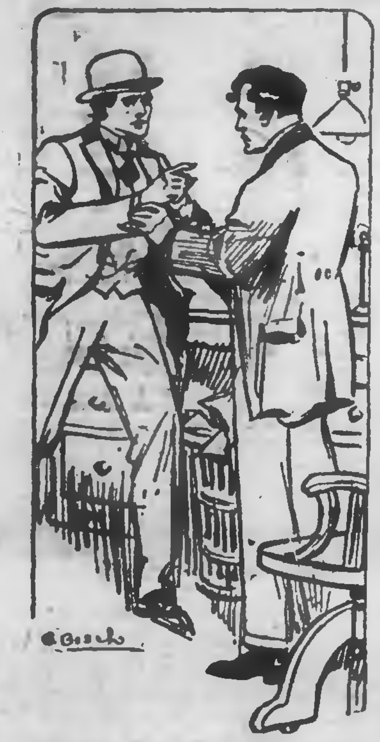
Harry Peggs, the minstrel man, told me it was the space between the "wings" and the center of the stage—when there was an obvious lack in applause.

Little Billy Rice said it was the road home when the boss had decided he had too many clerks, and Billy ought to know.

But Potter gave me the best answer. He said it was all a matter of love. He said—but that's the story.

Potter had never been in love until he was thirty-five. But he had been in everything else.

Potter lost hundreds of hours and dollars at the track. He has been a few dozen times before the justice for speeding in his red, much spattered dashabout.



"OLD MAN, I'M AFRAID THEY'VE GOT ME."

He has pitched ball for an outlaw ball team. He has had two wrecks while learning the flying machine game.

Fifty-four weeks ago Potter slid into Warsaw, Ky. He came on the evening boat from Cincinnati and walked with me up the slope to the hotel. He never stated his business, and I never asked him.

It was Sunday evening in late summer. I was lonesome, or, rather, restless. Not a thing was stirring in the home town. I missed Potter. I didn't see him as much as I used to. Potter had settled down—and probably up too. Potter had even stopped smoking. He wore white negligee shirts instead of pink. He wore the very best straw sailor to be bought in Warsaw, and his ties were either black or white. I think Potter had a half dozen pairs of shoes. They all looked new, and uncommonly narrow to me.

At the doorway of the hotel I met Dan Billman.

"Seen Potter?" I asked.

Dan grinned.

"Church ain't out."

"Church?" A queer conclusion was dawning.

"Sure—church. I reckon you know that your friend Potter is better off at church 'n on the street strolling with you."

Five minutes later Billman poked me humorously in the ribs. There was Potter walking out with the prettiest girl in Warsaw (population 2,000 souls).

Potter was doing other things besides winning Lucy Belle Winters. He had settled down with a hard, dull thud. He had brought his mother from out in Iowa and put her in a comfortable little cottage on the shadiest street in the town. He had disposed of every daredevil notion in his system and had put all his money into the furniture factory which consumes my invaluable time.

I am sure it was over $100,000. He was staying hours in an office building, with the horse races going on less than forty miles away.

So I wasn't surprised in the announcement that the Warsaw Citizen brought to the eager gaze of dozens—Richard J. Potter, our distinguished fellow townsman, was to be pushed for the lower house of the state legislature. He had scarcely been in town a year. But he had done things. I was uncertain. It didn't seem just like my old comrade.

"Old man," he said when I got to him in the evening after supper, "you know I hate politics. I'm beginning to hate any game. Politics is a game, as any fool knows." He eyed me intently. "Old man, you're afraid—ain't it the truth?"

I tried to be square. You see, he'd staked me a dozen times back in the Cincinnati days.

"I'm scared all over. I'm scared, Potter."

He looked more serious. He had hardly expected so much frankness. In a moment I showed him why. Politics and excited men and deals and—his past. I told him I was afraid of them all, the last the most.

"But it's for Miss Lucy Belle, old man—can't you see? I sprouted among the Pennsylvania Dutch and later grew up in Iowa. You know these Kentucky folks. You got to have family. And I have the money, but little of the blue blood. Lucy Belle's folks—well, they're just like other folks. They like me, but—old man, can't you get it? I need the position that a term down at Frankfort would give. I'm not in the game for good."

A week later he rushed into where my men were finishing up a car of handsome desks. He was red and almost frantic in manner.

"Old man, I'm afraid they've got me!" He looked unnatural and haggard. I did not break in, for he was the man with the talk. "They're on the trail of my old life."

A week later the big crash came. Potter's rival had heard the saloon fight stories from the men Dick had whipped. It was nice revenge, and two of them did a remarkably good job. My old friend heard it all, but kept it out of the Citizen.

The hounding grew even more successful every day that passed. And, worse, it was all true—terribly true.

It was the day before the primary. I had been given consent to leave the shop early. It was a last try to stem the tide that was slowly pounding down the character and possible success of Dick Potter.

I went to the usually quiet square. It was talkative and boisterous.

As I reached there Dick met me.

"Tell Bill to hold the Citizen off the press. Tell him I want to make a statement and will pay him twice his price. Run, Jim!"

It may sound high flown and all that, but it's dead true. I say to you that Dick Potter's face, when I saw him five hours later, showed more agony than I think you could crowd in ten faces like mine.

He had never lacked any luxury in life but love. Now the thing he wanted most and needed most had been hounded out of his life. I have seen reckless men with money—you have, too—but not one was like Dick.

I looked at the man five minutes before he said a word, and I could not urge him. Besides, I knew about what was coming.

"Jim," he said slowly and with long pauses between some of the words. "I can tell what the longest walk in the world is—it's to be within the gates of heaven and then to turn around and walk back."

He dropped his head in his hands, and for just a little minute his voice broke. Gradually he got the old control and looked up.

"Jim," he went on slowly, "tomorrow the Citizen is going to print my withdrawal and a complete story of my old life. I say all my old life. I wrote it, and it's all there." The hint of a smile touched his lips. "I told twice what that scorpion told 'em. I wanted to beat him some way, and I knew more than he did." I took a chair and slid it over near his. "But I wanted her to know it from my own lips—as a man would act—and I told her everything I knew about Dick Potter. It was pretty nasty in parts, and it took nearly four hours. Then I released her from her promise to me, and I tried the longest walk in the world. It starts at old man Winters' front gate and ends"—he looked about his new, handsome quarters—"here."

I was saying something—oh, some small thing about a beginning all over or something like that. I don't think he heard a word. His telephone bell rang, and he didn't rise to answer. So I slid out into the other room and took down the receiver.

It was Lucy Belle. I knew the voice. I called to Dick, but he didn't move. Then I made some silly excuse and ran to Potter. I told him it was Lucy Belle and what it might mean, but he wouldn't move. He said he couldn't stand anything more. I rushed back to the telephone and told Miss Lucy he was sick.

But she knew Dick, and she begged me to get him to talk to her, just for a moment. By that time I had got to be so much of a liar that I thought I could stand another little disgrace, and I told Dick she was sick and needed him for something.

It worked. Dick was there in no time. He wanted to help.

I was rambling through some of his new books when he came back to me. Honestly I thought he had gone mad. His white face was flaming red. His movements were alert, and his eyes blazed. He couldn't talk nearly fast enough.

"'Dick, Dick,' she says, 'I want to help you fight—all the way up!' she says. She's thought it all through, and she believes in me. And she says she needs me. She says it takes anybody to be a politician, but heroes tell the truth. She"—

The poor fellow, in a half sobbing frenzy, broke off to straighten himself for a journey back to her home. I helped a bit myself, and you'd have thought he was a fire horse. I have never seen a man in so big a rush in my whole life. In five minutes he looked pretty decent, and he caught hold of my hand with a half wild sort of laugh. At the door he looked back for a second.

"Jim," he said, hardly taking time for the words—"Jim, I was wrong. The longest walk in the world is getting back into heaven out of—here!"

3,000,000 Years Old

Perhaps the most remarkable collection of mammoth fossils ever taken from one place is that secured by Barnum Brown, of the American Museum, who has just finished operations in Red River Canyon, Alberta.

"The cliffs in which the fossils were exposed were 300 feet high," said Mr. Brown. "The fossil bed lies in the heart of the greatest wheat and oat fields on the continent. The eight complete skeletons represent seven generations of dinosaurs, of which two were carnivorous and the remainder herbivorous, or vegetarians.

"The fossils were found in the Belly River formation, and are estimated to have lived 3,000,000 years ago. This formation is much earlier than the 'lance cretaceous,' at which time the entire group of dinosaurs became extincts. One skeleton is the first one found in the genus Ornithomius, about eight feet long and about five feet high.

"We got a complete skeleton of the carnivorous dinosaur named Deinoder Horridus. He was about twenty-five feet long and fifteen feet high. Another complete skeleton is of the herbivorous dinosaur, Corythosaurus Casuarius, about thirty-five feet long and fifteen feet high.

"The complete Ankylosaurus Magniventris was a big, plated fellow, the most remarkable in structure of all of the groups of the dinosaurs. He was the living dreadnought of cretaceous times. He was approximately six feet high at the shoulders and eighteen feet long. The entire body was plated, the back with huge plates, and the belly with smaller plates, close-fitting, similar to ancient armor."

The One Universal Language.

The one universal language is not Esperanto but music. Everywhere the same musical score is played. The masters of different countries may have characteristic national qualities, but music lovers everywhere find delight in a composition it matters not from what land or clime the composer hails. Whether played in Germany or Italy or France or at home, your favorite music sounds the same.—Leslie's.

Head-Hunters to Christians.

Some 40 years ago, when a British admiral cruising in northern waters anchored off the Indian town of Masset, on Graham island, B.C., a chief drove his war canoe alongside the man-of-war. A covering which concealed some object in one end of the canoe aroused the admiral's curiosity and he questioned the man about it. With pride the chief lifted the covering, revealing a heap of the gory heads of his enemies!

Recently the bishop visited the home of this man's son and found a Christian family, who entertained him in their home with every evidence of comfort and refinement. Every native in the place is an enthusiastic Christian. Their place of worship, which holds 300, is well filled at every service, and at least three of the number are able to take charge of the service and preach.

LEGALLY DEAD

By JOHN Y. LARNED

I once asked my friend Jenkins, a criminal lawyer, if there were not peculiar secrets locked up in the breast of a man of his profession, whereupon he told me the following story:

"If I hadn't been a criminal lawyer I think I should have been a detective. Criminals never interested me especially, and I never had much sympathy with them. But here and there comes up a person about whom circumstances reveal what is hard to break through. You have heard the fable of the lion in the net released by the gnawing of a mouse. Well, in such cases it is fascinating to be the mouse.

"Not that I'm going to tell you a story about getting off a person accused of crime by one of those ingenious methods we read of in detective stories. I'm going to give you a case where a man whom I believed to be guilty was condemned for murder, and I discovered that he was innocent too shortly before his death day to warrant my reopening the case in a legal way.

"A murder was committed. The murderer not only fled, but left articles by which he was known. He made good his flight and was not heard from in three years; then he or a man who was his double deliberately walked into the town where the murder had been committed. Being met on the street by one of those who had been long looking for him, he was greeted with the words:

"'For heaven's sake, Collins, what did you come back here for?'

"'Collins! That's not my name!'

"No reply was made to this. A pair of handcuffs was slipped on the stranger's wrists, and he was lodged in jail.

"I was the man who drew up the case against Nathan Collins for the state.

"The accused was an Englishman and claimed that his name was Langdon. He admitted that he had been wild and had been disowned by his family. But when his attorney asked him to call upon his family for identification he said that he would take his chances of proving it without their assistance, adding that he had been away from them so long that he doubted if they would all swear that he was their kinsman.

"I had no difficulty in securing his conviction, and he was as much surprised at it as I would have been had he been acquitted. I was somewhat staggered at his first remark after his conviction. It was:

"'Well, here's a pretty kettle of fish!'

"That didn't sound like a guilty man. It seemed to me rather the remark of one who had got into a bad scrape and had begun to realize his position.

"It seems singular to me looking back at the case, that no further effort was made to prove that he was what he claimed to be. He said that it would be useless to apply to his family, for they would expect anything of him, even murder. Another reason was that he had a cousin who would be heir to his father's estate at his father's death were it not for the black sheep of the family. At any rate nothing was done to save him. The truth is no one was interested in him, and he seemed to have been stunned by his position.

"The night before the morning appointed for the execution Jim Wilkins, the condemned man's attorney, came to me with a letter postmarked Manchester, England, and addressed to Sir Charles Langdon. It had been sent to the British consul general. How he came to forward it we did not know. Jim and I looked at each other with eyes wide open.

"'I wonder if a mistake has been made!' said Jim nervously.

"'It's possible,' I replied.

"Well, we took the letter to Langdon, who as soon as he looked at it said: 'Dad's gone and Ralph's gone, and that rascal George must be knocked out or that letter would never have got to me.'

"He opened the letter, read it and showed it to us. It was an announcement that by the death of his father and brother he had succeeded to the title and estate.

"Here was proof of a man's identity who was to be executed within a few hours. Jim and I called up the governor by 'phone, but couldn't get him. What was to be done? The sheriff was on hand, and we called him in for consultation. Rather than execute an innocent man, he agreed that if we would stop the mouths of the necessary witnesses to the execution with money he would execute a dummy and turn the live body of the prisoner over to us. Sir Charles said he was rich. So Jim and I advanced the funds. There were only five persons to grease, and they all knew the reason why they were greased.

"Sir Charles Langdon went to England, legally dead in America, and I believe became a steady country gentleman and much respected."

After the finishing of the story I asked my friend, the lawyer, if that experience did not make him more cautious in prosecuting criminals. His reply was that a state attorney is employed to convict and a prisoner's counsel is employed to acquit. The trial is a legal battle as between two generals, who are not expected to inquire into the justice of the cause they serve. The victory is usually with the heavy artillery, or the preponderating evidence, and is determined by the jury. The lawyers have nothing to do but fight.

"CAMEL'S HAIR" BRUSHES.

The Very Best of Them Are Made From Squirrels' Tails.

It may sound rather strange, but it is nevertheless true that no brushes are ever made of camel's hair, yet they are asked for daily and sold as such.

There are very many kinds of hair used in the making of "camel's hair" brushes, such as bear, fox, rabbit, squirrel, etc., and, indeed, one authority states that over 150 sorts of brushes are known as "camel's hair" brushes, but there is only one definition accepted by the British board of trade—i. e., "camel's hair" brushes made from squirrel tails, these being the best and most expensive.

Real camel's hair is absolutely useless for making brushes and resembles soft tow of a yellow-brownish color. The mane of a camel is the only part which could be used, and possibly a dozen brushes could be made from one mane.

As a matter of fact, there are only two specimens of brushes made from the actual hair of a camel in existence. The reason for the term "camel's hair" is the fact that a man named Camel was the first one to make these finer kinds of brushes, and they became generally known as "real camel's hair brushes."—London Answers.

To Make Business a Science

The science of selling offers a great field for study for the department of commerce and for the many business schools which are springing up in our colleges. Commerce is not mere money getting; it is a science, as banking and law and medicine are sciences. It should be studied as such, for with such study comes not only greater efficiency, but a higher standard of ethics as well. There is no more pressing public service to be done than the discovery of the best ways of reducing the cost of distribution and of elevating business to the standards of a profession.—World's Work.

PETES WENT STRONG ON THE WAY HOME

Picton Held Locals to Tie for Two Periods But Trailed Behind in Final Session --- Four Goal Lead for Return Game

Bring on Brampton. The Peterborough Intermediates practally copped the honors of Group One last night when they took the Picton Pirates into camp by a score of 7-3. With a four goal lead they should have little difficulty in holding it in Picton on Wednesday. Maybe Clarance Morgan's team didn't make the Petes extend themselves. At the close of the first frame the score was tied, one each. Twenty minutes later and again a tie with three all. The last stanza however and "it was all Petes." Four goals were notched in the final frame and the 2,500 fans went home with a smile.

The game was not what one would call first-class hockey. In the first two sessions very little team play was evident and the pace never reached any dangerous velocity but the final twenty minutes were filled with more real speed and real hockey than has been witnessed on local ice in some time. Every one even the goalers had a hand in "spectacular doings" in the last stanza. The ice was keen all the way through and Oscar Berihardt of Brampton, the former Preston man, gave the crowd his best.

The Petes' aggregation did not look any too strong on paper yet when they hit their stride in the last period the crowd began to think they would do. Spratt was absent as was Joe Moinse, whose frozen toes are still tender. Knapman, the Junior, was on right wing and kept up the Intermediate pace well. Kelly although checking Hudgins, a real speed artist, handed out a grand assortment of hockey. Halpin at rover also played well particularly in the last twenty minutes. Maurice Park did not go strong for the fore part of the fray but easily made up for it in the latter part.

Jack Pethick played the best game since coming to Peterborough. He was aggressive every minute of the hour and his work materially assisted in securing the four goal lead. "Ack" Hunter went strong in the final period and "Skid" Janes likewise was brilliant in the same stanza. Two of the three shots which beat Janes were long ones.

Scott the goaler for Picton put up an excellent and clever exhibition in the nets. He kicked out a million. Hubbs and Heffernan the defence players were both a big help in the first two periods but their good work fell off in the last twenty minutes. Hudgins and Bert Burns on the wings were prominent all the time while the centre ice men, Taft and R. Burns, showed dashes occasionally that looked dangerous. Both have a habit of humming "I Want to Linger" and as a result caused many offsides. They both served penalties for loafing.

In the second period Scott chopped Knapman over the leg and was banished. Hudgins, the wing man, who played goal for the Picton Juniors last season, went in the nets and for three minutes he turned off a great many which were stamped goals. One beat him. If Hudgins is that good without pads we'd like to see him rigged up with the customary accoutrement.

The teams:—

PICTON PLAYERS STILL WITH US

The heavy snow storm has so completely demoralised the railway service that the Picton hockey team could not get a train home today and they have been compelled to remain over. It is just probable that the Pirates will accompany the Petes on the excursion to Picton tomorrow. Trainer Walter Knox is very anxious to have the Picton seven enjoy a long session in the land of dreams tonight and then be prepared to hop high tomorrow evening. The four goal lead is a big one but as Hubbs, their speedy defence man, remarked this morning, "Four can be notched in a very short time.'

The Picton players are unanimous in the opinion that Peterborough has a great team and will take a lot of beating. The visitors are also well pleased with the manner in which Peterborough treats visiting teams.

The Most Expensive Sport.

"The most expensive sport of all," said Lord Wimborne on one occasion, "is not polo, but yachting."

He smiled and added:

EXCURSION TO PICTON

Couple of Hundred Fans Will Accompany the Petes

A hockey excursion carrying a couple of hundred fans will accompany the Petes to Picton tomorrow. The train will leave the C. P. R. depot at two o'clock in the afternoon and will go via C. P. R. to Central Ontario Junction and then via the C. O. to Clarence Morgan's villa. The four-goal lead should easily enable the Blue and White to cop the honors of this district. The team will line up as follows:

Goal—Janes.
R. Defence—Hunter.
L. Defence—Pethick.
Rover—Halpin.
Centre—Park.
R. Wing—Rose or Knapman.
L. Wing—Kelly.

COMMENT

As You Like it

The fans in Stirling are the right kind of fans. They are behind the hockey team first, last and always. Lynn, the captain of the Stirling Trent Valley League team was employed in a bank and was moved to Toronto. The people at Stirling voiced objections but to no avail. A petition was drawn up and signed by everyone. Every man who put his John Henry on the paper threatened to transfer his account if Lynn was not brought back. The result was the speedy captain of Bill Whitty's aggregation was ordered home again and will play for Stirling against Madoc, in Madoc tonight. Truly the fans in Stirling are loyal.

LOU MARSH was down from Toronto for last night's game and acted in the capacity of penalty timer. Lou came in at noon and when he found Oscar Bernhardt would be late in arriving he appointed all the officials and "Bernie" had nothing to do but don the blades and hop on the ice. That old co-operation is the pep.

THE SCORE last evening should have been 8-3 in favor of the Petes. Kelly registered in the second frame but the goal umpire failed to raise his hand. Manager Clarence Morgan of the Pirates stated afterwards that it was a goal alright. It is not at all probable that the Picton man failed to raise his hand through poor sportsmanship. He apparently committed an error of omission. However the Petes were quite within their rights in asking for his removal.

PICTON THOUGHT there was nothing to it with Spratt and Moinse off.

WALTER KNOX had his men in perfect condition but they lacked the "punch."

IN EVERY PERIOD the timers, Kennealley of Peterborough and Burns of Picton disagreed. It does not tend to help the game to have disputes in the officials' box. They should as far as possible be eliminated.

CLARENCE MORGAN'S farewell was "We'll be playing Brampton, wait and see." This waiting with the first of February having gone by does not appeal to us.

NEILL-SHEPPARD TROPHY HELD BY GOOD MARGIN

Peterborough Curlers Had Margin of Twenty-two Shots on Round — Bobcaygeon Get Eleven Point Lead in Fitzgerald-Bottum Competition — Local Bonspiel Underway

By the substantial margin of twenty-two shots, the much coveted Neill-Sheppard trophy becomes the property of the Peterborough Curling Club for the year 1915.

The final stages of the competition were witnessed last night when four rinks from Orillia arrived here at eleven o'clock to strive and overcome a lead of six shots which the home curlers had run up in Orillia on Friday last week. But their hopes were dashed and when the games were over this morning shortly after two-thirty, the locals had a nice majority of sixteen points, which added to the other six, totalled twenty-two on the round. There was great rejoicing in the home camp, mingled with the best of feeling when the results were made known and at a little spread to which all sat down later, there was much good-natured chaff to and fro.

Bobcaygeon played three rinks of local curlers last night on the first round for the Fitzgerald-Bottum trophy. Owing to the lateness of the hour one of the rinks competing for this trophy had to carry their game over till this morning.

The personnel of the Peterborough-Orillia rinks last night was:

'Caygeon Leads by 11.

Bobcaygeon is making a strong bid and at the end of the first round which was completed this morning, they were 11 points up. Bobcaygeon brought down four rinks, among them Mr. A. E. Bottum, the veteran curler, and his son. The round was started late last night, but there being an extra rink, which could not be accommodated with ice, necessitated carrying it over until this morning. Bobcaygon kept up their good luck this morning by making it five more, when R. B. Nicholls skipped his rink to victory with five shots up. He was opposed by R. Harstone. The return round will be played in Bobcaygeon shortly.

DRAW FOR BONSPIEL.

At two o'clock this afternoon the first draw for the 1915 Peterborough open bonspiel took place amid scenes of marked enthusiasm. Curlers from over the entire district commenced to invade the club quarters around the noon hour, most of the trains which brought them being late. "Brithers of the broom" met once more and usual hilarity and good cheer pervaded the local camp. Business men have knocked off work for the day on the principle that the Peterborough bonspiel is of more importance than business. Many of the visitors were given their dinner right at the club rooms, the catering being done by Hooper and Sons. Owing to the confusion and the inability to secure the names of the visitors the committee had not compiled a complete list, but it will be published tomorrow.

The first draw resulted as follows:

Morrow vs. Davis.
Matthews vs. Campbell.
Moore vs. Fitzgerald.
Broad vs. Sinclair.
Stewart vs. McCamus.
Farewell vs. Needler.
Bottum vs. Nicholl.

The second draw was scheduled to commence at 4.30 sharp.

Any followers of curling are cordially invited to visit the rink to witness the games.

Athletic Newsies in Greece

Imagine Canadian boys assembling in relay teams to deliver newspapers! At Kalamata, in Greece, this is the method that obtains for delivering morning newspapers. The main square in Kalamata, where the newspapers are sold, is a full half mile from the railway station. Keen rivalry exists between the carriers of the various papers, and from the moment the train arrives there is a great contest to be the first to place the papers on the stands at the square. Relay teams of newsies have been organized, and these accomplish the delivery of papers in a little more than two minutes, each member racing with a bundle of papers a short distance and then passing his burden into the hands of the next runner. The race is the subject of much interest among the townspeople, who like the spirit of the boys.

An ounce of alum, put in a pint of boiling water and allowed to cool and bottled for use at any time, will remove all stains and tarnish from brass and will not injure the skin on the hands or the metal itself. It only requires to be rubbed on the surface and wiped off.

Jack—Talk about trials and tribulations! I was having a fine time in kindred pursuits and I had to come back to college.

Jill—Kindred pursuits! What do you mean?

Jack—Oh, fussing my pretty cousins.

The late Peter Downham, in whose memory the presentation was made, was for many years a respected citizen of Peterborough. Two great uncles of Mrs. Downham also took an active part in battles which now form part of England's history. One of these was Adjutant Colonel Wolff, an Austrian. When on a visit to Quebec some time ago, Mrs. Downham heard very much of several volunteers from Peterborough, among them being Harold Matthews, the Ackerman brothers, and a son of Mr. R. J. Kidd, Benson avenue, who was with a mounted corps from the West. The presentation of the flag is in honor of the lads from Peterborough who enlisted.

CABINET OF SILVER THE GIFT TO REV. F. J. SAWERS

Leaves Tomorrow to Assume His New Duties at Cobourg

Rev. F. J. Sawers, rector of St. Luke's Church, received a handsome cabinet of sterling silver last night from his congregation, accompanied by an address, in which feeling reference was made to his departure. Mr. Sawers leaves tomorrow for Cobourg, after nearly four years as rector of St. Luke's.

The congregation turned out largely last night to say farewell. Mr. R. B. Rogers occupied the chair, and referred to the loss the parish would sustain in the departure of Mr. Sawers. Mr. E. A. Peck, ex-M.L.A., read the following address:

To Rev. F. J. Sawers, M. A.,
Rector of St. Luke's Church,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Sawers:

The congregation of St. Luke's Church wishes this evening to convey to you something of the feeling with which it views your departure for another and more important work and a wider field of usefulness. True it is, men grow to meet responsibility, and in so doing carry willingly the burden imposed. That you will be entirely adequate, both in a personal sense and as willingly assume the greater cares incidental in your advancement, we are quite assured.

You came to us, and during your incumbency have met every wish that we put forward and every call that we could have suggested made on your time and attention. You have been most worthily rector, comrade, friend, and confidant. Your sympathy has ever been entrusted and appreciated. You have generously given of time and means that nothing might be left undone by the rector that would make for further prosperity and advancement of the church and congregation.

Four years have passed very quickly, all too short for you, never too long for us. Your zeal we have remarked, your assiduous attention to detail has been noticed, while the larger and broader things appertaining to the church have been skilfully administered. The congregation has grown, our borders enlarged, and unity and concord are a marked feature of intercourse between rector and people.

We know that you will carry to your new field just those qualities of mind and heart that will presently draw to you the generous commendation, as deserved as it will be a recognition. We look to see you make advancement in the affairs of the Anglican Church, and in years to come grow to be one of those whose work and administration are such as the church will rely on for advice and counsel.

The several societies and organizations within St. Luke's all bear testimony to your helping hand. Not only has the church as a whole made substantial progress, but each interest has been guided and strengthened so as to become a source of support and help in carrying on the work. The Sunday school will in you lose a friend and adviser, and one ever energetic in this work.

Not only in the church, but outside, you will sever relations of large moment. No man who comes into a community and contents himself with the duties of his profession or occupation is a true citizen. Only those who do a distinct service to and for the public may be so named. You have been a citizen of the city, ever ready to help in all good movements, to assist by advice, counsel and active work. For this you will be gratefully remembered by the community at large, while the recollection of your association with the congregation will ever be a green and pleasant memory.

And we ask, reverend sir, that you accept on behalf of the congregation this cabinet of sterling silver, as a gift from your friends and people, who part with you most reluctantly but know that the parish of Cobourg is to be congratulated, while that of St. Luke's has lost a true friend, a most efficient and capable rector and sincere Christian gentleman.

Signed on behalf of the congregation:

GEO. CURTIS.
S. GASKINS.
Church Wardens.

The rector replied at some length, after expressing appreciation of his congregation's thoughtfulness. He reviewed the many happy associations that had been formed, and while regretting the circumstances that required him to say adieu, he nevertheless felt it was his duty.

The singing of Auld Lang Syne wound up the gathering.

FLOUR FOR THE NEEDY BELGIANS

Five hundreds dollars was invested in flour in Peterborough last week, destined to aid the starving and destitute Belgians. The organization who spent the money was the Board of Trade, and the money represented the sum total of funds collected by the board for just such a purpose.

President Basil Hall informed a Review reporter that he had taken up the matter of investing the money in flour with the officials who are at the head of the Canadian Belgian relief operations, who instructed him to purchase flour instead of forwarding the money. By doing so it meant the keeping of the money in Peterborough, and the benefiting of the company from whom it was purchased, not to mention the free advertising said company will derive thereby from the labels on the bags.

The flour will be shipped this week.

After the War.

Canada is anticipating a largely increased immigration after the war. This is not unreasonable. The resumption of peace will find thousands of men seeking new avenues of employment. A new and young country, such as Canada, with its abundant opportunities for the mass of resources and energy, will offer a tempting field for the emigrant. Canada's remoteness from the field of conflict will to some prove an additional magnet. If Canada to-day, in common with the whole world, is suffering from the effects of war, no other country stands to benefit so greatly or to recover so readily as does the Dominion. More than ever before, Canada will stand out in the eyes of the world as "the land of promise." She is a young and fruitful country, with illimitable resources only awaiting development. —London People.

Antiquty of Gloves

When did people first wear gloves? It is impossible to say. We do know however, that the practice dates back very far into history. In some of the Roman bas reliefs, for instance, certain persons are represented with gloves in their hands or attached to their sides. The Greeks used gloves not for display, but for fist fights. Both the Greeks and the Romans wore a certain kind of mitten for manual labor, notably for the picking of olives. Again, we may assume that the wearing of gloves was brought to Greece and Rome from the Orient, for we read in the Old Testament of a commercial custom of the Hebrews where gloves played an important part as folows: "A man removes his glove and gives it to his neighbor, which constitutes a testimony of exchange or purchase in Israel."

Man has used the glove, then, in some way or another for at least 2,000 years. The use was not popular, however, until the sixth century. At that time all the natives of Gaul, either for dress or for work, appear to have worn gloves that were called "ouants" or "wants."

In the middle ages gloves were adapted to a great variety of necessities. A distinction was then made between the ordinary glove, the military glove, the lad's glove, the glove of nobility and the glove of the liturgy. About the thirteenth century gloves came to be considered an expression of elegance. A little later they symbolized bribery and intrigue. For evidence of this fact we have only to study the work of some of the stone artists who decorated with statues the facade of the cathedral of Basle, represented the "seducteur" as the prince of evil. The wicked one is depicted wearing a crown, smiling bewitchingly, left hand neatly gloved and holding in the same hand the unused glove of the right.

But in spite of the fact that gloves seem to have acquired a bad significance, they soon developed into an object of luxury and remained so for a long period of time. Their use became limited to the rich, and it was not until the eighteenth century that it was considered good taste to put on gloves for all occasions. Since then the practice has greatly increased. Whether for show, for convenience, or simply to protect one's hands from the cold, gloves are now worn by all classes of society.

To Make Magic Milk.

Lime water is quite transparent and clear as common spring water, but if we breathe or blow into it the bright liquid becomes opalescent and as white as milk. The best way to try this simple experiment is to put some powdered quicklime into a bottle full of cold water, shake them well together now and then for a day; then allow the bottle to remain quiet till the next day, when the clear lime water may be poured off from the sediment. Now fill a glass or tumbler with the lime water thus made and blow through the liquid with a glass tube or a clean straw, and in the course of a minute or so, as the magicians say, "the water will be turned into milk."

The Home of Easter.

Jerusalem is the only city in the world which, laying aside all else, gives itself unreservedly to reproducing in song, story and symbol the Bible events of the Passion Week. From the early morning procession of Palm Sunday till the midnight gloom of Good Friday the crowds walk solemnly to Bethany, up and down the Mount of Olives, to the Garden of Gethsemane and along the Via Dolorosa, with tearful faces, subdued voices, visiting the churches, draped in black, amid the ceaseless tolling of bells, until the very atmosphere seems heavy with sorrow and throbbing with prayer.

Making It Plain.

"I wish I could have a little brother like Jimmie has!" sighed a small boy to his mother.

"Why don't you pray for one?" was the mother's pertinent suggestion.

That night at bedtime: "Please God, send me a little brother!" was added to the ordinary petitions, and the child tumbled into bed well satisfied. Suddenly he sat up straight, however, and, to his mother's startled amazement, added this hasty postscript:

"Hello again, God! No girls!"

QUALIFICATIONS OF THE CITY ENGINEER

The city engineer's qualification having been questioned by Ald. McIntyre at a recent meeting, the council received a communication from Mr. Parsons stating that he had graduated from the University of Michigan and that the question of a diploma had not been raised till he came to Peterborough. It will be remembered that the council heard all about Mr. Parson's qualifications when he was an applicant for the position of city engineer and these were found very satisfactory.

SUCCESSES FOR RUSSIANS IS CONFIRMED

REPORT ON COLLEGIATE

Art Specialist Should be Appointed

CAPABLE TEACHERS

In a lengthy report, Inspector J. E. Wetherell, of the Department of Education, has submitted to the Board his opinion that the local Collegiate Institute had a most capable teaching staff and that a very good tone prevailed throughout the school. Mr. Wetherell visited the school on January 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th. He suggested that some improvements be made in a couple of minor matters of accommodation. The teachers appointed in 1914 were discreetly chosen and should add to the popularity and success of the school. The time had now arrived when the Board should be required to appoint an art specialist in accordance with the requirements of the department. He thought the present arrangement should not be continued beyond June, 1915. He called attention to a serious violation of Regulation 16, regarding physical culture. "The course in drill, calisthenics and gymnastics is obligatory in Collegiate Institutes," is the reading of the regulation. In the Collegiate there were no gymnastics for either girls or boys. The boys took their exercise in the Y. M. C. A., and they received no gymnastic training there, while the girls never entered a gymnasium, and so had no opportunity of enjoying any of the gymnasium exercises recommended. He said that matters were made worse, because the boys do not exercise for the minimum time prescribed. As an illustration, he said the pupils of the first forms, A. B. C. were scheduled to drill from 11.30 a.m. to 12 o'clock noon on Thursday, January 14th. The time occupied in going to the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, in equipping themselves for the exercises, and in the roll call occupied exactly fifteen minutes of the half hour prescribed.

In another portion of his report, Mr. Wetherell says:

"I find that the advisory commercial committee, appointed three years ago, has accomplished nothing whatever, and has ceased to exist by lapse of time."

Thomas H. Stinson, of Lindsay, according to a Provincial Government announcement last evening, becomes county crown attorney and clerk of the peace for Victoria County.

FOE SUFFERS HEAVY LOSSES

German Battalion Destroyed in Mountain Pass

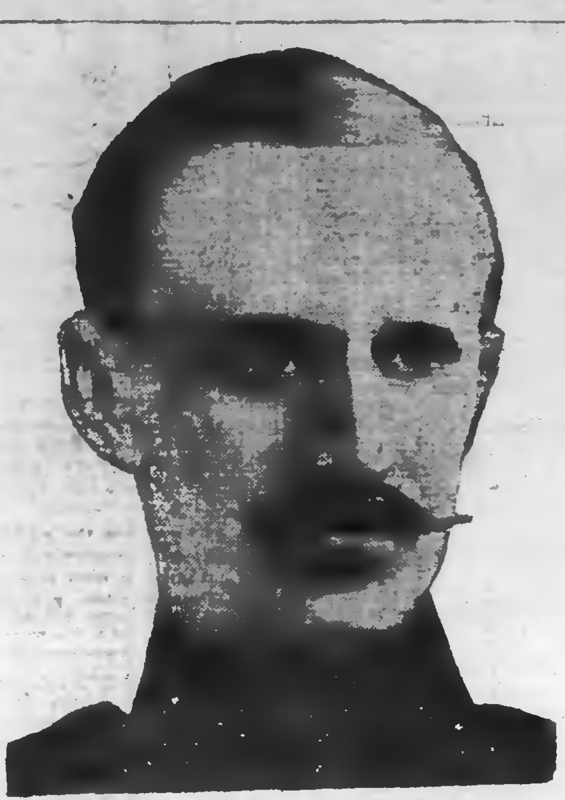
(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 3. — The official statement issued today announces success for Russian arms in the Carpathians and about Warsaw, and gives confirmation to the report that German troops have been sent to the Carpathians to assist the Austrians. The announcement says engagements in the region of Mlawa have continued favorable to our troops. A German attack on Tuesday morning north of Borjimow was repulsed with great losses for the enemy. In a violent combat south of the village of Goumine, we recaptured several trenches taken from us on Sunday. South of the Pilica, near Dounaietz, attempts of the enemy's troops to make progress were without success.

"During Monday and Tuesday our forces advanced, fighting along a broad front at Dukla Pass as far as the lower San, having crossed the principal ridge of the mountain range, in the region fo Jasliska and Mezc Laboros, where we took six cannon, two mortars, a number of quick-firing guns and many prisoners.

"An offensive movement undertaken by the enemy southwest of Uzsok Pass was repulsed with enormous loss.

"On Tuesday southwest of Beskid Pass we destroyed a battalion of the 224th German regiment, a remnant of which, including the battalion commander, we made prisoners."



LIEUT.-COLONEL F. D. FARQUHAR.

Commander of the Princess Patricia Regiment. He has been a lieutenant in the Coldstream Guards, and came to Canada about two years ago to succeed Colonel Lowther as military secretary to the Duke of Connaught. He saw active service in South Africa and was on the general staff of the War Office just before coming to Canada.

SOME PROGRESS NEAR PERTHES

Prisoners Taken and Counter Attack Repulsed — Germans Held Back in the Argonne

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 3. —(Official Afternoon Statement): "In the country north of the Oise there is nothing to report. Between the Lys and the Oise, in the secore of Nouvette, west of Lyns, French batteries put an end to a spirited fusilade from the enemy.

The Germans endeavored to float down the River Ancre, some blazing rafts. We were successful, however, in disposing of these floats before they exploded.

"Our artillery has continued to secure excellent results in the valley of the Aisne."

"We have made slight progress, have taken prisoners, and have repulsed a counter-attack to the west of Hill No. 200, near Perthes.

"In the Argonne a second German attack took place yesterday near Baggattelle, at about six o'clock in the evening. This was also repulsed, as had been the attack previously reported.

"The front from the Meuse to the Slough has [illegible] quiet.

"In Alsace we are organizing our forces on the g[illegible]d won by us to the south of Ammertzyviller."

SCHOOL BOARD BACK TO STATE OF TRANQUILITY

Resolution of City Council Dealing With Investigation is Received

Without fireworks of any kind or any particular discussion, the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education passed off smoothly last night, and in consequence the members were able to transact their business with fair dispatch.

There were meaning glances exchanged however when the following lengthy resolution from the city clerk was read:

That whereas the Board of Education has passed two resolutions addressed to the council of the City of Peterborough requesting the council to apply to His Honor Judge Huycke, under section 248 of the Municipal Act, to enquire into the matters referred to in such resolutions.

"And whereas the Board of Education has made application to the council of the City of Peterborough to pass a by-law to borrow $18,000 to pay the amount of the overdraft of the Board of Education.

"Now therefore be it resolved that the council of the corporation of the City of Peterborough hereby request His Honor Judge Huycke, Judge of the County Court of Peterborough, under section 248 of the Municipal Act to enquire into the matters set forth in the two resolutions of the Board of Education, and also enquire into the matter of any member of the Board of Education who has received pecuniary benefits from the Board of Education, and also to enquire into the cause of the overdraft of the Board of Education of some $18,000 and as to whether or not, proper economical methods of business have been adopted by the Board of Education, consistent with good government, in the spending of the $85,000 provided the Board of Education by the Council of the City of Peterborough, for the construction of the East and West Ward schools and the $18,[illegible] overdraft.

[illegible] investigations asked [illegible] Board of Education and ordered by this council to be held by the County Judge, the respective parties interested employ and pay counsel to conduct the said investigations and that this council pay the judge's fees only and any witness fees of any witnesses that the Judge may call.

Yours truly,
S. R. ARMSTRONG,
City Clerk

The communication was given no discussion but was filed with the other correspondeuce.

Communications.

Miss Ferguson was granted leave of absence until Easter without salary and Miss Deane will retain her class until that time.

A communication was received from W. G. Morrow thanking the board for the honor of being reappointed as their representative on the Public Library Board for a further term of three years.

A communication was read from Miss M. M. Cadwell tendering her resignation as teacher of the primary grade in the South Central, owing to illness.

It was decided to authorize the expenditure of $50 for the purchase of books for the library, $100 for scientific equipment, $25 for art equipment, to agree with regulations of the Department of Education.

CHINAMEN IS FOUND DEAD

Was Visiting Friends at Chinese Cafe

Lee Quen, aged 25, was found dead in his bed this morning by friends who went to rouse him about seven o'clock. He was visiting in the city having come from Ottawa about one month ago. He was known to have a weak heart and was considered delicate. He was staying with friends at a local cafe.

Yesterday he frequently complained of feeling in pain, but owing to his condition, no particular notice was taken and he was not given medical attention until last evening when Dr. J. A. Morgan was called in. It was shown that he was in a serious condition. Just when he passed away is unknown, but when friends went to him this morning he was dead. Dr. Morgan was called and Dr. Greer notified but an inquest was considered unnecessary. Lee Quen was born in Canton, China. He had no relatives in this country, and came to Peterborough, for his health, from Ottawa.

He was a member of St. Paul's Sunday school which a class of his countrymen regularly attend.

Funeral arrangements will be completed today.

Lee Quen's death marks the second among the Chinese residents of the city, the first being some years ago when a Chinaman was electrocuted on Hunter Street by touching a live wire in the basement of his premises.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 2.30 from Belleghem's undertaking establishment to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. R. Pogue will be in charge of the service.

Laborers Benefit by the Snow Storm

The heavy fall of the "beautiful" just cost the board of works department about $400. With the present gang of men at work it will take about three days to remove the large banks of snow to be found in every section of the city, and the daily cost of the extra work is about $175. This morning nine teams and sixty-city. He said he wanted to go to afternoon the total number of men working was 78.

VOLUNTEERS FROM GUARDS WERE GUESTS OF HONOR

Thirty-five Men Who Have Enlisted Were Honored at Banquet

"You are the descendants of men who were the followers, and you are the followers yourselves, of the flag that never yet unfolded unless in honor's cause," were words which composed part of an eloquent tribute paid by Col. Miller to the members of the Peterborough Home Guard who have volunteered for the Third Overseas Contingent, at the banquet at the Oriental Hotel last night, given in honor of the volunteers by a large number of the members of the Home Guard. The banquet was a thoroughly enjoyable and long to be remembered function, and the touching remarks and tributes made by the speakers of the evening could not fail to imbue the volunteers to fight the great battle of righteousness, justice and truth in a manner that would bring honor to the city of Peterborough and the Peterborough Home Guard.

When the well-catered repast was completed, Mr. E. F. Mason, who acted as toastmaster, called on the assemblage to stand and respond to a toast to the King by the singing of the National Anthem. Major Layfield, in proposing a toast to the 39th Battalion and 8th Mounted Rifles, said that while the members of the former two contingents had been dear to the hearts of the members of the Peterborough Home Guard, the third contingent was even more so, because from the organization itself some thirty-five members had enlisted. These thirty-five men were sober and healthy, and he, as well as all the other members of the Home Guard, was sure they would do their duty and assist in bringing honors to the third contingent. He then called for the men to rise and drink to the honor of Capt. Spencer, Lieut. Sneath and the rest of the third contingent.

A Great Cause.

Capt. Spencer, in responding, made mention of the great cause for which they were going to fight. It was a holy war for justice, righteousness, truth and charity against the so-called German kultur. It is a battle for either the supremacy of that German kultur or the doctrine of the Man of Galilee. It is not because Canadians are sons of Britain that they should go to assist, but rather because they are men of the same mind and heart.

He assured the officers of the Home Guard that the volunteers from their organization have thus far made good. He urged them to consider that the call is still open, there are still men in the ranks of the Home Guard who could join, and he asked them to look upon it in the right light and join the contingent, thus responding to the call of King and country.

Lieut. Sneath also spoke a few words of appreciation.

The toast to The Volunteers from the Home Guard was ably proposed by Col. Miller. He voiced the general feeling of the local organization when he said that the citizens of Peterborough and fellow-members of the Home Guard expected a great deal from those volunteers. "You are the descendants," he exclaimed, "of men who were followers, and you are the followers yourselves, of the flag that never yet unfolded unless in honor's cause." It was his sincere hope that they would not be sent to any outpost, but rather right to the firing line, to take their place with the real British. Col. Miller cited the old expression that there never was a country beaten by Britain "that wasn't better for the beatin'," and hoped that when the Germans were beaten he would have the pleasure of being on hand to welcome them home.

Sergt. Major Robert Biggs and Sergt. F. Hart replied, both thanking the officers of the Home Guard and the members for their kindness and assuring them they would do their best for the honor of the King, country and Peterborough Home Guards.

Fire Chief Howard proposed the toast of The Old Guard, which was responded to by Col. Bell of Toronto, former commander of the 57th Regiment, and Col. Miller, also a former commander of the local unit. Col. Bell told the men who are leaving to fight Britain's battles that they were facing real hardships, but expressed his assurance that they would stand them "British like."

During the evening the following musical numbers were well received:

TRAIN SERVICE HAS IMPROVED

Majority of Trains Are Running on Time

The railway train service to and from this city, which was completely demoralized yesterday, has been restored and the various trains are running again on schedule time or nearly so. The C.P.R. passenger trains were very late all day yesterday but as the storm abated, the service gradually was improved. The midnights were an hour late as were this morning's trains from the east but the noon train from Toronto was on time.

The G.T.R. found it necessary to cancel the noon train from Toronto yesterday and also one of the trips to Lakefield. Only one train went to Lakefield all day. The nine o'clock train from Lindsay last evening was held very late not reaching Peterborough until midnight. Curlers coming to the local 'spiel from Cannington did not get here till that train arrived. They were held up all day on the Coboconk division. The road the Port Hope was sufficiently broken to permit a freight train to pass through this morning about five o'clock.

The morning train from Belleville which usually arrives at eight o'clock was four hours behind time today. It was preceded by the snow plough. There was no train to Lakefield this morning. All noon trains were running on time.

GERMAN WHO LEFT THIS CITY HAS BEEN INTERNED

He Talked too Much When He Reached Toronto

For publicly boasting he would leave the country whether he received exeat papers or not, a former German resident of Peterborough, Reinhold Buchs, has been interned at Toronto on the order of the Registrar of Alien Enemies.

Buchs was employed at the Henry Hope Company here, and some weeks ago applied to Chief of Police Thompson for permission to leave the five men were put to work, while this Florida. He was informed that he would have to apply at the office of the Registrar of Alien Enemies in Toronto. He evidently did, for a letter which came in Chief Thompson's mail from the Registrar states that he reported there, but was interned on Saturday, January 30th, for boasting that he would leave the country whether he received exeat papers or not.

A blizzard of unusual proportions swept yesterday through Wisconsin, paralyzing traffic of all kinds. The telephone company reports hundreds of poles down.

Early yesterday the residence of Soloman Beck, at Dunnville, was partially wrecked by a gas explosion and set on fire. Miss Beck was badly burned about the head.

SEELY TO COMMAND

Will Head Canadian Cavalry Brigade

LONDON, Feb. 3. — it is learned that Col. the Rt. Hon. J. E. B. Seely, former Secretary of State for War, will take command of a Canadian mounted brigade, including the Strathconas, the Royal Canadian Dragoons and the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, now at Salisbury. Col. Seely has already seen considerable service at the front in France, and his selection to command a Canadian corps is regarded a distinct compliment to the prestige and efficiency of the Canadian troops.

Col. Seely will be with his Majesty King George at the royal inspection of the Canadian troops to-morrow.

COL. J. E. B. SEELY.

OFF TO FRONT

Lieut. Roy Has Orders to Sail for England

Hamilton, Feb. 3.—Another Hamilton officer to receive a commission in the British army is Lieut. R. M. Roy, son of Superintendent Roy of the Hamilton Bridge Works company, who received a cablegram yesterday stating that his name has been placed on the unattached list of officers. Lieut. Roy will depart tomorrow for London, Eng., and does not know as yet with what regiment he will be associated. He is a graduate of the Royal Military College of Kingston.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1915

THE MENACE IN GERMANY.

MORE AND MORE, as information comes out, it seems that Germany is in a greater plight in regard to her food supplies. Broomhall's estimate, as given in the Monetary Times, makes out for European countries a deficiency of wheat for 1914, as compared with 1913, of 357,880,000 bushels, againts a surplus in countries outside of Europe of 124,840,000 bushels, leaving a net deficiency for the whole world of 233,048,000 bushels. Of this, Germany and Austria reflect a considerable proportion.

These two countries, however, use large quantities of rye flour for bread, but the combined figures for wheat and rye show Germany, for the year 1914-15, to be 109,896,000 bushels short, and for Austria-Hungary the supply is 82,428,000 bushels short.

In Vienna the price of wheat was $2.25 a bushel on October 31st of last year, and prices of food products were everywhere rising to such an extent that the government fixed maximum prices for them. According to a notice issued in Austria-Hungary on November 1st, from December 1st onward only war bread was to be baked, the same to contain 70 per cent. of rye or wheat flour and 30 per cent. of maize or potato flour.

In Berlin and Budapest, the price on October 31st of wheat flour per barrel of 200 pounds was from $7.10 to $8.50, and rye ranged from $6.40 to $6.82. At the end of October, the German Government fixed the maximum price of wheat at $1.68, barley at $1.05 to $1.08, and oats from 77 cents to 85 cents.

It should be remembered that prices cannot be fixed by a government with any certainty that they will prevail. The German Government may fix a maximum figure beyond which it would be illegal for prices to go. Such a law means that when demand or scarcity causes the price to go beyond the legal maximum, all legitimate trade in that article ceases. The stoppage of trade in, say wheat, by such a law means that the price HAS gone beyond the point fixed. Those who have supplies will simply refuse to sell. Those who want to buy, who must buy, will surreptitiously offer more than the legal price, and may not be able to buy it then. To overcome such a condition, confiscation by the government is about the only remedy, and the fact that Germany has already done so in some articles shows that the fixation of prices is something beyond the power of her legislature and armies.

While the 1913 crop in Germany was large, the 1914 crop was not, and this will tell most severely on the poor labourers, whose consumption per capita is 17 bushels. In Germany, the per capita consumption is 7.3 bushels, while for the United States it is estimated at 2.6. The recent proclamations in Germany, making all food contraband, and limiting still further the use in consumption of grain supplies, are more evidence pointing to the shortage of food that is threatening the German and Austrian Empires, and a further point is that if this shortage becomes serious, the end of the war would not relieve the distress in those countries very quickly. The longer the war lasts, the more serious becomes the situation of these two countries.

NO SUPPLIES FOR THE GERMANS.

CANADA is not going to let her supplies of food get to Germany if she can prevent it, and to prove that the Borden Government is alive to the situation, the following announcement in the official Canada Gazette is evidence:

> "1. The exportation from Canada of tinned meats and tinned plates to Sweden, Denmark and the Netherlands is prohibited.
>
> 2. The exportation from Canada of tea, clover and grass seeds, motor vehicles of all kinds, and their component parts, to all foreign ports in Europe and on the Mediterranean and Black Seas, other than those of France, Russia (except the Baltic ports), Belgium, Spain and Portugal, is prohibited.
>
> 3. The exportation from Canada of aniline oil, aniline salt, picric acid and its component parts, extracts for use in tanning, explosives of all kinds, valonia, grindery used in the making of boots and shoes; vessels, craft and boats of all kinds, floating docks, and their component parts; also, whale oil, viz.:—train, blubber, sperm or head matter, to all destinations except to the United Kingdom or any British possession, is prohibited."

All these articles are of great importance to Germany. All the food and seed articles are things Germany needs very much, while chemicals necessary in the tanning of leather are vital in the equipment of fresh reserves of troops. In addition to making it harder for Germany to equip and feed her reserve forces, these prohibitions are cutting at Germany's trade and increasing the price of them to Germnay by restricting the supply. As Germany has been driven to import large supplies from neutral countries, like Sweden, Denmark, and Holland, the prohibition extending to these countries is obvious in its import.

THE NEW PROBLEM FOR THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that Germany felt the last blow she received in the North Sea at the hands of Admiral Beatty very keenly. The loss in cruisers to Germany has been so great that she has only four left, and must rely on her dreadnoughts and submarines. But she has decided now on a policy of piracy, of ruthless war on merchant vessels of Britain by means of her submarines. The two merchant vessels recently sunk in the English Channel were torpedoed without warning. This action, while quite contrary to the recognized rules of modern warfare, emphasizes the seriousness of the recent naval defeat Germany received, and of the new danger to British shipping. Britain's war and merchant fleet is still large, however, and the Admiralty will, we believe, find an adequate answer to the new danger that has arisen.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

REV. F. J. SAWERS, M. A., leaves in Peterborough many friends who sincerely regret his departure from St. Luke's Church. The four years he has spent there have been crowned with splendid results. His reputation as a preacher and exponent of the gospel has risen, not only in his own parish, but in others, so that a call to a larger field was sooner or later to be expected. Mr. Sawers carries to his new and larger field of work the wishes of a large number of people in Peterborough for a continuance of the marked success that has attended his efforts in this city.

THE Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway has prepared a plan, which has been submitted to Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, by J. L. Englehart, chairman of the committee, by which the Province of Ontario will advance the sum of $2.00 per cord on pulpwood from the property of bona fide settlers, with a view to helping the Northern Ontario settler out during the present strenuous times. The Hon. Mr. Ferguson has given the plan his hearty approval, and it will go into effect immediately.

HARRY SYMONDS, K. C., was sentenced to five years in the Kingston Penitentiary for fraud in connection with the Union Life case. That men who stood high in the community should be brought to this pass is a great pity. Still, the public must be protected from exploitation, and there must be a restraining power upheld to prevent directors of such corporations taking plunge baths with public savings. Big risks on other people's money are not legal in this country. Another point is that the law is not made for lawyers.

HON. W. J. HANNA, provincial secretary, speaking to a large audience at Broadway Tabernacle, Toronto, said the Provincial Government was clearing 32,000 acres of land in Northern Ontario to assist the unemployed. That is surely a commendable policy. Making the waste places bear fruit by means of such an unfavourable condition as unemployment is turning a bad condition to good account.

WHILE a Hamilton preacher was in his pulpit next door, thieves broke into his house and stole $100 worth of goods, among them being a fifty-dollar ring and ten dollars left under a pillow. When ministers can have money sticking around like that under pillows and things, they should be shown where the savings banks, if any, are located in Hamilton.

THE WAR NEWS in Berlin, Germany, is made up by repeating six times in almost identical sentences, "There is nothing important to report."

Canada's Conception of the Issue.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

It is announced in the despatches that Canada is about to follow up its earlier contributions to the British forces in the field with a fresh contingent of 25,000 men. And this, in all probability, will be followed by many other additions of troops, and perhaps in growing batches, from its training camps, for, above all things, Canada is evidently bent now on doing what it believes to be its full duty by the Mother Country. Canada, we take it, from the tone of its press and its public men, is not going to queston such requisitions as may be made upon its loyalty and its patriotism. But it has entered upon the performance of its duty with no shallow or false conception of the issue involved in the struggle.

Thousands of the Dominion's young men have rushed to the colours; thousands are now hastening to the recruiting stations; neither with these nor with those who are to follow is the incentive trench-fighting, bomb-throwing, home-wrecking, town-destroying, but, as it is often put to them, and as they often put it to themselves, "for a hastening of the end of all these things."

If we catch aright the impulse of the Canadian volunteer, giving up everything that is dear to him on earth save country and honour, he is moved not by a love of war, but by hatred of it, spurred on by a determination to do all that in him lies to put an end to it, by putting an end to the atrocious perversion of worthy human aspiratons and ideals that makes it possible. It is impressive to read of the young men of Canada, conscious of the gravity of their undertaking, regardful of the dignity of their enterprise, going to war by thousands in the hope that a lasting peace may be secured, not only to their own country and to the empire of which it is a part, but to all the world.

The New Soldier's Ordeal.

(London Mirror.)

An old martinet of a sergeant who has not missed his daily shave for twenty years and is now helping to train Kitchener's men, came on to parade the other morning, and, after a comprehensive glance at the men before him, went up to the youngest recruit and asked, "Shaved this morning?" "No, sergeant; I don't need to yet," was the answer. "What!" roared the sergeant. "Remember this, my son; when you join the army, you shave every morning, and if you ain't got nothing to shave, you must go through the motions till you 'ave."

THE POWER ACCOUNT.

Editor Review,

Dear Mr. Editor,—Your article in Monday's issue entitled Stung Again was certainly well named for the city is certainly stung if they consent to pay for power that was never either used or delivered.

The street lights in question are run by transformers and although the current may have been passing through the primary coil of these transformers the drop in the voltage would amount to practically nothing unless the secondary circuit was closed by lighting the lamp.

The drop in voltage passing through all the transformers when not in use would not amount to as much as one lamp would consume when lit.

Such being the case the city as you say has been stung and if we did not have the most implicit faith in the infallible good judgment and business ability of the city fathers chosen as they are by the people from our foremost and most trustworthy business and professional men, noted for their integrity and a shrewd business acumen which assures the citizens that full value will be received for every dollar spent, men who are nobly sacrificing their valuable time and talents for the public good without either thought or intention of benefitting thereby in the slightest degree, were it otherwise or if the same thing could have happened in some other place we might accuse the council of gross ignorance for being so easily gulled, or at least of negligence in not consulting an electrical engineer, an ordinary electrician, a wireman or even some ordinary office boy who had spent a few months working in some electrical store before paying out this small and insignificant sum of the people's hard-earned taxes for value not received. Under the circumstances the only explanation would seem to be that as good people tell us when not caring to admit a difficulty, "that it was done for some good reason which we do not understand."

Yours truly,
ELECTRODE.

GERMANS AT LIBAU CLASSED AS PIRATES

PETROGRAD, Feb. 2.—Acting in conformity with the general spirit of the international conventions in which the rules of warfare are laid down, Russia has decided to treat the bombardment of an unfortified town as an act of piracy, the persons taking part in such acts to be considered pirates regardless of whatever claims they may make that they are entitled to be treated as belligerents.

The dropping of bombs upon Libau, on the Baltic coast of Russia, which long ago ceased to be a fortified place, presents a case in point.

The crew of the dirigible which raided this place are to be dealt with as criminals, without the benefit of the privileges extended to prisoners of war.

To Borrow a Million.

OTTAWA, Feb. 2.—In addition to deciding to sell a million 'dollars' worth of debentures next month, the city council last night also approved of the raising of a loan of a million dollars in the New York market. The loan has been arranged for, according to announcement made by Controller Fisher, the civic "finance minister," and is independent of the debenture sale. The loan is at 5 per cent. It is for the purpose of retiring an overdraft with the city's bankers.

Grey is London Member.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 2. — William Gray was declared elected as member of the House of Commons for the city of London at yesterday's nomination to put up a Conservative candidate, in succession to the late Major Thomas Beattie. No other name was submitted and Mr. Gray will be present at the opening of the House on Thursday next.

WOULD PUNISH THE TEUTONS

Customs Alliance Suggested After the War

LONDON, Feb. 2. — The Daily Chronicle printed an article yesterday by H. G. Wells under the heading "Looking Ahead," He says:

"Sufficient attention has not yet been directed to the systematic wrecking of industrial plants in France, Belgium and Poland. Great areas of industry have been devastated.

"Suppose presently the Germans are driven within their own borders; France gets her lost provinces; Russia unifies Poland and Belgium and Serbia are paid adequate indemnities. Even then, with the war over, Germany, with her far more efficient organization and labor, will soon restore the slight wreckage of her own factories. With our vast markets freely open to the Germans and with our manufacturers in the characteristically British state of mind, and Germany will sail at once into economic victory. She will soon accumulate fresh wealth and energy for another war.

"If we win it will be so; if we fail to achieve a complete victory still more will this situation be emphasized. Just as I see that the pure pathway to world peace lies through the defeat of Germany, so also do I see that the only way to enable Belgium, France and Russia to recover from the deliberate devastation Germany has wrought in those countries is for Britain to form a customs alliance with them, set up a tariff against all German goods and grant to the British colonies and to her allies the preference.

"It is manifest that there must be some Zollverein in which all the allies, trading together practically as free traders, should, in the first place, bar or penalize German efficiency in the markets, and thus continue the present alliance as an economic one. Otherwise their victory in the war will be the most futile of victories."

Canada Grants Indemnity to Duck Hunters

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Under an agreement reached last night, the Canadian Government will settle claims growing out of the recent shooting of two American duck hunters by Canadian militiamen by paying $10,000 to the parents of Walter Smith, who was killed, and $5,000 to Charles Dorsch, who was wounded, in addition to all legal expenses.

The terms of settlement were arranged by Sir Joseph Pope, Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Canada, and Representative Charles B. Smith of New York. The money will be paid to representatives of the families to-day at the British embassy.

The settlement was made entirely outside of the State Department, but it has the Department's approval. Sir Joseph and the British Ambassador recently called at the Department and formally expressed the regret of the Canadian Government on account of the shooting.

Sir Joseph was insistent that no part of the money paid to Smith's family and to Dorsch should fall into the hands of lawyers. Consequently it was agreed all claims for legal services should be paid directly by the Canadian Government.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

Apologizing for having no better place to offer, Matt led the stranger upstairs to his bedroom, where, after lighting the single gas jet, he offered him a chair and himself took a seat on the bed.

"Now, what's your name?" asked Matt, lighting his pipe and throwing out his long legs.

The stranger somewhat stammeringly replied that he might be called Mr. Kay, though whether he meant K-a-y or merely the letter K was left obscure.

"Well, Mr. Kay," continued Matt, "let's get one thing understood right off. I am not a Kanaka king, and I haven't any islands, or money, or subjects, or fleets, or pearling beds or anything. If you have the least misconception of that kind about me the sooner you get rid of it the better."

"You refer doubtless to those newspaper accounts?" inquired the stranger.

Matt nodded.

"Yes, all that rot," he said.

"I'm familiar with them," observed the stranger, drawing up close to the bed. "Perhaps I'm also more familiar with the actual facts than you will credit. Circumstances have forced me to acquaint myself with them—to separate the wheat from the chaff, from a vast deal of chaff," he added unbendingly. "Well, well, now to business." With that he produced from his pocket a small, flat object wrapped in tissue paper. Divesting it of its covering, he passed a little ivory miniature to Matt. "Do you happen to recognise that person?" he asked.

Matt took it with surprise, for it was rimmed with diamonds and backed with gold like an unwieldy brooch—with a surprise that changed to consternation as he beheld the unmistakable face of John Mort. It was a face younger by twenty years than the John Mort he had known, smoother and more rounded and with the hair altogether black; a flattering picture, much too pink and prettified and youthfully handsome for even the original at the age it represented him. But it was John Mort just the same. He could have picked it out of a roomful of miniatures, a whole gallery—John Mort, staring up at him from a circlet of diamonds, with an imperious air that somehow had been caught while all the rest was falsified by the obsequious artist.

Chills ran down Matt's back. It was as though he were detected in a crime. He was thankful for the poor light that must have screened his expression of dismay, for all Mort's warnings were now upon him in a torrent—and his own promises, his own pledged word. Here was what John Mort had feared—"the wolves," he had called them—in a voice he had lowered even there, apprehensive still on that lost reef, in those lost and lonely seas. The heavy lidded eyes took on a new and ominous significance as Matt felt their glance on him. What evil were they meditating? What was their sinister purpose in seeking him out to betray his friend?

He returned the miniature, speaking as he did so with his pipe in his mouth—a subterfuge he had found useful before, especially when under fire—real fire—bullets. It is the mouth that tells secrets, and that in other ways than words. A pipe is a help. It hides agitation and suggests unconcern.

"Well, what about it?" said Matt through his teeth.

"I asked if you recognised him?"

"Seen this person before, do you mean? No, I don't know who he is. Why, do you expect me to?"

The stranger was not at all nonplussed. It was disconcerting how coolly he took the announcement. He carefully replaced the miniature in his pocket, remarking that it was "a pity."

"I've something here that may freshen your recollection," he went on, producing a wallet, and from the wallet a thick roll of notes. Pulling up his chair so close to the bed that his knees touched it, he began to spread greenbacks on the coverlet as though engaged in a singular game of patience. A row of six, another row of six, a third row of six, and Matt, amazed, perceived that they were in denominations of $1,000 each.

"My God!" he cried. "What are you—a mint?"

The stranger, with a gleam of yellow teeth and the first smile he had permitted himself, completed a fourth row from a packet that was yet far from exhausted. Then he stopped and said: "No, not a mint. Merely a person who seeks a little information, and is very willing to pay for it."

Matt eyed the seried notes—$1,000, $1,000, $1,000 in a green and overwhelming profusion; $1,000, $1,000, $1,000 up and down, with more tightly clasped in those stubby fingers. If anything, the sight stimulated all the obstinacy in him, enhancing his loyalty and determination in proportion to the bribe. But it would not do to affect unconcern. It would be bad policy to convey the impression that he could talk if he would. Excited innocence was the part that he ought to play—eager, covetous, astounded innocence.

"Twenty-four thousand dollars!" he exclaimed. "Would you really give me that for recognizing a man? Just for looking at his picture and saying, That's Walter Jones or William Riley? Why, bless you, I'd do it for a quarter of that—for a single one!" He picked up one of the greenbacks as he spoke and smoothed it out lovingly on his knee. "Even that would be enormous," he said. "People aren't paid for that kind of thing."

"They will be in this instance," returned Mr. Kay. "We are desirous of finding—er—Walter Jones and are willing to go to considerable lengths for any information regarding him and his present whereabouts. That money there, Mr. Broughton, is but the half of what I'm authorized to offer you. Think it over a bit, Mr. Broughton. Fifty thousand dollars for five minutes of—sincerity."

"My dear man," observed Matt, "why not make it fifty millions while you are about it? I haven't the faintest notion whom your picture represents—not the slightest, believe me. I wouldn't know him from Adam if he came in this minute."

"Is that your last word?"

"It's all I know, if that's what you mean."

"Oh, come, come! What's the use of denying you could tell if you wanted to? I'm not a child to be hoodwinked. There isn't a visit of yours to Sydney or San Francisco that we haven't traced. You were no trader. You were in the employ of—well—that individual we are seeking. You have to admit it, and, once admitted, we have a basis for negotiations."

Matt puffed at his pipe and finally remarked that it was all Greek to him.

"The ship was Tembinok's," he went on, "old Tembinok's, the king of Apemama, you know, and he sent me off in her originally to buy rifles at something like a white price. But I was honest with him and made her pay, carrying coprah shell and that, and so he kept me on till I lost her this winter."

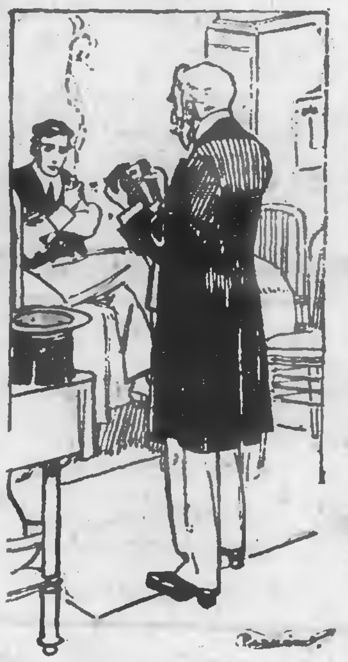
CHAPTER VII.

Mr. Kay Offers More.

MR. KAY gathered up his notes and returned them to his wallet.

"Think it over," he said. "Fifty thousand dollars is a lot to lose. Perhaps it may occur to you that you're acting rather precipitately, for, after all, a man's first duty is to himself, and you scarcely seem to be in—er—very affluent circumstances. If you should care to place a small flag in your window—a tie, for that matter, or any bright bit of color—we shall accept it as a sign that you have—er—changed your mind. Don't forget that, will you? It is quite conceivable that the sum might be increased if we were assured of your active co-operation, but it would be superfluous to go into that at this stage. Just a little flag at your window, and within six hours I shall be promptly at your service."

Matt burst out laughing. "Is that your usual method of communication?" he asked. "But why not a skyrocket while you are about it, or a blue light, and masks, of course—and a password. I'll say 'Walter,' and you answer 'Jones,' or perhaps a single mysterious word, like 'gurgle.' Gurgle's rather good. How do you like gurgle?"



"Fifty thousand dollars is a lot to lose."

The other's face darkened at this derision. When he spoke it was with perceptible humiliation and embarrassment. "I'm only an agent," he murmured. "Such theatrics are none of my making, though in this affair they seem unavoidable. Laugh all you like, Mr. Broughton. A man who has thrown away a fortune for a whim is entitled to, though some day when you're older and learn how hard a world this is it may seem considerably less humorous. Good night," he continued, holding out his hand. "Permit me to apologize for my persistence, and to thank you for your good nature under the infliction. You will let me hear from you, will you not? And remember that the amount might be materially increased. Good night, good night!"

Matt accompanied him down the stairs and to the front door, where, with a renewed grasp of the hand and another cordial farewell, the stranger walked briskly away. It almost looked as though an automobile had been awaiting him, for a second later there was a clash of gears, a flood of blinding light and a magnificent limousine swept headlong into the night.

Matt turned indoors again, eager for his delayed supper and in a state of extreme perplexity and exhilaration. It was not everybody who would have refused $50,000. The fact that he had done so put him in a glow of self esteem. Though why had it been offered—good God, why? And who was John Mort, and what could they possibly want of him? How strange it all was, how insoluble! And, strangest of all, that he, Matt, the obscurest of mortals, should be caught up in anything that could conceivably "shake the world." That was what Mort had said—"it would shake the world." Well, it shouldn't shake if he could help it. He was loyal through and through. The "wolves" were chasing the wrong sleigh if they thought they could get a bite out of him.

The next morning turned out a veritable black Monday. Not only was it raining a sleety, dismal rain—Matt could have endured that—but he was assailed, besides, by a succession of disasters. First of all, there was no letter from Snood & Hargreaves. Somehow he had fully counted on getting it, and the firm's delay in writing began to take on an ominous aspect. With scarcely $60 in his pocket and part of that owing here and there, he felt uncomfortably pressed for money. Then there was Daggancourt, whom he had completely forgotten in the flow of larger events—Daggancourt, effusively expectant of that immediate departure for Kentucky. To make a man weep is a painful experience, and it was in this manner Daggancourt received the news of a second postponement.

"I'd set my foolish old heart on it," he sobbed. "I believed you were in earnest. It's—it's a terrible blow."

"But it's only put off a little while," said Matt. "For heaven's sake, don't think I've given it up, Victor. In fact, it's more of a life and death thing to me now than ever before."

Daggancourt shook his head.

"I was willing to go my last dollar," he said. "I could have worked for you with both hands and starved and stinted—not for the money in it, Marse' Broughton—but because you are you; because it is the colored man's instinct—his curse—to love and serve a master. Say no more, sir. I shall not trouble you again. I am like the Psalmist who put his trust in princes, and verily was he disappointed."

Matt was conscience stricken; he had leaned on Victor; he had found comfort and a sense of safety in the old fellow's rugged affection. It was hard to see it go, and it appeared doubly valuable, now that it was lost. Matt telegraphed to Snood & Hargreaves:

> Please give immediate effect to my letter and remit money for ring by express. Telegraph reply, saying when I may expect to receive it.

When this was accomplished he encountered the concluding disaster of that whole disastrous morning. His telephoned request to speak to Miss Marshall was received by a maid, who said that her mistress was ill and could not come down. Nor could a message be carried to her because she was asleep. One might be left, however. Did the gentleman wish to leave one?

Matt, wretchedly perturbed, could think of nothing else than that Miss Marshall was to be informed that he had rung her up. "Broughton, not Button—B-r-o-u-g-h-t-o-n—and please tell her I shall call this afternoon in the hope of seeing her and perhaps take her for a drive if the weather clears and she is well enough."

At 3 he was at Fair Oaks in a worse downpour than ever, only to find himself rebuffed. Half soaked, he stood on the threshold and was told that Miss Marshall could see no one and that the doctor had given her some sleeping stuff. The general, too, had intrenched himself against callers. Matt climbed into his buggy and drove off, sick with despair.

Splashing along the muddy road, he wondered at himself for refusing that $50,000. With the money they had offered him Chris, for was not this what it amounted to? With $50,000 in his pocket he might go up to that big house and take her bodily away, marry her, have her for his very own?

Nuts For the Table.

A point to remember when serving nuts is that they are of firm texture and of highly concentrated food value, and consequently are more digestible when put through the grinder before being added to other food.

It is also well to know the kinds of nuts that should be used to get certain results.

Pecans, peanuts, English walnuts, hazelnuts, filberts, hickory nuts, pine nuts, pistachos and almonds are tissue builders. Butternuts, Brazil nuts, black walnuts and cocoanuts—the oily nuts—are quick heat and energy producers.

Chestnuts and chinquapins rank as cereals and breadstuffs. They may take the place of rice or potatoes. Being starchy, they must be cooked to be suitable for the table.

Peanuts, we all know, are nuts only by courtesy. Like pine nuts and almonds, they contain a good supply of all the food elements. The high price of almonds makes them a luxury almost beyond the reach of a moderate purse.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Sluggish Liver.

Constipation and sluggish action of the liver are quickly reflected by a yellow tinge in the so called "whites" of the eyes. This condition calls emphatically for out of door exercise. If you are house bound by some unusual condition of the weather open the windows and do physical exercises for half an hour twice a day. Cut out sugar and much starch in your diet, take hot water or weak tea in place of coffee and on arising drink the juice of half a lemon in a cup of hot water. The constipation must be overcome, but if possible by diet and exercise rather than by medicine.

When a woman refuses a man she hopes that he may not go to the dogs and he hopes that she may not regret her mistake.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

NEAR FUR COATS.

Luxurious Effects Achieved In Wraps at Moderate Cost.

FABRIC FUR COAT.

This season those who cannot afford the real thing may have near fur coats of a perfection not dreamed of a few years ago. Manufacturers are imitating all the high priced furs in material that looks very like it, and many women who can well afford the genuine are wearing it. The sumptuous wrap here shown is of fabric fur in broadtail effect. It has the new pointed outline and is trimmed with a collar of pointed fox.

Brittle Nails.

Gout in the family is often shown by an undue brittleness of the nails. Brittle nails are invariably harsh and ugly looking, too, with unsightly ridges down the middle. It is very difficult indeed to make them take any sort of polish.

Here is the remedy. Every night after washing and applying glycerin and rosewater to the hands rub some ordinary olive oil well into the nails. Persevere in this treatment and you will find that the brittleness will very soon disappear.

Trim the nails with scissors as little as possible, but use the nail file instead, smoothing afterward with one of those little emery boards which may be bought quite cheaply in packets of a dozen or less at any druggist's.

Cultivating Expression.

The secret of beauty does not entirely lie in the art of massaging, nor is it due to the skill of the perfumer, the taste of the dressmaker or the cleverness of the milliner, but in the recognition of the fact that the human face and form change with every year of life and, knowing this, governing one's actions accordingly. If your face lacks intellectuality the only way to remedy it is by exercise of mind. Take up a course of reading and study beyond that which you have hitherto attained. To put it figuratively, cultivate the muscles of the brain as you would cultivate the muscles of the body. It is the action of the brain that will influence the expression.

After dressing and when ready to go out place a hand mirror on the floor against the wall and turn slowly around. If the underskirt shows below the dress it will be readily seen and a slovenly look may be avoided.

On Marriage.

Marriage, from any point of view, is of course a serious proposition, as it may bless or wreck two human lives, if not more. Not the least important of these points of view is that of the health of both parties to the contract. The health commissioner of Pennsylvania in an official bulletin gives the following advice to those about to marry:

"First, a man should not marry unless into a family with a history of reasonable longevity, free from hereditary disease. He should not marry a woman advanced in life, delicate, feeble or afflicted with any inherited deformity. The age most proper for women in this climate is nineteen or twenty years and for men twenty-four or twenty-five years. Women of a nervous temperament, those who are extremely irritable, hysterical, subject to convulsions or to epilepsy from organic disease, ought to avoid matrimony.

"In this country marriages before the ages of twenty-five and nineteen respectively are contraindicated, because, as a rule, previous to these periods of life the body is not fully developed, the different functions are not perfect, and any offspring developed by them in their immature condition must be deficient in vital power."

Flowing Hair.

The beauty of the hair is improved by letting it flow every now and then, and as one is supposed to lounge on in the privacy of the bedroom the resting moment is an excellent time for this. Pass the comb through the locks once or twice to relieve the strain hairpins have given the scalp and then tie a ribbon loosely about the head to keep front strands from falling over the face. The more the fresh air blows through the hair while it is hanging down the better for it.

FREE TO CRITICIZE.

Premier Asquith Says Opposition May Find Fault If It Likes.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Parliament reassembled yesterday after a recess for the House of Commons since Nov. 27, and for the House of Lords since Jan. 7.

Replying to a question put by Geo. Nicoll Barnes, Labor member for Glasgow, whether the Government was considering the matter of fixing food prices, Premier Asquith said: "All these matters are being carefully reviewed."

Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, served notice that the Opposition took the view that it was perfectly free to criticize the Government's war policies at any time if national interest demand it. He added, however, that the Opposition had no present desire to indulge in such criticism.

Premier Asquith said that the Government would not deny the right of the Opposition to make criticisms.

AUSTRO-GERMAN FORCES REPULSED IN CARPATHIANS

Russian Cossacks Are Well Into Hungary and Pressing on Toward Budapest--- Germans in Poland Gain First Real Success of Campaign Only to Lose Ground Again

LONDON, Feb. 3. — Military experts are following with keen interest the development of important movements on the eastern front. Latest accounts indicate that the Austro-Germanic forces deploying across the Carpathians have reached the northern foothills and have already been in contact with superior Russian forces between Nijnia, Polusca and Lutowiska, where 78 officers and 4,065 men were captured. The Russians also took four field and ten machine guns.

It is announced that Russian Cossacks have invaded Hungary, and are now pressing toward Budapest.

Denial is made of recent German and Austrian statements claiming victories in Galicia and Poland.

The official and unofficial reports of the fighting in Central Poland point to a German reverse in the region of Woolawek, on the left bank of the Vistula, the enemy retreating and abandoning their dead at Makow.

Referring to the fighting on the right bank of the Vistula, the Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post cables:

On the right bank of the lower Vistula front the Germans appear to be advancing in two directions, southwards towards the Vistula and eastwards towards the former front between Bejoun and Orezelowe Lake. These places, a dozen miles apart, were strongly held by the Germans, but the Russian Light Horse at length succeeded in penetrating by surprise through this line. On Sunday they seized several villages and captured four officers and 35 troopers of the German cavalry, who were taken prisoners before they quite knew what was happening. On the previous day the Germans made an attack in the direction from Lipno towards Dobrzyn, on the Vistula, but were repulsed and pursued for several miles. The Germans lost heavily.

The Germans on Sunday scored the greatest successes they yet had in Poland. The scene of the fighting was the ill-fated country estate of Borlimon, which has been daily in the bulletins for a month past as the centre of more or less strenuous fighting. The Germans first attacked this region on Dec. 22.

From that date to the present week they have been hammering vainly at this stone-wall Russian defence, but never gained an inch of ground, and lost ten thousand men. They tried the famous methods of savagery, sending ten companies forward to certain annihilation, in the hope that the eleventh would succeed. This favorite German form of attack continued for weeks, both day and night, with appalling losses. They next tried sapping, and finally brought up all their available artillery and over*whelming forces, and by means of ar*tillery and ruthless attacks they on Sunday finally scored a real success in the capture of the Russian first line trenches. It was only a temporary success, but although such temporary successes have been scored by the Germans on several previous occasions, they never have been on such an important scale hitherto. Only small sections of the first line trenches were taken and held for a few hours, after which the occupiers were attacked and destroyed with the bayonet, and the section retaken.

Swindling Contractors Liable.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 2. Manufacturers of boots for the Canadian soldiers who did not live up to the specifications will be disciplined by Maj.-Gen. Sam Hughes, now en route east. He stated here that while most manufacturers had delivered shoes according to specifications, some had been dishonest.

"These men will be brought to book," he said. "When I get back to Ottawa someone will pay very dearly."

He had samples of some poor boots with him. Gen. Hughes said he did not believe the story that Canadians in England would not be served with any more Canadian-made footwear.

SEAS ARE SWEPT BY TRAWLERS

Britain Has Huge "Mosquito Fleet" at Work

YARMOUTH, Eng., Feb. 3.—The nickname of "mosquito fleet," applied to the navy's torpedo flotillas, should properly be given to the steam trawlers, of which the Government is gathering together a swarm for the threefold purpose of mine-sweeping, protecting battleships from submarines, and operating in the shallows of the Belgian coast against the Germans. Over 500 of these boats were requisitioned the past week, and thousands are already out. They are found so useful that the Government evidently thinks it cannot have too many.

Trawlers still continue their original duty of seining for menaces to shipping, as enormous quantities of mines are still strewed at sea. Following the German raid on Scarboro and the Hartlepools in December, as many as 1,500 mines were picked up in one week. Many boats have been lost in this work — more than has been officially announced.

A large fleet of trawlers will soon take part in the Belgian coast operations, and some already are there.

Alsatian Stork Visits Paris.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—A great crowd assembled yesterday afternoon in the Place de la Bastille to watch an Alsatian stork, which had lighted on the wings of the statue of liberty on the top of the July column, erected in honor of the heroes of the revolution of July, 1830. The fact that an Alsatian bird had taken refuge in Paris was declared by some of the spectators to be a good augury.

German Submarine Off Southport.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—A message received here yesterday afternoon from Southport says that a German submarine, supposedly the "U-21," was seen off there early yesterday.

Southport is a seaside resort of England in the Irish Sea eighteen miles north of Liverpool.

Copp Elected in Westmoreland.

DORCHESTER, N.B., Feb. 2.—In consequence of the party truce the Conservatives put up no candidate, and A. B. Copp, Liberal, was selected by acclamation yesterday to succeed the late H. R. Emmerson as representative in Parliament for Westmoreland.

BRITISH CONSUL STILL MISSING

ROME, Feb. 3.—Delay in arriving at a solution of the Hodeida incident is now discovered to be due to the fact that the British consul, Richardson, whose release Italy has demanded, is not in the custody of the Turkish officials.

The Turks assert that the consul was released long ago, and has departed toward India by way of Persia. The governor of Yaman therefore insists that Italy's demand has already been complied with.

The Italian Foreign Office, however, suspects that the consul has been the victim of foul play, and does not accept the governor's excuse. Italy will demand that Richardson be produced.

Function of Literature.

"A book," said Dr. Johnson, "should show one either how to enjoy life or to endure it." Was ever the function of literature expressed more pungently or justly? Any man who enjoys or endures has a right to speak if he can. If he can help others to enjoy or endure he has a right to speak, if he doubt as to his part in life, while if he cannot ecstatically enjoy he can at least good humoredly endure.—A. C. Benson in Century Magazine.

More Than He Needed.

"At the end of five hours and a half if you are in town," said the judge, "you will be arrested on the same charge."

"You may fire full hours of that time back," said the lawbreaker. "I can get along with the thirty minutes."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ancient Astronomy.

A most interesting discovery in Egypt has been made, where an observatory has been found at Meroe at the bottom of a well in an underground bathing establishment, the advantage of such an observatory being that the stars could be seen by day as well as by night. This observatory, it is claimed, was evidently a copy of the famous observatory at Assuan, where the circumference of the earth was first determined—a work which was said to have been done at the bottom of the well. The chamber in which the astronomer's instruments were placed was ideally fitted for its purpose. Only a strip of sky was observable. On one of the stucco walls the astronomer has left a record of his calculations.

FOOD FOR SUMMER

German War Grain Company Has Seized 3,000,000 Tons, Says Paper.

ROTTERDAM, Feb. 3.—(Via London.)—The Courant learns that the German War Grain Co., an organization, the purpose of which is to acquire all the available grain in Germany and store it until next May, has seized over 3,000,000 tons of grain. The paper says that none of this foodstuff would be at the disposal of the public before next summer.

Police Guard Bakeshops.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 3.—The Berlin Tageblatt, in an issue which has reached here, declares that the council of Greater Berlin has appointed 12,000 special constables to guard the bakeshops of the city against any irregularities on the part of the public.

The Way of Judges.

"William," asked the judge's wife, "did you get the spool of silk thread I ordered you to bring home yesterday?"

"No, my dear, I did not."

"Dear me! How provoking! Be sure to get it today."

"I'm sorry, but I cannot do so."

"Why not, I'd like to know?"

"I have looked through all the books, and I have been unable to find a precedent that would warrant me in taking such action."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Family Quarrel.

A man whose wife afar would stray
Was seen his tears to wipe.
She took the hairpins all away.
He couldn't clean his pipe.

And yet it was her right to so,
The neighbors all declare.
He mussed up all the hairpins so
She couldn't do her hair.

"What have you there, son?"

"Ten beans."

"Beans? You mean dollars?"

"Yep."

"Why don't you call money by its right name?"

"Ain't beans a good enough name for money?"

"Not for you. You never plant any."

AUSTRALIANS IN EGYPT.

Further Force Arrived Without Accident Says Defence Minister.

MELBOURNE, Feb. 3.—The Hon. G. F. Pearce, Minister of Defence, speaking at the anniversary luncheon of the Australian Natives' Association, declared that the Government placed no limit on the number of men it will send to the war. He urged the men to come forward and do their duty, saying the Government would carry out their responsibility in equipping, training and despatching them.

He urged rifle clubs to take up drill and advocated various sporting organizations forming rifle clubs and undergoing drill. He announced with gratification that the second Australian contingent reached Egypt without accident. The newspapers commend the frankness of his speech, which is taken to mean that the Government eventually will despatch more men than Britain anticipated Australia would be able to send.

FORTS DESTROYED

Allied Fleet is Smashing Through Dardanelles

LONDON, Feb. 3. — The Franco-British fleet is now smashing its way through the Dardanelles, according to despatches received here from Copenhagen, Petrograd and Sofia. The latter report, which was received by The Star by way of Copenhagen, states that Constantinople is in wild panic, realizing that the city will be at the mercy of the Allies' ships as soon as they have succeeded in forcing the narrow channel that gives entrance to the Sea of Marmora. Copenhagen newspapers still have correspondents in Constantinople.

Travelers from Turkey declare that the Anglo-French fleet bombarding the Dardanelles has destroyed four of the principal forts. Turkish officials along the channel fled to the Asiatic shore.

The Sofia report further states that the big bridge across the Maritza river near Adrianople has been blown up and entirely destroyed. In the absence of further information it is presumed that this bridge was destroyed by the Turks to prevent the possible advance of a hostile army from the Balkans.

Inquest at Whitby Postponed.

WHITBY, Ont., Feb. 3.—The inquest into the death of William Stone, the young Grand Trunk telegraph operator who was shot and killed at Whitby Junction over a month ago, has again been postponed indefinitely. Monday was the day set for its conclusion, but Crown Attorney Farewell decided that there was insufficient evidence on which to bring in a verdict. "We don't want to close up the thing until we have every possible piece of evidence before the jury," said the crown attorney yesterday.

Mrs. Norman McCloy, 98, the oldest resident of Belleville, died at an early hour yesterday from pneumonia. She had lived there for 70 years.

SIR JOHN FRENCH IS VISITED BY KING

LONDON, Feb. 2—Again unknown to the British public Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the British forces in France and Belgium, has paid another flying visit to London, conferred with the King and the War Council, returned to the front without a word of his trip appearing in the newspapers. Contrary to precedent, the King called on Sir John at his residence, 94 Lancaster Gate W., instead of Sir John going to Buckingham Palace.

Sir John crossed the channel and reached London on Tuesday morning, Jan. 12. He left the next day.

Scott, M.P., for South Waterloo.

PRESTON, Ont., Feb. 2.—At the town hall here yesterday afternoon F. Stewart Scott, of Galt, the candidate nominated by the South Waterloo Conservative Association to succeed the late Hon. Geo. A. Clare, was declared elected by acclamation, owing to the Liberals not naming a candidate.

Greece To Help Serbs.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—A despatch to the Balkan Agency from Athens says:

"Greece, with all her forces, will come to the aid of Serbia in every fresh invasion of Serbia by the Austro-Germanic armies. The greatest activity prevails in military quarters."

To Make War on Transports?

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—(Via London.) —An official report issued yesterday by the German Navy Department called attention to the extensive transportation of British troops to France, and adds:

"We shall use every method of war at our disposal against them."

High Price For Bread.

ROME, Feb. 3.—Demonstrations over the high price of bread continue at various places, especially in Sardinia. At Sassari, the capital of the Province of Sarrari, Sardinia, rioters broke into a bakeshop. Troops were called out and dispersed the demonstrators.

SENTENCED TO DEATH

Toronto Poles to Pay Penalty on April 13th

TORONTO, Feb. 3.—"The Lord did no harm at all and he was crucified, too."

When Chief Justice Mulock in the Criminal Assizes yesterday afternoon asked the two Poles, found guilty of the Moore Park murder, if they had anything to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced upon them, this was the answer he received from one of the doomed men.

The two prisoners, John Ziolki and Tomas Ciebicki did not understand English, and the verdict of the jury finding them both guilty of the murder of Bogino Trenda, a Greek, on the night of Dec. 29 and the sentence of the court had to be interpreted to them in a few words at a time. After each instalment one prisoner or the other would make some reply which was repeated to the court.

The executions will take place on April 13.

Inoculation a Success.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Capt. Harry Morel, of the Canadian Medical Corps, writes The Times yesterday, adding his testimony to the value of inoculation. Speaking of the process at Valcartier he says: "To inoculate about 27,000 men required 57,000 injections within the limited time. In this series, which, I believe, is the largest on record, we did not have any cases of severe constitutional reaction or any infected arms. This speaks volumes for the technique employed, which was simple."

Asks For Information.

ROME, Feb. 3.—Pope Benedict was informed yesterday by Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, of the reported action of the French police in regard to the papal prayer. The Pope and the cardinal discussed the situation for an hour and a telegraphic request for full information was sent to Paris.

Earth Shocks In England.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Earth shocks occurred Monday night in a number of districts in Yorkshire. One miner was killed and many had narrow escapes owing to the shaking down of coal in the pits. In some cases the pits were rendered unworkable by the fall of coal.

Amos Bonsall, 86 years old, sole survivor of the Elisha Kent expedition into the Arctic regions to search for Sir John Franklin 62 years ago, died in Philadelphia yesterday.

ASSAULTS INCREASING INFANTRY HALT GERMANS

Desperate Drives all Along Front in Flanders and France are Frustrated by Big Guns---French Continue to Progress Near Chalons Germans Have Evacuated Cernay

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Further intrepid attacks of the French lines by the German forces of infantry are evidently being deterred by the superiority of the allied artillery, for the day was marked by heavy gun fire from the sea to the Lys river to reduce the French, British and Belgian batteries without attaining that end. The closeness of the trenches in the region of Arras permits rifle firing at close range and here throughout the night a fusilade was maintained without the enemy attempting an attack in force to dislodge the defenders. Probably the species of operations was begun by the Germans to wear out their opponents by a ceaseless harassing.

French artillerymen damaged the batteries of the Germans near Soissons and an infantry advance near St. Paul was repulsed by the French troops.

Northwest of the old battlefield of Chalons the French continue to make progress in driving the Germans from the outskirts of a wood which was occupied a short time ago.

Fighting in the Argonne has not lulled and the French troops perform prodigies of valor in difficult forest struggles at close range. A German attack near Bagatelle was repulsed.

The letting up of a snow storm in the Vosges permitted the French troops to gain more ground towards Burnhaupt le Bas. Uffholz was also bombarded all through the night.

The Germans, it appears, have without anything being said about it, evacuated Cernay, Alsace, which lies at the foot of the famous Hill 425, the slopes of which were contested for so long with such grim ferocity. The French fire must have made it untenable, and they are now bombarding it themselves to prevent the French from occupying it. The French are making no attempt to do so, but are applying the same melinite treatment which they gave to Cernay to the forest of Ronnenburch, which the Germans have fortified and entrenched to the uttermost as a barrier to the French advance towards Muhlhausen.

The following official communication was issued by the War Office last night:

"From the sea to the Lys the German artillery has tried, without success, to reduce our batteries.

"In the sector of Arras rifle firing continued throughout the night of Feb. 1-2, but the infantry did not attack.

"Near Soissons we have done some damage to the enemy's batteries and repelled an attack of an infantry contingent at St. Paul. Fresh progress has been made by us near Perthes-les-Hurlus (northeast of Chalons) at the outskirts of the wood, the occupation of which by our troops has previously been reported.

"In the Argonne, near Bagatelle, we repulsed a German attack. In the Vosges Uffhoiz was bombarded during the night and our troops made progress toward Burnhaupt le Bas.

The afternoon communique said:

"The day of Feb. 1 was marked by redoubled intensity in the artillery fighting on our part, as well as that of the enemy, and by a series of German attacks, of relatively secondary importance, all of which were repulsed with serious losses for our adversaries when compared to the numbers of men they had engaged.

"In Belgium the German heavy artillery gave evidence of its greatest activity on the front of the Belgian troops, and particularly against the various points of support which these troops have been occupying for some time past in the region of the Yser. Around Ypres the cannonading was at some places exceedingly violent.

"Between the Lys and the Somme, a German regiment attacked a British position near Cuinchy, and at first drove the British soldiers back. After a series of counter-attacks the British troops reoccupied the ground they had lost and then advanced into new territory, taking possession of trenches of the enemy.

"The engagement reported in the announcement given out the night of Feb. 1, which took place along the roadway between Bethune and La Bassee, was particularly brilliant for our infantry. It seems that the Germans had at least one battalion in this engagement. The two first attacks were broken by our fire. The third was successful in that the Germans entered one of our trenches, but an immediate counter-attack at the point of the bayonet resulted in our overcoming the enemy.

"Only a few Germans succeeded in regaining these trenches, all the others were killed or taken prisoners.

"Between the Lys and the Somme, and along the front of the Aisne, there is no important development to report, with the exception of a German attack on Beaumont Hamel, which was not renewed." Our heavy artillery bombarded the railroad station at Noyon, where the Germans were reprovisioning their forces. Our shells caused two explosions, the smoke from which could be seen for more than two hours and a half.

"Our methodical progress in the region of Perthes continues. We have occupied another small forest to the northwest of this village.

"In the Woevre district, the enemy delivered an attack on the western side of the Bouchot forest (northeast of Troyon), which was at once driven back.

"There is nothing to report on the front in Lorraine and in the Vosges."

CANADA SEEKS EXTRADITION

Of Man Who Dynamited the C.P.R. Bridge

VANCEBORO, Me., Feb. 3.—Another international problem incident to the war was thrust upon the United States yesterday by the action of Werner Van Horn, who, operating on the Canadian side of the harbor, dynamited the railway bridge over the St. Croix river, and then escaped into this state. A few hours later in a room at a hotel here, Van Horn quietly submitted to arrest, but immediately proclaimed himself an officer of the German army and set up the claim that he had committed an act of war and, having fled to a neutral country, could not be legally surrendered to an enemy of the fatherland.

The Canadian authorities took a different view of the matter, and at once instituted proceedings to obtain the extradition of the prisoner on a charge of destruction of railroad property. Pending the outcome of these efforts, Van Horn is held at the immigration office there in custody of Deputy Sheriff George W. Ross, of Washington County.

The bridge which Van Horn sought to destroy was not greatly damaged. Within a few hours cars were shunted across one at a time, the passengers walking over on the ice. By morning, railroad officials said, the bridge would be strong enough for trains to use it without uncoupling.

Ottawa Seeks Extradition.

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—The first steps were taken yesterday to secure the extradition from the United States of the German calling himself Werner Van Horn, who attempted to dynamite the C. P. R. bridge at St. Croix, on the New Brunswick boundary. If he is extradited it will be on the charge of having committed, in Canada, a criminal offence which endangered human life. The penalty for this is a long term of imprisonment.

As an individual raider, acting on his own account, he would be in the same position as a civilian who is caught committing an act of war, and would be held as a criminal, charged with whatever offence his act would be in time of peace.

The eldest son of Gen. von Kluk, who was a naval lieutenant, is reported to have fallen in an artillery battle near Middlekerke on Jan. 26.

Russians Sink Gunboat.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent says a Russian submarine sank a German gunboat off the German coast; also hit and seriously damaged a small cruiser of the Gazelle type, possibly the Gazelle herself. Exclusive of the Black Sea fleet Russia has 21 submarines, all built between 1903 and 1908. None of them is bigger than 500 tons. The fastest makes 13 knots and carries four torpedo tubes, the others carrying fewer.

The German cruiser Gazelle's displacement is 2,603; length, 328 feet; beam, 38 1-2 feet; crew, 256 men; speed, 18 knots. She was launched in 1908.

CARGO WILL BE SEIZED

Ambassador Page Notifies State Department at Washington

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Ambassador Page at London cabled the State Department yesterday that the British fleet had been ordered to treat cargoes of grain and flour destined for Germany or Austria as conditional contraband, subject to seizure and confiscation. This step, the Ambassador explained, followed the announcement that the German Government had decreed confiscation of all grain and flour to conserve the nation's food supplies.

Since the publication of the German order, the Ambassador here, Count von Bernstorff, has virtually assured the American Government that no foodstuffs imported from the United States or other neutral countries, would be subject to seizure, and press despatches have announced the issuance of a modifying decree, making such exemptions by the German Government.

Ambassador Page said the British Government had informed him that because the steamship Wilhelmina, now bound from New York for Bremen with grain and other food, had sailed before the issuance of the German decree, an exception would be made in her case. The vessel would be seized, it was said, but she would be released and her cargo purchased at invoice price by the British Government. Warning was given, however, that other shipments hereafter of like character, when destined for Germany directly or indirectly would be seized as well as the vessels carrying them, without compensation being paid.

This announcement put an entirely new complexion on the negotiations that have been in progress intermittently since the beginning of the war in regard to the right of neutral states to ship food supplies to belligerent countries. The State Department has not decided what shall be done in the matter.

THANN IN FLAMES

Angry Germans Leave Trail of Ruined Villages

GENEVA, Feb. 2.—The steady advance of the French army in Alsace along a strip about fifteen miles from the Swiss frontier to St. Die, which has been recovered by them, has angered the retiring Germans, who destroy every village they abandon, taking all boys and old men with them and hounding away the women and children by sudden orders of evacuation. These unfortunates continue to arrive at Basle and other points of the Swiss frontier in a lamentable state. Thann is in flames, and even the deep snow has not prevented it being burned by continuous German bombardments. Cernay practically is destroyed, and the fighting around the city continues. The artillery battle for possession of Altkirk becomes more violent every day. Guns are being buried under snow by gunners on both sides to prevent their location by aeroplanes which cross and recross the frontier almost daily. The wives of all German officers at Colmar and Strassburg, where the hospitals are full of wounded, have been ordered to leave the towns.

Sailings Not Prohibited.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Perhaps the most striking commentary on the German submarine raid in the Irish Sea is afforded by Sir Norman Hill stating that the Liverpool-London War Risks' Insurance Association, in which almost all the Liverpool lines are insured against war risks, has not thought it necessary to exercise the power to prohibit the sailings of vessels. All regular lines are entering and leaving port freely, the trade of the Mersey being fully maintained.

RUSSIA TO BUY THE ROSS RIFLES

Will Take Three Million From Factory at Quebec

QUEBEC, Feb. 2.—The Ross rifle factory has contracted to furnish the Russian Government with 3,000,000 rifles during the next two years. It will also supply England and Canada with 500 rifles per day simultaneously. The plant, which already has been doubled since the outbreak of war, will be doubled again before November, when it is said that some 5,000 men will be given employment. Representatives of the factory waited on the City Council last night, saying it was their intention to try over some 1,200 expert hands from Europe and Belgium in particular.

ALL METALS ARE COMMANDEERED

Germany Now Preparing to Husband Her Depleted Resources

ROTTERDAM, Feb. 2. — German papers announce an official order directing that all stocks of copper, tin, aluminum, nickel, antimony, and lead are now to be reserved for the use of the army, this announcement comes rather close on the heels, the public assurance of experts that there was an ample copper supply at least for war purposes. Copper was one of the things Germany did its utmost to obtain in large supplies long before the war, for the internal production is ridiculously insufficent for any war on a big scale.

Despite all these assurances, the Government now has issued an order practically commandeering all metal for war purposes only, while trains are being deprived of all superfluous metal fittings for arsenal, and tram cables on systems in little-frequented districts are being taken down for the same purpose.

The mayor of Berlin announces that from the 1st of February all inhabitants are to go on rations.

Only recently Dr. Ernest Noah, writing in Die Metal Borse, said, "One of the most difficult problems in Germany is the need of raw materials, it however, seems fairly easy to get supplies of copper for war purposes. It is estimated that 100,000 tons per year are needed, of which Germany produces one-fourth, leaving the remaining 75 per cent. to come from foreign countries, but for the last five years 200,000 tons per year have been imported, thus the stores, including inland production, have been increased to about 2,150,000 tons in hand, stock ample for all war needs. There are large accumulations in the stores sufficient and to spare. Then, there is a good deal of copper from used ammunition which the army council had collected from the battlefields.

To Use Statues For War.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 2.—(Via London.)—"So far as copper is concerned, by making use of all the bronze monuments and the copper cupolas of the churches and collecting all the copper we have used for other purposes in the last few years Germany will be able to hold out for thirty years more."

Thus spoke Dr. Schuster, secretary of the German Iron Founders' Union, at the annual meeting of the union in Dusseldorf, according to a despatch received by The Tijd. Dr. Schuster is reported as having added:

"If necessary, in the conquered parts of Belgium and France we shall seize everything made of copper."

He Just Runs Loose for a Whole Week

By M. QUAD

"Well, has anything happened?" asked Mr. Bowser as he came home and saw by Mrs. Bowser's eyes that she had been weeping.

"A letter from mother," was the reply.

"Is she coming here?"

"She is very poorly and wants me to come there and stay a week."

"Is that all?"

"But how can I get away for a week?"

"Why, take the train."

"But you can't go too."

"No."

"Cook offers to stay and keep house for you."

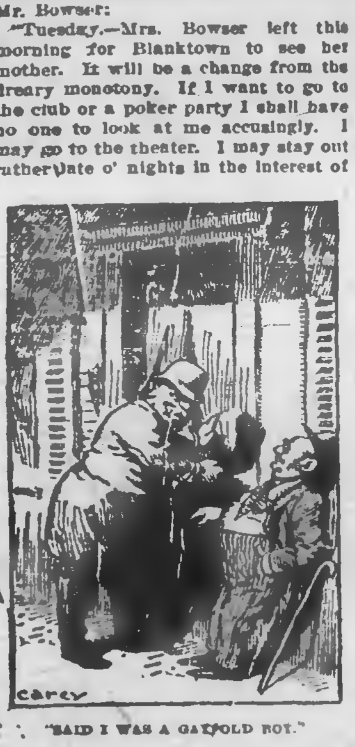
"That is kind of her."

"But you'll be lonely."

"Get out!"

It was talked over and settled that Mrs. Bowser could go, and she departed next morning. What happened during the week is told in a diary kept by Mr. Bowser:

"Tuesday.—Mrs. Bowser left this morning for Blanktown to see her mother. It will be a change from the dreary monotony. If I want to go to the club or a poker party I shall have no one to look at me accusingly. I may go to the theater. I may stay out rather late o' nights in the interest of the next presidential election. I feel a strange elation. If Mrs. Bowser stays a month I shan't kick.



"SAID I WAS A GAYFOLD BOY."

"Wednesday.—Was out late that night to the Rabbit club. When it came 11 o'clock I did not have to grab for my hat and overcoat and rush for home and wonder what Mrs. Bowser was going to say.

"At midnight several members expressed surprise that I had not departed. I gave them to understand that no wife could run me.

"At 1 o'clock several other fellows came around and said they hoped my staying wouldn't lead to a divorce. I told 'em I didn't care how durned quick Mrs. Bowser applied for one.

"Home at 2 in the morning. No one leaning over the banister as I opened the front door. No one to remark the hour and say that such carryings on at my age were shameful. Didn't have to creep upstairs like a thief. Didn't have to take anything off but my coat to get into bed.

"Thursday.—No sarcastic looks or words at the breakfast table this morning over my being out late last night, and I never enjoyed a breakfast better. No one to ask me for money. No one to caution me not to buy a balloon or a diamond mine during the day. Took in vaudeville show. Never knew before that there was so much fun in them. Roars of laughter from start to finish. Sauntered around the town by moonlight after the performance. Met a cop that I knew, and he chuckled and poked me in the ribs and said I was a gay old boy. Home some time in the morning. Didn't even have to take my coat off to go to bed. It makes me mad to think of the years I have wasted in undressing.

"Cook said she was awake at 4 o'clock in the morning and heard some one coming upstairs. I easily convinced her that she was mistaken. This is life, this is. By thunder, why does any man ever marry?

"Friday.—Out again last night. I cannot tell the reader what a relief it is for me to put on my hat and coat after dinner and walk out without being questioned and cautioned to hurry right back.

"Went to a bowling alley. Went to a club. Dropped in to see the moving pictures. Hadn't one single thought of the house. No chills went creeping up my back as I thought of Mrs. Bowser meeting me in the hall and saying that she was glad we had no son to follow in his father's footsteps. Thought the cook might have some remark to make at breakfast, but on the contrary she gave me an encouraging smile. When I woke up I found that I was fully dressed, even to my shoes, but I never slept better in my life. America is noted for rapid transit, and yet millions and millions of people will spend an hour out of twenty-four dressing and undressing.

"Wasn't cautioned when I left the house not to invest in chickens, pigs, cows, autos or winter tonics. Went right out with my head up and able to look the world in the face. How I have stood Mrs. Bowser's sarcasm as long as I have is a mystery to me.

"Saturday—Changed my clothes after I got home and had dinner and went to a poker party. It is what is called a 'stag' party—that is, you drink as many highballs and gin fizzes as seem proper and lose all the money you want to.

"Very pleasant lot of fellows and all surprised to see me. Heard some of them hinting that Mrs. Bowser must be dead.

"Talked politics and played poker.

"Talked war and played more poker.

"Talked Panama canal and had a flush.

"Held threes and straights and big pairs and never once thought of Mrs. Bowser. Free as air and feeling like a four-year-old.

"What asses men make of themselves when they marry! Just let Mrs. Bowser give me one sassy word when she gets back, and—"I have an indistinct recollection of dropping something at poker, but whether it was a cent or $10 I shall never know—in fact, I don't care. When I set out to have a good time there's nothing stingy about me.

"I remember speaking about going home at 2 o'clock in the morning, but some one asked what's the use, and I said no more. Don't remember getting home. Don't remember a policeman kindly unlocking the front door for me and calling me a regular Jim Dandy. Can't remember the cook finding me sitting in the front hall when she came down. The first I knew I was up and dressed and pitying the man who ties himself to a wife.

"Policeman met me at the gate as I started for the office and wanted to know if I was going to pay for that window. I didn't even ask him what window he meant, but when he said the damage was $4 I pulled out the money and paid it like a man. Cook brushed feathers off my clothes and picked straw out of my hair before I sat down to breakfast, but she was discreet—very discreet. She said she used to pick feathers and straws when she went to concerts.

"Sunday.—Woke up with a recollection—several recollections; also a sore throat and a headache. Breakfast in bed. More recollections and a head ache than breakfast.

"Cook very kind and thoughtful. Discovered that I had lost my watch and sympathized with me.

"Discovered that I had lost my wallet and said it didn't matter as long as I had had a good time.

"I don't think I came home in an ambulance. Neither of my legs is broken, and why should I have done so? I don't think I slept on the front steps. When a man has a house he sleeps inside instead of outside of it. I sort of wish Mrs. Bowser was home. Cook says I have quite a fever. She attributes it to political excitement. Mrs. Bowser is one of the best hands in case of fever I ever heard of. I might reach her, of course, by telephone, but—

"Monday.—Doctor has been here. Says I have had a narrow escape. Says a man of my age ought to have a wife to hold him down. Says there's no particular harm in moving pictures, vaudeville shows, music concerts, poker games and sleeping in the front hall if taken in moderate doses, but that I seem to have gone and overdone the thing.

"Cook is kindness itself, but she isn't Mrs. Bowser.

"I now begin to understand why men marry and why a man is an ass who doesn't. There is something sacred about home.

"Cook continues her kindness. She has just hinted that she has nothing to tell Mrs. Bowser, who will arrive early tomorrow morning. I am counting the hours. I shall explain to her that it is a hard cold, but she will suspect the truth and forgive me.

"Dear Mrs. Bowser! Durn shows Durn freedom!"

Who Baked Them?

A little girl was sent to a neighbor's with a plate of fresh cookies that her mother had just baked. In a little while she came running back to her mother and said, "Oh, mother, Mrs Weeks thought the cookies were just fine, and she wants the 'address' for them."—Indianapolis News.

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—Every modern high price goal for wheat was left behind today except three—$1.85 a bushel paid by Joseph Leiter in 1898, that exacted during the B. P. Hutchinson corner in 1888, and lastly the American civil war record, when gold was at a big premium and the value of a bushel of wheat was not very far from $3.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 2.—Wheat sold at $1.53⅝ for May and $1.59⅝ for July, while later prices on these two months had declined 1⅛c and ⅜c. Opening prices were for May 1⅝c higher than Monday's close, and in the first ten minutes of business it had jumped another cent. The advance was sharp until the high points were reached. Oats opened ⅜c to ⅝c higher, and held fairly steady for some little time, but they also weakened later.

Inspections totaled 245 cars on Monday, and in sight today were 170 cars.

Wheat futures closed 4⅝c up for both months. Cash closed 4c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—There was no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and in consequence business was very quiet. A few bids of 63s for No. 2 northern came in from London this afternoon, which was 2s below what exporters were asking. The feeling in the local market for Canadian western oats continued strong, and prices have scored a further advance of 1c per bushel. There was an increased enquiry from outside buyers for all lines of coarse grains today, but owing to the excited condition of the markets holders were not disposed to sell freely, and trade on the whole was rather quiet. In sympathy with the excited state of the wheat markets, a very strong feeling continues to prevail in the flour market, and prices for spring wheat grades were advanced another 30c per barrel, and winter wheat grades 40c to 50c, while rolled oats were marked up 75c per barrel. There was demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour, but exporters would not accept the prices bid. Demand for millfeed is good. Butter fairly active. Cheese quiet. Eggs steady.

LORD SOMERS IS AMONG WOUNDED

One of Ontario's Noblemen Farmers in Casualty List

LONDON, Feb. 2:—There are 178 peers serving in the British army, including 8 dukes, 10 marquises, 61 earls, 22 viscounts and 77 barons. The Earl of Annesley, Viscount Hawarden, and Lord Congleton have been killed in battle, and the Duke of Roxburg, the Marquises of Northampton and Tweeddale, the Earl of Laven, and Lords Gerard and Somers have been wounded, while the Earls of Erne and Stair have been taken prisoners by the Germans.

Lord Somers, with his brother-in-law, Lord Hyde, took up farming at Pickering, Ont., in the spring of 1912. They purchased 260 acres of ideal fruit land, and started in with a will to make a prosperous fruit farm. It was Lord Somers who came to Canada in the first place to choose a homestead. His uncle, Perry Somers-Cocks, had already been farming in Canada for eighteen years. At the outbreak of the war he rejoined his regiment, the First Life Guards.

Llodys' Raised Rates On Ships.

LONDON, Feb. 2. — The German submarine raid in the Irish Sea caused a commotion at Lloyds' and insurance rates stiffened generally. The Atlantic rate ordinarily is five shillings ($1.25) per cent., but the underwriters now are asking ten shillings ($2.50), and in some cases 15 shillings ($3.75). What little business is being transacted, however, is believed to be at the lower figures.

Those Fish Fancies.

"Do you mean to support your friend in his story about catching fish with his bare hands?"

"No," replied Mr. Whopkins. "He exaggerates. It's true he took a fish out of the water with his bare hands, but I had to jump overboard and swim like the deuce in order to catch the fish and hold it for him."—Washington Star.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

PRELIMINARY GAMES OF BONSPIEL COMPLETED

Many Contests Are Marked by Close Scores and Exciting Finishes

TWO HUNDRED CURLERS TAKE PART

Some close scores and exciting finishes were recorded in the preliminary games of the open bonspiel, which opened yesterday. Upwards of 250 curlers are taking an enthusiastic part in the big event and when the final ends are completed and the silverware presented, the Peterborough Club will be able to mark up the most largely attended and successful bonspiels in the history of the club.

Up to a late hour last night the curlers were still straggling into the rink, after having been held up at various points on account of the tie-up in railway traffic. Some were unfortunate enough to have their lot cast in a railway coach from early morning, while others had their bearings alright but could not get train connections.

The scores in the preliminary round were as follows:

Consolation.

In the preliminary round of the Consolation, McKinnon of Bobcaygeon went into the first round by reason of his opponent, W. H. Taylor, being in Toronto with the Tankard rinks. Smith of Hamilton who was prominent in the big bonspiel at Lindsay last winter, defeated Widdis of Lindsay by one shot and Hagraft of Cobourg had a five point victory over Needler of Millbrook.

Toogood of Orillia entered the second round by winning over Nichol of Norwood and A. E. Bottum also entered the second round through the default of the Lindsay rink skipped by Little. Two of the Lindsay curlers returned home following their defeat last night. The absence of Skip Lang permitted Baird of Scarboro to advance.

BOWLING

In the Y. M. C. A. bowling league the Gladiators defaulted three games to the Beginners last night. The Beginners rolled three games for average, the results being as follows:

Flowers	137	125	146	408
Hardill	137	147	131	425
Dawson	122	180	169	471

STAFF QUARTERS BOMBED.

French Airmen Destroy Homberg Castle, in Alsace.

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 3.—(Via Paris.)—French airmen yesterday dropped bombs on the famous Homberg Castle, in Alsace, where a group of important German staff officers were residing. The building was set on fire and burned to the ground.

After encircling the castle, the aviators suddenly dropped several bombs. Some of the missiles took effect, causing heavy destruction. Fire broke out in the large castle and spread to a number of farm buildings adjoining it. Soon nothing was left but a smoking heap of ruins.

Homberg Castle was the summer residence of the French Countess Maupecu. It contained some celebrated ancient furniture. The damage is estimated at several million francs.

JOE MOINSE IS ASKED TO APPEAR BEFORE O.H.A.

Readers of today's sport page of the Mail and Empire opened their eyes at the heading, "Is Tetrault, a former N.H.A. player, in the O.H.A.?" The item was:—

> "It is hinted in certain circles that the O.H.A. will shortly be called upon to deal with a case of a man playing under an assumed name on one of their intermediate O.H.A. teams. The latter team have not yet won their group, but stand a good chance of annexing the district.
>
> The player in question is said to be Tetrault, who played in the N.H.A. some years ago."

Whether the team in question is Peterborough or not cannot be stated but other teams in this district, especially Picton, have been pointing suspiciously at the Petes because of the presence of Joe Moinse of the local forward line. These stories have reached the ears of Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the O. H. A. and Moinse has been notified to appear before the sub-committee of that body on Friday and have the matter cleared up.

Secretary Harry Morgan of the Peterborough Hockey Club stated today that if Moinse is Tetrault or any other professional, he (Morgan) knew absolutely nothing of it. Secretary Morgan exhibited a statutory declaration made by J. Moinse before a solicitor. In the declaration Moinse stated that he was fully qualified to play with the Peterborough Intermediates. This declaration was secured so that in event of Moinse being found ineligible by the O.H.A., the Peterborough Hockey Club would be exonerated of all wrong doing. It is doubtful however if the declaration would serve that purpose as the rules state plainly that the clubs shall be held responsible for their players. This was shown by the action of the O.H.A. sub-committee yesterday when the complaint against the Hamilton Rowing Club Junior team was considered. Alexander Murray, who is over age, admitted playing on the certificate of his brother, Frank Murray, in championship games, but the Rowing Club officials claimed that they were deceived as well as the association.

The decision of the committee was that Alexander Murray should be expelled from the O.H.A. and that his brother, Frank, also of Hamilton R. C., be suspended. Furthermore, that the Woodstock College team be declared winners of Group No. 7 junior, inasmuch as the Hamilton Rowing Club used an ineligible player in the games for the district championship; that the H.R.C. has lost its chance for group honors, but is not prohibited from playing exhibition games with other teams in good standing with the O.H.A.

Moinse, who was out of the Picton game, will not play until the O.H.A. has dealt with his case.

When the Picton team was here Monday, officials of the club said Picton would play Brampton, so they must have one or more cards to play. They said they received an anonymous letter from Peterborough about this player.

Would Make City Curling Centre

Hold Competitions Here on Larger Scale

A proposition is being mooted round the city which may eventually lead to the inauguration of steps to hold an annual curling tournament in Peterborough along the lines in vogue in Winnipeg and other cities where the winter game flourishes. Leading curlers agree that the idea, if put into execution would prove a great impetus to the already exceptional popularity of the game. They recognize the fact that some financial assistance would be essential if the plan were adopted but it seems that there is reason for hope that this assistance would not be an impossibility, for His Worship Mayor Buller, when spoken to today by the Review, said that the presence of such a body of men as there are in the city just now was an inspiration to trade and gave the city a brisk and busy appearance. It was possible, he intimated, that the City Council might be inclined to favorably view the idea. The visiting curlers are enthusiastic in their praise of the local rink and the capable manner in which the bonspiel is being conducted.

G. A. GILLESPIE PRESIDENT OF Y.M.C.A. BOARD

Directors Take Optimistic View of Year's Work

A meeting of the Y. M. C. A. board of directors was held last evening, the majority of the members being present. The main business of the meeting was the election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres.—J. W. Bennett.

Pres.—Geo. A. Gillespie.

Vice-Pres.—J. J. Howden.

2nd Vice-Pres.—T. Barrie.

Treas.—J. J. Turner.

Rec. Sec.—P. M. McCarrell.

Chairman of Committees — Religion Committee, Joseph Wearing; Physical Committee, H. B. Cowan; Educational Committee, J. J. Howden; Social Committee, W. B. Warne; Boys' Work, P. M. McCarrell, Finance Committee, T. Barrie; Property Committee, J. H. Connal; Membership Committee, M. W. Lyle.

Mr. Gillespie was elected a delegate to the Y. M. C. A. Territorial Conference, which will be held in Toronto on Friday of this week.

The members of the board feel quite optimistic regarding the work of the Association for the ensuing year, although they realize that the financing of the Association will be no easy task. However, it is expected that the citizens of Peterborough will rally to the support of the Association for two reasons: our Peterborough citizens are too loyal to Peterborough to allow any Peterborough institution to suffer as a result of the war. Also, the citizens and our local people appreciate the service rendered by our local Y. M. C. A. to the Empire, contributing more than fifty members as soldiers.

Perhaps no institution has received such hearty endorsement for the welfare work conducted on behalf of the soldiers at the front in France and Belgium as has the Young Men's Christian Association. Seven Canadian Y. M. C. A. secretaries have been made officers and placed on the pay roll of the Dominion Government, that they may serve the soldiers who are now at the front. The salaries of those soldiers at the front is but a small part of the Y. M. C. A. military work, for tents, lunch rooms and supplies of all kinds are supplied by the National Council of the Y. M. C. A.

With these added opportunities that are presented, the local association has served to increase the expenses, so the board of directors expect that the subscriptions made to the Y. M. C. A. will be larger this year than usual.

METHODISTS HAD GOOD TIME

Official Board and the Ladies Entertained

The people of Mark St. Methodist Church held a very enjoyable social last night. Taking into consideration the stormy weather there was a good turnout. The members of the Board and the ladies joined in trying to make the evening one to be enjoyed and remembered by those who had the pleasure to be there. The old saying "If ifs and ands were pots and pans we would need no tinkers to mend them." If the weather had been favorable a much larger number would have been there and if those who were not there only knew what they missed the weather would not have stopped them and if those who were there did not enjoy themselves well, then their actions were contrary. There was a fine program of music and songs as follows:—

Piano solo—Miss Mosley

Song—R. Hendry.

Quartette—Messrs. Speer, Miller, Iredale and Mrs. Iredale

Song—Mrs. Wand.

Refreshments were then served by the ladies and every one seemed to enjoy the coffee made by Mrs. Carr while Mrs. Speer and others prepared sandwiches and cake.

Some of the ladies proved their liking for the coffee by a plentiful supply and taking the evening as a whole it was a splendid success. Great praise is due the quartette for their rendering of Annie Laurie which showed care and study.

The object of the social was carried out to the letter and every one tried to make the success of the evening a preliminary to future affairs of its kind.

Indian Jugglers.

Magicians and jugglers were found among the Indians by the Jesuit missionaries as early as 1613, and they were common among all the Algonquin tribes, and Charlevoix mentions them among the Iroquois in 1635. The Spaniards met them in Mexico and South America.

Oil of Bergamot.

The world's supply of oil of bergamot comes from a comparatively small part of Calabria, in the extreme south of Italy, fronting on the strait of Messina.

Schumann on Chess.

In music it is as with chess playing—the queen, melody, possesses supreme power, but it is the king, harmony, who ultimately decides.

Skill is stronger than strength.—Old Saying.

CAPTAIN NELSON ASSUMES DUTIES

Ottawa Officer Joins Mounted Rifles Here

Capt. Nelson of Ottawa, who has been appointed to B. Squadron of the C. M. R., which is being recruited here, arrived in Peterborough this morning and assumed duties at the armouries. With the exception of a lieutenant, whose appointment has not as yet been made, the officers for the local unit are now complete. Lt.-Col. Johnston stated this morning that he has received orders that the local quota must be recruited from the area covered by the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. As to the possibility of being moved, Lt.-Col. Johnston stated he expected orders for proceeding to Ottawa, on Monday, would be received any minute. If the men do not go on Monday they will leave before the end of the week.

In all 135 men have joined the local squad of Mounted Rifles and the number required is 150. Lt.-Col. Johnston is very hopeful of adding the 15 more before the orders for removal arrive. All the men will leave in civilian clothes to be equipped with uniforms and horses at Ottawa.

The recruiting for the 39th Battalion is not very brisk but Capt. Spencer intimated this morning that it would improve on the departure of the Mounted Rifles. There are at present 75 men in the ranks while the anticipated number is 125. Capt. Spencer remarked that this was the first opportunity given local men to join the Mounted Rifles and naturally they were very popular. He further remarked on the harmony which exists between the two units.

Capt. Spencer stated that he did not expect the local division of the 39th Battalion to be moved before two weeks. When the orders do come the men will proceed to Belleville where they will be equipped.

Something Entirely New in Eyeglass Mountings
No more poor lenses and very few weak eyes, if you use the NEW TAIT NO-SCREW MOUNT. These mounts are attached to the lenses without the use of screws or rivets and thereby do away with the need of drilling a hole in the lenses which of course weakens the lenses.
Also the mounts never work loose like the old style. These mounts are manufactured at the Tait Optical Co.'s Hamilton factory and are sold here exclusively by Tait Optical Co. See sample in window.

Plant Savings Banks.

All bulk plants have savings banks—storehouses that in fat seasons they fill with substance which in the lean days may be drawn upon. The leaf buds on the bare winter branches of plants are savings banks full of the plant currency called starch. This currency, accumulated in the easy summer, makes life through the hard winter endurable. Some plants, the beet, carrot and turnip, run particularly fine savings banks called taproots. These plants have turned economy to parsimony. They are misers. Their banks, or taproots, are bigger and finer than themselves; hence their destruction. Man eats them, or, rather, he eats their savings, their best part.

Derivation of "Trolley."

A curious statement appeared in Le Figaro of Paris regarding the derivation of the word "trolley," which is said to be identical with the French slang expression "troler" (to drag along).

Le Figaro asserts that the word was first used by Berger, the French inventor, who installed the New York street car system with power transmitted through overhead cables.

Desiring to distinguish this system from the accumulator driven system, his cars being apparently "dragged along" by the cables, Berger employed the word "trolcars," remembering that the Paris street venders were called "troleurs" because they dragged along handcarts.

Lavender Sachet.

Fold a piece of sheer Swiss muslin 18 by 7 inches to make an oblong 9 by 7 inches. Bind with three-quarter inch lavender satin ribbon, leaving unbound a small opening at the end of one side until about one and a half ounces of lavender buds have been put into the pad. Finish binding, turn down the left hand corner and catch with a bow of the lavender ribbon. Buy one and a half yards of ribbon. This sachet makes a dainty gift and is inexpensive. Keep it in a bureau drawer.

Cracow.

Cracow, towards which the Russians are so steadily pressing their way, stands even before Warsaw in the minds of Polish patriots. Not only was it once the capital of free Poland, with a cathedral equivalent to Westminster Abbey, wherein sleep the generations of Polish kings and heroes, but it possesses the most striking patriotic memorial in the world. This is the Kosciuskoberg, a mound 300 feet high, erected to the memory of Kosciusko, and formed of earth from every battlefield of Poland.

Apple Brown Pudding.

Sprinkle brown sugar in the bottom of a buttered pudding dish, line the bottom of the dish with slices of buttered bread, put in layers of sliced cooking apples and between each layer of apples put some small bits of chopped orange peel and a little brown sugar. When the dish is full cover with slices of bread which have been moistened with hot milk. Bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes and serve hot.

Kippered Herrings.

When kippered herrings are very salt put them on a large dish flesh side down and pour hot water over them; cover and leave for a few minutes; drain off the water and dry them. Then rub them with fresh butter and grill them.

Light Under Water.

The depth to which the sun's rays penetrate water has been discovered by photography. Five hundred and thirty feet below the surface darkness was much the same as that on the earth on a clear but moonless night.

A Laundry Puzzle.

Teacher—I should like my pupils to take a pride in their personal appearance. Now, you, Thomas, how many collars do you wear a week? Thomas—Please, miss, do you mean how many weeks do I wear a collar?—London Telegraph.

His Explanation.

"But, Jack, you said you adored me."

"Did I? Well, another girl had just rejected me and at that moment I didn't much care what I said."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Just as Well.

"I can't accept your offer of affection, my dear sir."

"All right, madam. Then will you please return it?"—Baltimore American.

CROSSING THE SUN'S FACE.

Transits of the Moon, Venus and the Baby Planet Mercury.

There are only three bodies that can "transit" the sun's face—namely, the moon, which then causes an eclipse of the sun, and the planets Mercury and Venus, whose paths lie within that of the earth.

Usually Mercury and Venus pass the sun a little too high or a little too low, and so avoid making a transit. The last transit of Venus, for example, was in 1882, and there will not be another till 2004, an interval of 122 years, but in 2012 there will be another, only eight years later, as there was also another in 1874 only eight years before the last.

Mercury, on the other hand, makes about thirteen transits in a century, at intervals of from three and a half to thirteen years. Many of these, like eclipses, are visible only from parts of the globe.

Mercury is an interesting planet. It is known as the baby of the sun's family, the little brother of the earth. Against the earth's diameter of 8,000 miles is Mercury's of only 3,000, which makes it one-fourth smaller than Mars and less than half as large again as our moon. Yet when conditions are favorable Mercury is one of the brightest luminaries in the sky.

It sometimes even excels Sirius in brilliancy, brightest of the fixed stars, and among the eight planets attached to our sun, five of which may be seen in the sky, Mercury ranks third being excelled only by Venus and Jupiter, and thus outshining both Mars and Saturn.

Mercury always keeps near the sun, as little children keep near their father, and thus he is usually lost in the sun's glory. The reason for this is that he travels the innermost of all the eight concentric paths which the planets follow round about the sun.

Refinement and style are feminine fetishes. Strength and shrewdness are masculine fetishes.

POSITIONS IN EAST PRUSSIA STRENGTHENED BY RUSSIANS

Town of Skempe is Taken by Assault and Germans Are Driven off With Heavy Losses in Attack on Village

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 4. — The general staff today issued a report on the progress of the war, which reads: "In East Prussia our troops have strengthened their position near the village of Gross Medunischken, on the left bank of the Angerap River.

"On the left bank of the Vistula our encounters with the enemy become more frequent. Engagements of considerable importance have taken place on the front between Lipno and Bejune. Our troops took by assault the town of Skempe, east of Lipno, and repulsed an attack on the village of Blino, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. In this fighting we captured the commanding officer of a battalion, three other officers and one hundred men.

"On the right bank of the Vistula, fighting on the front between Borjimow Goumine and Wolaczososka continued on Tuesday with energy. The enemy brought into this engagement fourteen regiments of first line troops and quantities of artillery, including heavy pieces. Artillery fire was continued day and night.

"An engagement of particular severity took place at the village of Goumine, where, after sanguinary hand-to-hand fighting, we repulsed furious attacks of the enemy. The Germans here sustained immense losses, but they continue to bring fresh troops forward to fight.

"A demonstration of the enemy along the Nida River did not result successfully."

ABOLISH PRESENT LICENSE SYSTEM

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Feb. 4. — An evening paper publishes the statement that Hon. W. J. Hanna at the coming session will introduce legislation providing for the abolishing of the present liquor license system and instituting in its place a commission of five men. The province will be divided into five districts, and the licenses will be issued at different times, so that the new commission may travel about and hold court in various districts.

The other Canadian chaplains will remain in England.

Maj. S. L. Thorne, Toronto, has been appointed Depot Paymaster, and Col. C. N. Shanly, Toronto, Overseas Paymaster. The latter will open an office at Rouen.

Postmen Get Half Holiday.

MUST END IN ABSOLUTE SURRENDER SAYS LODGE

LONDON, Feb. 4. — Sir Oliver Lodge, the eminent scientist, has given out the following letter in response to a request from the International News Bureau:

"Surely the nations realize that the war is none of our seeking and that we are battling for the welfare of the world. It is not for any adventitious advantage that we are laying down our lives. We are constrained to do the work by motives of honor and integrity, and at whatever cost. We can have no other.

"If other nations have any faith in the future of humanity they know we must win, but how much pain and death the combatants must first pass through depends on whether the nations prolong the struggle by supplying goods to the losing side in order to make a commercial profit.

"They may be hoping that by strict neutrality they may be called in to act as mediators and assessors, but there will be no such opportunity. The war will not end in an arbitration or by any outside intervention. It must end in surrender.

Neutrals Are Barred.

"Let it be clear that no nation which stands aloof in cold neutrality while the forces of Baal are being vanquished will have any voice in the terminations.

"In such a country as Italy self-interest as well as righteous indignation will prompt speedy intervention, but the honor of a large section of the English-speaking races is at stake.

"The country of Washington and Lincoln is not asked to fight—that would be madness—but it is providentially offered the option of shortening the period of disaster in a peaceful test by way of declaring its position and then withholding supplies from the cause it disapproves, thereby lessening the pitiable torture and death on the side of both victor and vanquished.

"In thus taking a firm stand and making some sacrifices for what it considers right, the historic dignity of the Stars and Stripes would be immeasurably enhanced.

"(Signed) Oliver Lodge."

VAN HORN IS IN CUSTODY

Is Held on Charge of Defacing Buildings

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

VANCEBORO, Maine, Feb. 4. — Werner Van Horn, who attempted to blow up the C. P. R. bridge, was arrested today on a warrant from the local justice, charging him with defacing buildings in Vanceboro. The injury to the building was the result of the explosion at the ridge.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 — The attempted destruction of the international bridge of the C. P. R. and Maine Central Railways, near the Canadian pier of the St. Croix river bridge, created consternation among officials of the State Department and the British embassy yesterday. Up to a late hour neither the Department nor the embassy had been officially apprised of the crime, but were expecting despatches of an explanatory character.

Secretary of State Bryan expects that the course of the Canadian Government will be to demand at once the extradition of the miscreant, and it is probable that the British embassy will be the first official channel of information on the subject. Extradition will not be long withheld, according to Mr. Bryan.

HOUSE TO DEAL WITH BOOT AND SHOE CONTRACTS

Politics is not the only thing which genial Major Sam Sharpe, M.P., for Uxbridge finds to keep him busy. He is an enthusiastic curler and goes into the semi-finals this afternoon just as soon as there is an ice vacant.

A reporter's enquiries regarding the opening of Parliament and what possible legislative matters might be introduced were cordially considered by Mr. Sharpe this afternoon. Asked about the possible introduction of the bi-lingual question, Mr. Sharpe did not think there was any chance of it being raised as the time was certainly unpropitious when the whole country was more or less involved in the great European struggle.

One matter which might be brought up concerned the boot and shoe contracts given by the government, many orders of which had been found unsatisfactory. Regarding temperance legislation which was urged by the Dominion Alliance, Mr. Sharpe said that in his opinion it should be a purely provincial question and later on it might be brought to the Dominion House.

He felt that at this assembly there would be little controversy, the house being disposed to adopt co-operative measures as much as possible in this the country's time of need.

Major Sharpe will be present when the House meets again on Monday.

JAP CRUISER IS WRECKED

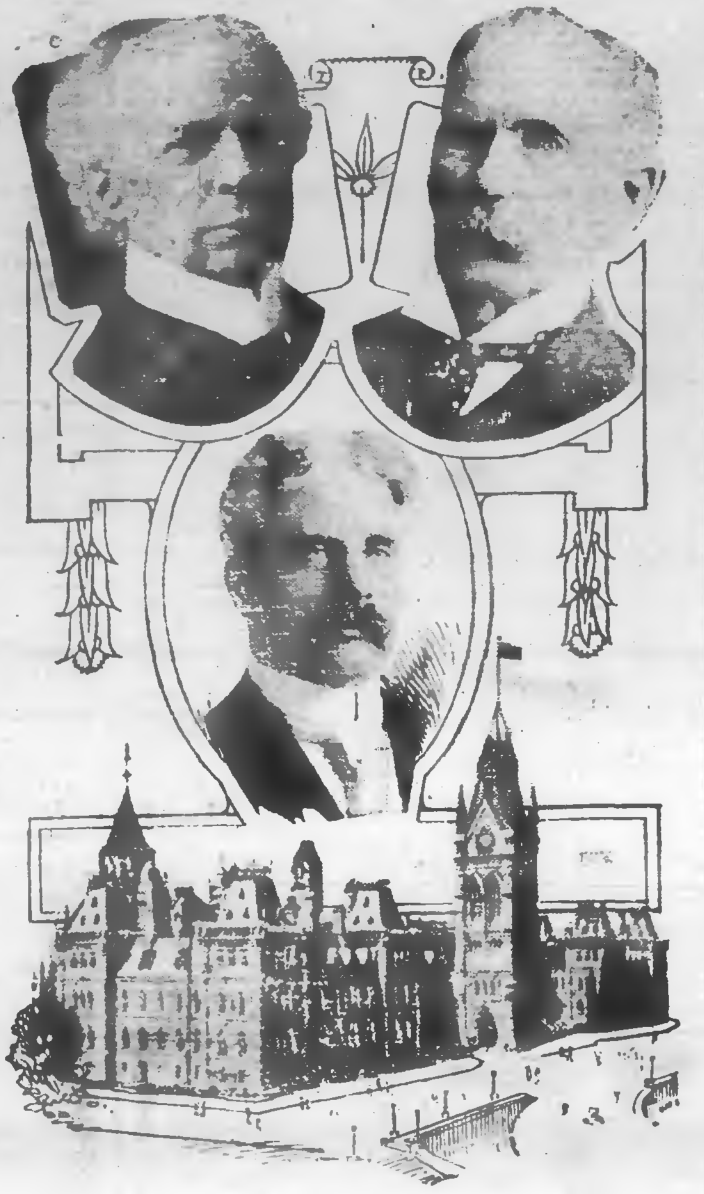
(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Washington, Feb. 4.—A wireless message from Admiral Howard on the flagship San Diego off Ensenada, California, informs the naval department that the Japanese cruiser Asama of ten thousand tons has been wrecked and is breaking up.

CHANGES MADE ON G.T.R. TRAINS

A little shake up among Grand Trunk conductors and brakemen principally, has occurred as the result of which Conductor C. Adams formerly conductor on the "flyer" is now on one of the trains running between Toronto and Port Hope. Baggageman Meyers of the former train is now brakeman with Conductor Adams. Conductor Connors, spare conductor out of Lindsay, is now brakeman on the Lakefield run. As the result of the changes quite a number of employes are pushed back a step.

All the Grand Trunk trains are now operating on time. The snow plough went through on this line at ten o'clock this morning en route to Madoc to clear the line between Madoc and Madoc Junction.



PARLIAMENT OPENED TODAY

For the second time since the outbreak of the war the Dominion Parliament met today for a session which will be historic because of the fact that five of its members are absent on military duties, if for no other reason. One of the important matters which will be dealt with will be a war appropriation, probably one hundred million dollars, to cover the Dominion's share of military expenditure for the next fiscal year. In the group picture above are Premier Borden (centre), Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Speaker, Dr. Sproule above, and a general view of the Parliament Buildings below.

SECOND WAR SESSION OF PARLIAMENT OPENS

Governor General's Guard of Honor Was Equipped With Loaded Rifles and Secret Service Precautions Are Taken

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Canada's second war session or the official fifth session of the twelfth Parliament of Canada was opened by the Governor-General this afternoon. The ceremony lacked little of its accustomed brilliance, save perhaps that the attendance of visitors from outside was very much curtailed owing to the cancellation of the state ball. The Duchess and Princess Patricia accompanied the Duke of Connaught, escorted from Rideau Hall by the Princess Louise Dragoons and Guards. The guard of honor drawn from the Governor-General's foot guard was equipped with loaded rifles, and secret service precautions were carried to a degree unusual on similar occasions before the war broke out.

After the Speech from the Throne, the introduction of new members and some other matters of formality, the House adjourned until Monday.

Four members of Parliament, MacLeod, of York, N. B., Baker, of Brome; Currie, of North Simcoe, and Dr. Beland, of Beauce, are absent on active service. The latter is a prisoner of war in Belgium.

THE PARIS' STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 4. — An official statement today says snow in the Vosges Mountains has begun to melt where there have been several encounters between patrols on skis, and our troops have made slight progress at one or two points. We have been successful in the Woevre district in outpost encounters, in repelling attacks on our trenches near Perthes, and in artillery fighting elsewhere along the front.

Invasion Fixed In September.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The correspondent of The Morning Post at Petrograd telegraphs:

"I hear unofficially that Enver Pasha, foreseeing utter ruin for the Turkish armies, has attempted to despatch valuable documents betimes to Erzerum.

"The Russians, nevertheless, have captured a considerable quantity of valuable documents, among which are letters affording incontestable proof that the Turkish invasion of the Caucasus was a settled thing early in September."

The Truth of the Matter.

Secure Service of Pathologist

Solicitor G. N. Gordon is in Toronto today interviewing Deputy Attorney-General Cartwright and Solicitor C. R. Widdifield will interview Attorney-General I. B. Lucas tomorrow on the possibility of securing the services of a pathologist for the trial of Edgar Grose, charged with the murder of William O'Brien. If a pathologist is secured, it will be necessary to exhume the body and examine the brain.

"You say you're a moving picture here?" "Yes, my wife makes me go to them every night."

REBELS GIVE UP TO THE BRITISH

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PRETORIA, Feb. 4. — Rebel Leader Bezuden Hout and the so-called "Prophet" Vankensburg surrendered to British forces with Lieut.-Col. Kemp, it was officially announced today. The commando which gave up its arms also included forty-eight officers and five hundred burghers. The rebels capitulated at Upington.

The announcement states that additional surrenders are expected tonight, and that Maritz and his men will probably give themselves up before the end of the week.

WM. ROBINSON EXPIRED SUDDENLY ON STREET

Had Just Alighted From Train on His Return From Visit in Lindsay

Not five minutes after alighting from the Lindsay train last night, William Robinson, aged forty-six, dropped dead on Simcoe Street. He had just come from visiting his parents in Lindsay and was to have started work this morning in the Peterborough Lock works where he had been employed as a moulder for the past twenty-four years.

Mr. Robinson after leaving the G. T. R. station came up Simcoe Street. Opposite the Knights of Columbus rooms he was seen to sink to the pavement. He was assited by passersby into the club rooms and Dr. Greer was hurriedly summoned. Death had already occurred however. The remains were removed to Messrs. Lane and Eano's undertaking parlors. The body will be prepared for shipment to Lindsay tonight where the funeral will take place. He leaves one brother, Joseph, residing in the city. Oother relatives reside in Lindsay, Ont. While in Peterborough the late Mr. Robinson made his home with Mr. Ted Cavanagh. He was very highly respected and was associated with the Moulders' Union of the city.

RUSSIAN AVIATORS DROP BOMBS ON GERMAN TRAINS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Official announcement at Petrograd says Russian aviators dropped bombs on German trains and mobilized reserves at several points fifty miles southwest of Warsaw on Tuesday.

A despatch from Geneva says the Germans will withdraw two hundred thousand men from their centre in Poland and use them in an attempt to relieve Przemysl, whose garrison is reported on the verge of starvation.

The Amsterdam Telegraaf says the desperate nature of the fighting on the Yser the past two days, in which the bayonet was used on both sides, is indicated by large convoys of wounded being sent to Germany.

Germans made repeated but unsuccessful attacks on Belgian trenches.

The Daily News' Rotterdam correspondent says the Allies have made steady progress and proved their superiority over the Germans in fighting in the dunes the last few days. The attacks of the Allies have been made with fierceness and suddenness that surprised the Germans, who were only able to beat a retreat after removing limbers from their cannon. In some cases the Allies even captured horses behind the German lines.

WAR ON THE NEWSPAPERS.

SOME thoughtless, unobservant people still persist in thinking that the newspapers are making a fortune out of this war, in spite of the many cases where newspapers have ceased publication. A week or so ago we called attention to the fact that the Winnipeg Telegram, well established as the only Conservative newspaper in Winnipeg, and a leading journal in the Western Provinces, had ceased publishing its morning edition and intended to publish only an evening newspaper. While the war evidently hastened the end of the Morning Telegram, the management became convinced that for disseminating news and carrying advertising, the evening newspaper had acquired so great an advantage that a morning edition was out of the race. The Regina Province, the leading Conservative daily in Saskatchewan, has also abandoned its morning edition. The Vancouver World, on the other hand, an evening newspaper, has gone to the wall. In Medicine Hat both newspapers are printed in one office. Now comes the news that the Detroit Tribune, published for 79 years, and one of the best newspapers in the United States, has terminated its journalistic existence.

While the evening newspaper is superior to the morning newspaper as an advertising medium and as a disseminator of news, there are other reasons why so many newspapers are of late giving up the struggle to keep above water. The war has caused exactly the conditions necessary to weed out a surplus of newspapers, and, naturally, as morning newspapers cost more to produce than evening journals, they are the first to go under. There is no doubt that there have been too many newspapers published. Advertisers are the main support of newspapers, and the demands made upon them have helped to keep up high prices, have made advertising expensive, and have prevented a better kind of newspaper being published. Then, the long period of rising prices in Canada has caused wages to rise in proportion, and this has added materially to the increased cost of producing newspapers. While the former high scales have been maintained in most cases, notwithstanding the trade depression, yet, in a few instances, where there was no organization, rates were reduced in proportion to revenue, with beneficial results, in that business firms were thus permitted to operate more regularly and with a larger force than they otherwise would have used. Still, rising wages has been an important factor in increasing the cost of producing newspapers and of narrowing the margin of profit. Some merchants felt they could not afford to advertise, while those who did had to raise prices. The competition drove some merchants to the wall, reduced advertising space used, increased the cost of producing newspapers, so that, when the war came, with its terrible effects on trade, there was not margin enough for many newspapers, as well as other businesses, to continue their existence.

With rents falling, the prices of commodities growing less, and so many men being without work, the indications point to a reduction in the cost of living. Certainly, if the revenue from property does not rise to its former level, and this does not appear likely, recent increases in assessments will likely be reduced. At least there will likely be efforts made, with good reasons shown, for reducing taxes. Just how far this effect will materialize will depend on the length of the war and its resultant effects, so that if the cost of living is reduced, the war will no doubt have a clarifying effect on trade and labour conditions. The surplus of employers or publishers will likely be weeded out. There will likely be greater patronage of those remaining. The decreased demand for hands will mean a reduction, in some lines at least, in the cost of labour. What is ominous about the outlook is that the end of the war will not mean a change for the better. We do not look for the end of the war this year, but, even if it were to end, the damage to business and to labour and to high prices has been done. The return of thousands and millions of men, now under arms, to civilian occupations, will not cause a rise in prices, nor increases in wages, nor a compensating demand for goods, but will have an influence quite the reverse. Under the adverse conditions caused by the war, it would be a pity if labour should be disturbed. Nevertheless such might happen, and, if the best interests of labour and of business are to be maintained, a fair adjustment to prevailing conditions will go far to ameliorate the difficulties arising out of the present state of affairs. Very close study of tendencies in business is necessary to avoid disaster.

THE AUSTRIAN ministerial decree reducing the proportion of wheat or rye flour in breadmaking from 80 to 50 per cent. comes into force next Saturday. Complaint is made by the Burgomaster of Vienna of society women who still enjoy whipped cream with their coffee and who still have fine food.

IT SHOULD COME VIA PETERBOROUGH.

THE REPORT of the Ontario Highways Commission that the Ontario Government spend $30,000,000 on good roads throughout the Province, will not be adopted by the Government. The cabinet has decided not to introduce any bill asking for permission to borrow $30,000,000 for road purposes. Good roads legislation is still under consideration, but the measure to be brought down will not cover more than a few million dollars.

After giving the question considerable attention and dealing with the matter from the standpoint of providing work for the unemployed, the Government has reached the decision that the borrowing of $30,000,000 at the present time for road purposes is inadvisable, and that even if it were done, it would not result in a proper solution of the problem of unemployment. The legislation to be introduced will provide for maintenance of roads, so that counties can proceed with any of their works under more favourable conditions than formerly.

However, it is understood that the main highway east of Toronto will be constructed. There has been no announcement as yet as to what cities and towns will be included in the route of the eastern highway, but it is only reasonable to say that it should come by way of Peterborough. There will likely be many who will advocate the lake-shore route, taking in such places as Oshawa, Cobonrg, Port Hope, Napanee and Belleville, but there are better reasons for building a main thoroughfare for Eastern Ontario through the centre of the business district. If that were done, the line would touch places larger in population and equally as important as those mentioned, and, what is also important, it would be in a position to receive feeder roads from the north and south. It would serve a larger number of people, open up a larger expanse of country, and would be farther away from the boundary. The City Council would do well to look into this matter without delay and to place before the Government the advantages of having this new highway pass through Peterborough.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE MAYOR of Berlin has announced that all inhabitants of the capital are to go on rations so far as bread is concerned. The allowance for each individual is four pounds of bread a week. This is nothing to the pinch that will likely happen later. We may add that this has no reference to Berlin, Ontario.

THE MONTREAL MAIL says: The Peterborough Review calls for more ploughing matches. After the last snowfall there seemed to be quite a few going on in these parts. That's the way to throw cold water on a good thing—but, anyway, Montreal turns most good things down cold.

GERMAN newspapers announce an official order directing that all stocks of copper, tin, aluminum, nickel, antimony and lead are now to be reserved for the use of the army. Evidently, Britain is checking Germany's imports of some of these metals, particularly copper.

THE BRITISH TROOPS on the firing line celebrated the Kaiser's birthday very fittingly by blowing up a house used as a magazine for bombs and grenades. This was accomplished by shelling the house, and the explosive nuts at once broke of their own accord.

GERMANY recently purchased a quantity of grain in Roumania, but can't get it delivered. Hard lines, old top.

A Comparison.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Germany can read her possibilities in the present war from the actualities of the Franco-Prussian War.

Would Germany have expected to win the Franco-Prussian War if that war had lasted as long as the present war has lasted without securing more advantageous results than Germany can now claim?

Germany mobilized on the 15th of July, 1870. Five weeks later one of the French field armies was imprisoned in Metz, the other destroyed, and the Germans were free to march upon Paris. The Germans had won six great battles, or more than one overwhelming victory for every week of the war's duration. On January 28th, 1871, Paris capitulated.

Today Germany has been at war for almost as many weeks as the weeks that intervened between July 15th, the date of mobilization in 1870, until January 28th, the date of the fall of Paris in 1871. If six months of the Franco-Prussian War had given Germany nothing more than Germany has achieved in six months of the present war, the Franco-Prussian War could not have ended in victory for Germany. There would have been no fall of Paris and no conquest of France in 1870-71 if the French could have restricted the German advance then as the Allies have restricted the German advance now.

Warship Names

(Newcastle-on-Tyne Chronicle.)

The story goes that two old salts were moving about a dockyard when they noticed the British cruiser, Psyche. "Well, look at that name, Tom!" said one; "that's a rummy way, ain't it, to spell fish—P-s-y-c-h-e?"

"There are lots of other "rummy" names among the ships of the British navy, but Jack has a way of adapting them to his own liking. Thus, the Bellerophon in the old days was called the "Billy Ruffian," while the Agamemnon was dubbed "Eggs and Bacon" The Magnificent was known as the "Maggi," the Hannibal as the "Hannah Ball," the Jupiter as the "Jew Peter," the Hermione as the "Hermy One," and the Andromache as the "Andrew Mark."

Britain a Foreign Country.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Canadians sometimes very properly resent being described as colonials in the British press. But Canada would seem to get its own back by describing the United Kingdom as a foreign country. See current Trade and Commerce blue book: United Kingdom and United States under heading of "Trade of Foreign Countries." What will the foreigners think of the colonials? Moreover, we tax British goods just as if they were of foreign manufacture.

Hardly.

(London Tit-Bits.)

An English colonel, at kit inspection, said to Private Flanigan:

"Ha! Yes, shirts, socks, flannels, all very good. Now, can you assure me that all the articles of your kit have buttons on them?"

"No, sir," said Private Flanigan, hesitating.

"How's that, sir?"

"Ain't no buttons on the towels, sir."

THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—It is a pity the Examiner cannot refrain from making its sporadic attempts against the policy of the Government of the day, so generally regarded essential during the present world-wide crisis.

Let it read, learn and inwardly digest the folowing excerpt from the Glasgow News:

"Today the one concern of all Britons is to strengthen the arm of the executive in dealing with the nation's adversaries, and they can best do that by refraining as completely as possible from controversy of any sort or degree. The country asks for no appeal. It simply wishes the statesmen who hapened to be in office when the supreme crisis came, to go on zealously with their work, and whatever it has to say concerning their conduct now or in the past as regards this matter, it will be content to leave unsaid until a more suitable season."

Yours truly,
WAR CRISIS.

Canada's Big Share

Up to date and including the shipment which left by the steamer Calcutta from Halifax just before Christmas, Canada has sent to the suffering Belgians almost one million dollars worth of goods, not to say anything about cash contributions.

Ontario, according to Consul Rochereau de la Sabliere, who is in charge of the contribution in the province, has responded splendidly to the appeal for help at this time. The consulate has been a very busy place arranging the goods and having them re-shipped to Montreal and Halifax to be sent abroad.

The grand total in figures given out by the central executive committee for the victims of the war in Belgium, amounts to $906,865.

The first shipment made on October 29, per S. S. Tremorvah, included 1,700 tons of potatoes, 140 tons of flour, 4,000 cases of clothing, 1,000 drums of cheese, 50 barrels of salted meat, 200 barrels salted fish, and 6,000 cases of canned goods. The Doric carried on Nov. 28, 12,600 bags of flour, 11,000 barrels of potatoes, 1,100 cases navy bread, 1,500 boxes dried apples, 2,000 cases of canned goods, 5,000 packages of clothing. This week besides 112,000 bushels of wheat, the gift of Ontario and Quebec, the Calcutta steamed out with 84 carloads of flour, dried apples, clothing and miscellaneous goods. Besides all this there have been weekly shipments from Montreal, the headquarters of the relief committee.

With the available goods promised, it is expected that 1,500 cases will go on the fourth steamer. The executive, however, needs money to buy wheat for which it has had many pathetic appeals.

MAY TRY TO LAND MEN.

Activity at Wilhelmshafen Possible Sign of a Big Raid.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The Exchange Telegraph Co. has received the following despatch from its Copenhagen correspondent:

"Emperor William's visit to Wilhelmshafen is believed to be in connection with the warning of the German Admiralty to neutral shipping, that great activity may be expected on the north and western coasts as a result of German attempts to stop Britain's transportation of troops and munitions, as announced Tuesday:

"This is interpreted here as a prologue to important events at sea.

"It is rumored that Germany will try to engage the British fleet in southern waters, while another squadron goes northward at full speed with the object of covering the landing of troops in England.

"Large contingents of troops are reported to have been mobilized at Wilhelmshafen at the time of the Scarborough raid."

Brilliant Venus.

When she is at her brightest Venus is so bright that if you knew where in the sky to look for her you could easily see her in the daytime, and at night she sheds so much light that where other lighting is excluded she will cast a plain shadow. She is about five times as bright as Jupiter ever gets, ten times as bright as Sirius, the largest of the fixed stars, and a hundred times as bright as the ordinary first magnitude stars. Her reign is, however, short, for, as she makes three revolutions to the earth's two, she rapidly passes us and begins to fade away.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

Ninety-nine men out of a hundred would have taken the money—would have jumped at it. Fifty thousand dollars! It might be years before he would be worth a quarter as much. And here he was throwing it out of the window like a quixotic fool. It was not in him to betray John Mort. It was simply that he was incapable of it. He almost wished that he was not. It was not principle nor religion nor anything—but a fact. He himself was quite helpless. Volition lay altogether beyond him. It was something he could not do, that was all.

At home there was a telegram awaiting him. It read:

Matthew Broughton, Care Mrs. Sattane,
Manaswan, Conn.:

Experts pronounce ruby flawed and worth $80 only. Firm faces substantial loss on advance already made. If accrued interest be not promptly paid shall dispose of ring at end of statutory period. Telegraph instructions.

SNOOD & HARGREAVES.

It was a blow to make any man stagger; defenseless, his first instinct was to hide in his room. Matt locked the door and with desperation read the telegram again. Good God, all he had then was the money in his pocket!

Were it not for Chris he would have been less unmanned. The sea is a hard master, but it will always feed and clothe a man who has made it his trade. He couldn't starve—it wasn't that. But it meant losing Chris—abandoning all thought and dreams of her as his wife.

How did he know that he wasn't being cheated? There was no flaw in the ruby. Everything John Mort had was of the best, of the finest. "Experts pronounce ruby flawed!" The chap would have paid him $5,500 then and there for the ring. He was an expert himself, that bald man. He hadn't dillydallied or anything, but had been eagerness itself to clinch the bargain. It was inconceivable that he had been mistaken. He was a thief, that was what he was, a low, contemptible thief, who had discovered how to get the ring for a thousand—the thousand originally advanced.

He raged up and down the room in impotent wrath. People knocked and spoke through the keyhole, but he disregarded them. One, alone, could have been of the least solace to him, and she was lying in that great, grim house beyond those miles of dripping woods

But she would know soon enough—too soon. A few days and they would say goodby for the last time, forever, unless a miracle happened. The general was the only person capable of figuring in a miracle. But Matt built no hopes there. It was impossible to associate "Bless you, my children," with that keen, proud face—rather, a withering sentiment and a glance that would strike like a knife. The miracle would be how to get out alive—how to escape with the lest shred of self respect.

No, with $4,000, with Dagganconrt and the aid of Chris' intrepid spirit, it had been within the bounds of reason. The rose could have been plucked, general or no general, and carried in triumph to that Kentucky farm. But $80 was eighty—nothing.

By supper time he had somewhat recovered his composure and, though very pale, contrived in other respects to conceal the crushing nature of his misfortune. He announced gravely that he had received bad news and begged that he might be excused from giving the particulars.

After supper he got his overcoat and settled himself in a dry corner of the veranda, where his reflections were suddenly arrested by the stoppage of an automobile at the gate and the descent of a vaguely familiar figure. It was an immense limousine, not unlike the one he had associated with Mr. Kay's departure the night before. In fact, the vaguely familiar figure was Mr. Kay himself, advancing hurriedly up the board walk.

"Brought the mint with you?" asked Matt.

"Why, certainly I have," exclaimed Mr. Kay with undisguised eagerness. "I am ready to raise our offer to a hundred thousand, and shall be most pleased to settle the matter at once on that basis."

"I gave you my decision last night," Matt said. "Or rather I told you I hadn't the information you wanted. You surely can not have any better proof of it than this. What man in his senses would refuse a hundred thousand dollars? I know I wouldn't. I was only joking when I raised you. It was only to see how far you would go. Mr. Kay, you are trying to buy something I haven't got, and there it is in a nutshell."

"Then who was the violinist you referred to in that newspaper account? The man who played on the ship, and quelled the savages when they were ready to attack you? Answer me that, please. It is very important—it is the key to everything."

Matt started; he had completely forgotten that chance reference to John Mort; the indiscretion of it now took his breath away. What an ass he had been ever to let Hunter Hoyt extort it from his lips!

"Answer me that," continued the stranger, with a gleam of his yellow teeth, and clutching at Matt's arm again.

"Oh, the violinist?" returned Matt, pretending to laugh. "He was nothing to get excited about. In reality, he wasn't a violinist at all, but played the concertina, and he didn't quell anybody. That was all the newspaper men's work, like most of the interview. It was simply that we had a scare once down in New Britain and kept him playing till we could get at our pistols."

"Then there was nothing in it?"

"Well, there had been a massacre in the next bay, and"—

"But no violinist? No one at all resembling the miniature I showed you?"

"No, no! He was a Dutchman named Van Tassel and had been a waiter in a Sydney restaurant. He was a hot tempered little fellow and had hit somebody over the head with a bottle. That's how we came to take him—paid us £20 to smuggle him out of his scrape."

"I see that you can't help us," said Mr. Kay after a pause. "It's disappointing to have to admit it. I wish I could persuade you to go before my principals and tell them what you've told me. They blame me for my failure—are not convinced, you know—think they could have got this information out of you—this information that isn't there. Perhaps I might make it worth your while to come—out of my own pocket, you know—out of my own pocket. Would you consider it?"

"Where do you want me to go?"

"Only to the railway station, to a private car we have sidetracked there. You could show them that we are on a wrong scent—support me in what I have already reported. I should be glad to pay $50. Surely that would be worth half an hour of your time? What do you say?"

Matt hung back. He was confused, undecided and not unconscious of a vague apprehension. Yet the $50 was terribly tempting. It would allow him to extend his stay in Manaswan; to put off his departure for a couple of weeks; to be near Chris—to see her, to talk to her, to linger in paradise before he would be cast out of it forever. Nor would it be any disloyalty to John Mort, but merely a repetition of evasion and falsehood, possibly even helpful now that he was better forewarned. As to their doing him any harm that was preposterous. Threaten, perhaps? Well, let them threaten! One could stand a lot of threatening for $50.

"Yes, I'll go for $50," he said. "Only if you don't mind I'd rather have it in advance."

Mr. Kay hastened to count out two twenties and a ten, and then seemed to find it an infliction that Matt should suggest any further delay. It was only to run upstairs and leave the money and his purse under the pillow, but Mr. Kay chafed and demurred, and Matt on his return found him waiting with ill suppressed impatience.

"Come along," he cried, and, gripping Matt's arm as though not to allow him to escape again, hurried down the board walk to the automobile. A moment later they were both inside and the car swiftly moving.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Private Car.

WHATEVER misgivings Matt may have had as to their real destination were set at rest by the clang of a locomotive bell and the noise of heavy freight cars being moved and shunted. What was there to fear with such men all about them, busily watchful, and likely at any time to dart up from the unlikeliest places? Nor was there anything alarming in the sight of the side tracked car.

Mr. Kay begged Matt to wait at the steps while he went inside to announce their arrival. It was a good ten minutes before he returned, and then, in a state of such discomposure that Matt knew not what to make of it. Rasping out something that meant to follow him, he turned again, apparently confident that Matt would obey. Matt found himself in a narrow passage, bordered on one hand by a row of staterooms that ran half the length of the car. The door of every one was closed, and the passage itself ended in darkness. In imagination he saw crouching figures behind their doors; hushed and stealthy figures, mutely signaling from room to room, and ready to leap forth as soon as he was well within their power. Mr. Kay paused at the last door, opened it and beckoned Matt within. It was an ordinary Pullman stateroom and bore no sign of any recent occupancy. There was no break in the serried white towels overhead. The racks were empty, and the pegs supported nothing, but the fact that the blinds were drawn struck oddly on Matt's attention.

He seated himself and watched Mr. Kay drawing the baize curtain across the open doorway. That the latter did not shut the door, but was taking particular pains with the curtain, increased Matt's uneasiness. The action was significant and again suggestive of stealth and mystery. Even after he had settled himself opposite Matt Mr. Kay had to jump up once more and again adjust the curtain, as though his previous efforts had left him dissatisfied.

"Now, tell us what you want," he said in a voice that shook a little. "Ask for the moon—anything—and we'll get it for you."

"In return for something I haven't got?" inquired Matt. "Can't you get it into your head once and for all that I don't know the man you're after?"

"Broughton, that isn't true."

"Oh, yes, it is."

"You positively refuse $100,000 for this information?"

"I tell you once more I haven't got it."

"But I offered you $100,000 and you refused it?"

"Yes."

A rustle of the green baize made Matt feel that the question was less for Mr. Kay's benefit than that of some hidden person. The sensation was disagreeable. He would have given a great deal at that moment to have had a loaded revolver in his pocket. Mr. Kay's ill concealed agitation and his almost terrified glances at the curtain were disconcerting, to say the least of it.

"Would it help at all," continued the latter, "or give us a possible basis for agreement if I could prove to you that you do know the gentleman we are seeking?"

"But you couldn't!" cried Matt.

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Kay, producing something from his pocket. "Look at this, for instance."

Matt, in utter astonishment, gazed at the ring lying in Mr. Kay's palm. With a cry, he picked it up and examined it. It was John Mort's ring—the ring those rascally jewelers had filched from him.

"What do you say to that?" asked Mr. Kay, gently, but firmly regaining possession of the ring and slipping it over his little finger.

"Nothing!" exclaimed Matt furiously. "Who gave it to you?"

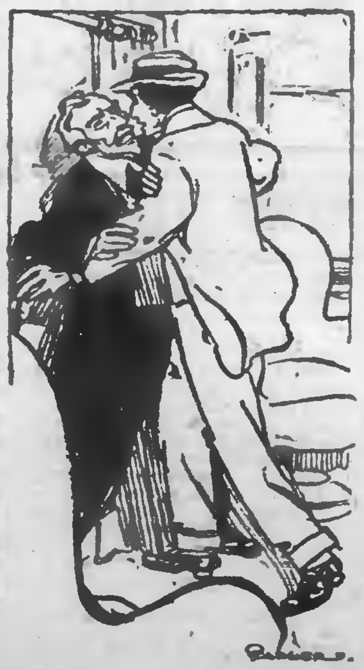
"I shall not tell you."

Matt had risen. He was in a white heat at the way he had been victimized, at his own helplessness, at the deliberate villainy of the whole proceedings. Had these people robbed him of his ring for no other reason than to make him penniless and to place him, as they thought, at their mercy? God only knew how they had got the ring from Snood & Hargreaves, but there it was, glittering on that smooth scoundrel's finger, and as like as not an international provocation to a violence they would craftily turn to account. But they would learn their mistake—learn that all the rings or blood money in the world could not swerve him an inch.

"I've finished with you," he said hoarsely. "Goodby!"

He turned toward the doorway, no longer afraid, but in the humor to fling back the curtain and stride right through the eavesdroppers. If they blocked him so much the worse for them. He was a powerful man. He could hit like a sledgehammer when his blood was up. He welcomed the chance to land some smashes on those unseen faces and drive them before him like sheep. But he had scarcely moved before Mr. Kay, with incredible agility, had leaped in front of him, slamming the door shut and locking it, confronting him as he did so with a stare of abject terror.

"Don't, don't!" he screamed out incoherently. "They're crazy! They haven't any sense! I won't be a party to it! It's criminal, and I won't be a party to it! I won't be a party to anything criminal!"



"Get out of my way or I'll strangle you!"

"Let me out!" cried Matt, with a suffocating sense of being trapped, and struggling for the doorknob. "Get out of my way or I'll strangle you!"

"No, no!" expostulated Mr. Kay, resisting him like a maniac and sobbing while he spoke. "You don't understand. They're determined to get the secret out of you. They're putting themselves within the criminal law, and I'll be no party to it. Good God, Broughton, I'm trying to save you—to—save myself! Once open this door and they'll tear you to pieces!"

He was interrupted by a loud murmur outside, and the door shook under a heavy impact; shook and shook, threatening at every instant to burst in. Mr. Kay collapsed on a seat.

"It was none of my doing," he moaned. "You'll bear witness to that, Broughton—you'll bear witness to that when they've got us all in the dock. The fools!" he raged in a sudden outburst. "The crazy fools!"

TO THE TEA TRADE OF CANADA

The year 1914 has passed, and during it we have sold the largest quantity of "SALADA" that we have in any year since it was first introduced to the public in 1892.

We have prepared a chart (printed below), which shows at a glance the vast business that has been built up on "QUALITY FOREMOST." In drawing your attention to this, we respectfully ask you to specially note the record of 1914. Notwithstanding great obstacles, our output last year was above the previous year's record—and this in spite of the raise in price, and the fact that part of the time we were without stock, and therefore unable to fill orders. The difficulties of the tea trade in 1914 were so unique that a brief survey of the facts may prove interesting.

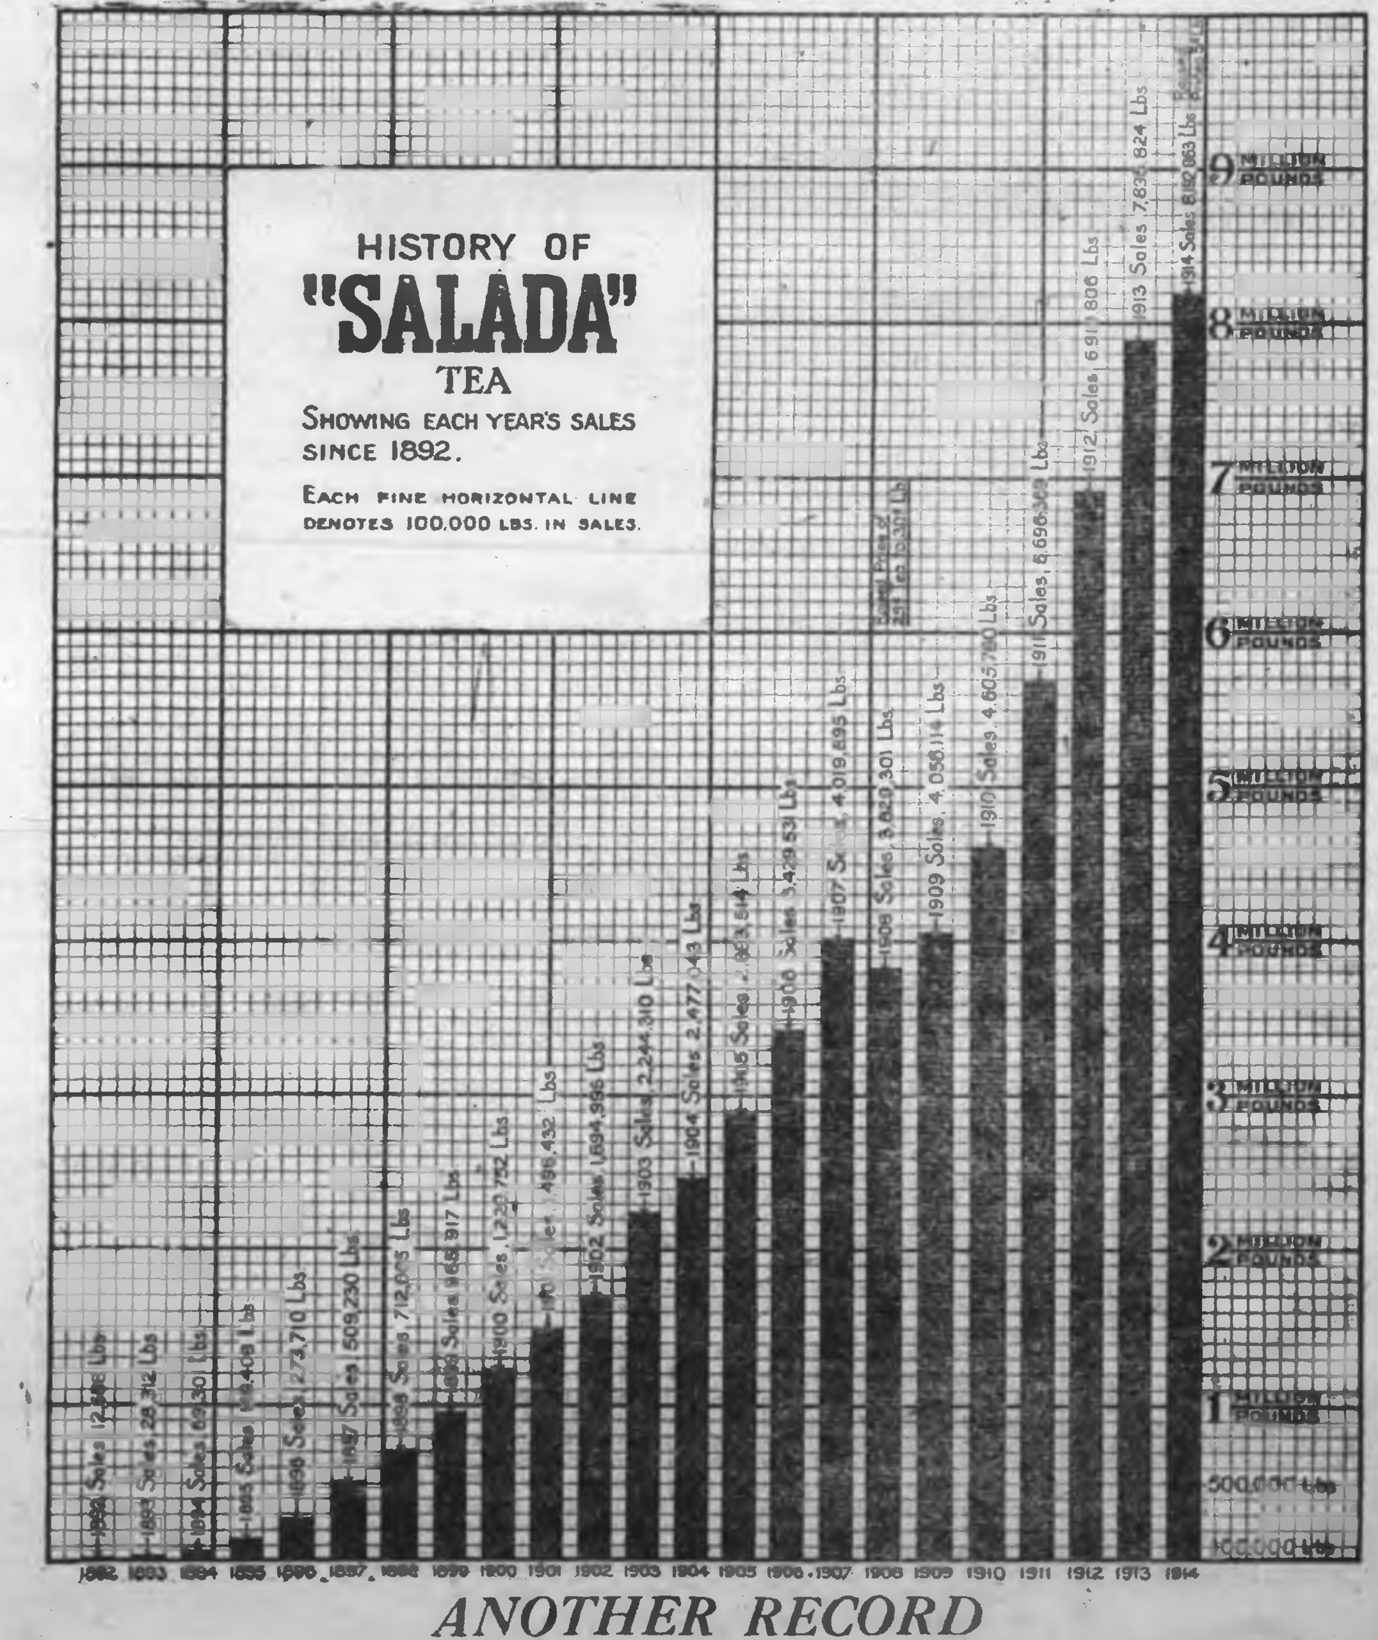
When the year was little more than half spent war broke out in Europe. Our first misfortune was the seizure at Gibraltar of the German steamship "Schneefels," which sailed from Colombo at the end of July with a large consignment of tea for us. Our next blow was the imposition of an embargo on tea in Great Britain, which prevented all tea from leaving that country. At that time we had in London 9,600 chests, bought at auction, paid for and ready to ship, and we could neither get our tea nor our money. A few days later word was received of the sinking of the steamships "Diplomat" and "City of Winchester" by the German cruiser "Emden." These two steamers had nine million pounds of tea on board. As a result, further sailings from Ceylon and India were prohibited by the Admiralty.

Under these circumstances Canada would have been without tea in less than two months. Fortunately, later on, the embargo was removed, and we were able to get our stock in London, and after five weeks, the Emden having left the Bay of Bengal, the Admiralty permitted the resumption of sailings from India and Ceylon. Thus we were relieved of our most apparent difficulties.

However, in the trade, it is a well-known fact that Canadians have been served for years with a quality of tea at prices unequalled in the world, and the wholesale tea business in Canada has proved disastrous to many and unprofitable to all. During the past five years the market has been working steadily upwards, until just before the war we had to pay the highest prices in twenty-five years. Having in addition, extra freights, war risks and still higher prices for our quality, we had only three options—lower our quality, go out of business or advance prices. We chose the latter. In spite of this, and our inability at times, to fill orders through shortness of stock, you will note by the chart that our increase in sales in 1914 over 1913 was 296,239 pounds, an increase in consumption of more than 1,000 pounds for every working day of the year.

Last year there was imported into the Dominion 37 million pounds of all kinds of tea. We sold in "SALADA" packets nearly one-quarter of this total, viz., 8,192,063 pounds.

We look forward to a still larger trade this year, and solicit your valued co-operation in our mutual interests. We readily acknowledge that other teas show you a greater profit than SALADA, but you must admit that no other tea gives anything like the satisfaction to your customers. We are giving a character of tea the consumer cannot get elsewhere than in "SALADA" packets, and the twenty-three years it has been on sale proves that consumers appreciate "SALADA" quality.



ANOTHER RECORD

The sales of "SALADA" for the first fortnight of 1915 have been greater than the sales for any previous fortnight in our 23 years' history.

Oven Cleanliness.

An oven that is constantly in use requires to be kept scrupulously clean. It should not only have the shelves scrubbed out with soda occasionally, but in addition the shelves should be painted with quicklime two or three times a year. An oven treated in this way never becomes caked with grease and there is no unpleasant smell when it is being used.

Idiotic Interrogations.

Did you ever see a smile on the mouth of a river?

Well, asking another, did you ever see a corn on the foot of a hill?

Or, when it comes to that, a frown on the face of the earth?

And how about a wink in the eye of a needle?

To say nothing of the muscles in an arm of the sea?

Round the Circle.

The object of the average normal nation is to have more prosperity to raise more taxes to build more battleships to seek more markets to sell more goods to have more prosperity to raise more taxes to build more battleships to seek more markets to sell more goods to have more prosperity and so on until something unforeseen happens.

Expert Horse Thieves.

The Cossacks own their horses, and if they lose their mount they have to provide themselves with another. It is a favorite sport with them to obtain remounts from the enemy's camp by stalking at night. They rarely fail to turn up with one, two, or three selected mounts, and they never say anything about how many of the enemy they kill to get them.

SWITZERLAND IS WARLIKE

She Will Fight for Food Neutrality or no Neutrality

GENEVA, Feb. 4.—The new Swiss Minister to Italy, M. De Planta, made an important statement to Rome papers declaring that Switzerland was ready to fight for her food, neutrality or no neutrality. De Planta said:

"Our national organization essentially is defensive and neutrality which we always observed cannot be broken except in three cases:

1. A violation of this neutrality by a third party.
2. An attempt on our territorial integrity.
3. A menace to starve us by preventing food from reaching across our frontiers."

This is the first time a Swiss in his official capacity has stated that Switzerland would consider the stoppage of food supplies a casus belli. Swiss papers strongly uphold him.

PASTORAL LETTER OF CARDINAL MERCIER

Described Devastation He Saw on Visits to Desolated Places in Belgium and Names Priests Whom the German Military Authorities "Put to Death"

The Daily Review has received a copy of the pastoral letter of Cardinal Mercier of Belgium—a letter for which he was "detained" in his residence and forbidden to preside at a religious ceremony.

The translation is printed by Burns & Oates, Ltd., of London, and permission is given the Daily Review to print such parts of it as we care to use. The letter, which has caused a world-wide sensation, was seized by the German military authorities at the Belgium printer's office and 15,000 copies destroyed. Priests were forbidden to read it. The treatment of the cardinal called forth a protest from the Catholic world.

Cardinal Mercier's letter consists of about 9,000 words and, therefore, is too long to print in its entirety in this newspaper. The greater part of the communication is given up to the most exalted religious sentiments and is evidently intended to comfort the stricken Belgian people. It calls upon them in the strongest terms to look to God in their sufferings.

Comparatively a very small part is given up to patriotism and to the devastation and other acts of the German military, but this part caused the cardinal's virtual arrest and the burning of the printed copies of the letter. Here are the parts which moved the Germans to attempt to suppress the cardinal.

DESTRUCTION AS HE SAW IT.

"Better than any other man, perhaps, do I know what our unhappy country has undergone. Hearts are desolate; dire poverty spreads, anguish increases.

"At Malines, at Antwerp, the people of two great cities have been given over, the one for six hours, the other for thirty-four hours, of a continuous bombardment, to the throes of death.

I have traversed the greater part of the districts most terribly devastated in my diocese; and the ruins I beheld, and the ashes, were more dreadful than I, prepared by the saddest of forebodings, could have imagined.

"Other parts of my diocese, which I have not yet had time to visit, have in like manner been laid waste. Churches, schools, asylums, hospitals, convents in great numbers, are in ruins. Entire villages have all but disappeared. At Werchter-Wackerzeel, for instance, out of three hundred and eighty homes, a hundred and thirty remain; at Tremeloo two-thirds of the village are overthrown; at Bucken, out of a hundred houses, twenty are standing; at Schaffen one hundred and eighty-nine houses out of two hundred are destroyed—eleven still stand.

CARDINAL DESCRIBES WHAT HAPPENED AT LOUVAIN.

"At Louvain the third part of the buildings are down; one thousand and seventy-four dwellings have disappeared; on the town land and in the suburbs, 1,823 houses have been burned.

"In this dear city of Louvain, perpetually in my thoughts, the magnificent church of St. Peter will never recover its former splendor. The ancient college of St. Ives, the art schools, the consular and commercial schools of the university, the old markets, our rich library with its collections, its unique and unpublished manuscripts, its archives, its gallery of great portraits of illustrious rectors, chancellors, professors, dating from the time of its foundation, which preserved for masters and students alike a noble tradition and were an incitement in their studies—all this accumulation of intellectual, of historic and of artistic riches, the fruit of the labors of five centuries—all is in the dust.

"Thousands of Belgian citizens have been deported to the prisons of Germany, to Munsterlagen, to Celle, to Madgeburg. At Munsterlagen alone 3,100 civil prisoners were numbered. History will tell of the physical and moral torments of their long martyrdom.

"Hundreds of innocent men were shot. I possess no complete necrology; but I know that there were ninety-one shot at Aerschot, and that there, under pain of death, their fellow-citizens were compelled to dig their graves. In the Louvain group of communes 176 persons, men and women, old men and sucklings, rich and poor, in health and sickness, were shot or burned.

NAME MANY PRIESTS WHO WERE "PUT TO DEATH."

"In my diocese alone I know that thirteen priests or religious were put to death. Their brothers in religion or in the priesthood will wish to know their names. Here they are: Dupierreux of the Society of Jesus, Brothers Sebastian and Allard of the congregation of the Josephites; Brother Candide of the congregation of the Brothers of Mercy; Father Maximin, Capuchin, and Father Vincent, conventual; Lombaerts, parish priest at Boven-Loo; Goris, parish priest at Autgaerden; Carette, professor at the Episcopal college at Louvain; De Clerck, parish priest at Bucken; Dergent, parish priest at Gelrode; Wouters Jean, parish priest at Pont-Brule. We have reason to believe that the parish priest of Herent, Van Bladel, an old man of 71, was also killed; until now, however, his body has not been found.

"One of these, the parish priest of Gelrode, suffered, I believe, a veritable martyrdom. I made a pilgrimage to his grave, and, amid the little flock which so lately he had been feeding with the zeal of an apostle, there did I pray to him that from the height of heaven he would guard his parish, his diocese, his country.

"We can neither number our dead nor compute the measure of our ruins. And what would it be if we turned our sad steps toward Liege, Namur, Audenne, Dimines, Charleroi, and elsewhere?

I have said that thirteen ecclesiastics had been shot within the diocese of Malines. There were, to my own actual personal knowledge, more than thirty in the diocese of Namur, Tournai and Liege; Schlogel, parish priest of Hastiere; Gille, parish priest of Couvin; Pieret, curate at Etalle; Alexandre, curate at Mussy-la-Ville; Marechal, seminarist at Maissin; the Rev. Father Gillet, benedictine of Maredsous; the Rev. Father Nicolas, premonstratensian of the Abbey of Leffe; two brothers of the same abbey; one brother of the Congregation of Oblates; Poskin, parish priest of Surice; Hotlet, parish priest of Les Alloux; Georges, parish priest of Tintigny; Glouden, parish priest of Latour; Zenden, retired parish priest at Latout; Jacques, a priest; Druet, parish priest of Acoz; Pollart, parish priest of Roselies; Labeye, parish priest of Blegny-Trembleur; Thielen, parish priest of Haccourt; Janssen, parish priest of Heure le Romain; Chabot, parish priest of Foret; Dossogne, parish priest of Hockay; Reusonnet, curate of Olme; Bilande, chaplain of the institute of deaf-mutes at Bouge; Docq, a priest, and others.

Other important extracts from the cardinal's letter are as follows:

Belgium was bound in honor to defend her own independence. She kept her oath. The other powers were bound to respect and to protect her neutrality. Germany violated her oath; England kept hers.

I . . . speak to you . . . of what is your duty and of what may be your hope. That duty I shall express in two words: Patriotism and endurance.

The authority of that power (the Germans) is no lawful authority. Therefore, in soul and conscience, you owe it neither respect, nor attachment, nor obedience. Belgium is no more a German province than Galicia is a Russian province. NEVERTHELESS, THE OCCUPIED PORTION OF OUR COUNTRY IS IN A POSITION IT IS COMPELLED TO ENDURE.

God will save Belgium. . . . nay, rather He is saving her. . . . Let us acknowledge that we needed a lesson in patriotism.

War for the sake of war is a crime. War is justifiable only of it is the necessary means for securing peace.

Not Poetical.

"He jests at scars who never felt a wound.'

"Oh, does he, indeed?"

"Well, he couldn't have been talking about my fussy old uncle, who acts as though the world were coming to an end when he gets a pin scratch."

Avoids Monotony.

KAISER TO MAKE ANOTHER ATTEMPT ON WEST FRONT

Determined Offensive is Expected Within the Next Few Days Along Entire Line, But Allied Generals Are Confident the Effort is Foredoomed to Failure.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The Daily Telegraph has the following from C. F. Bertelli, dated Paris:

"I learn from official sources that the Germans are expected to assume a determined offensive all along the line in Flanders and France within the next few days.

"The military authorities here are awaiting the attack with calm confidence, convinced that it is foredoomed to failure."

In a desperate effort to halt the French through Champagne and the adjacent Argonne region, the Germans during the past 24 hours have made seven distinct counter-attacks without success in a single venture, according to the French War Office reports received from Paris yesterday. The official statement from Berlin says the French were on the offensive near Perthes (in the Rheims sector), and their attacks were repulsed.

The German efforts were directed against the French positions west of Perthes-les-Hurlus, north of Mesnil-les-Hurlus, north of Massiges, and against Hill No. 200, near Perthes, in the Champagne district, and against Bagatelle in the Argonne, where attacks were made at 3 p.m. and at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, and a final assault during the night. Every attempt was repulsed, says Paris.

Of late the Germans in the region of La Bassee and Lens have adopted a new form of attack. They open terrific musketry and machine-gun fusillades, which swept the crest of the French and British trenches, forcing the allies to hug the walls of their earthworks, but almost never do they follow these fusillades with infantry attacks. Yesterday's afternoon report chronicles the silencing of one such effort by the use of artillery. The French batteries' fire quite overcame the German riflemen, and they soon were content to remain quiet.

The French War Office said last night:

"There is nothing of particular importance to report, except that in Champagne three German attacks were all repulsed to the west of Perthes, north of Mesnil-les-Hurlus and to the north of Massiges.

"In the Argonne a fresh attack at Bagatelle was repulsed by our troops during the night of Feb. 2-3.

The afternoon bulletin issued at Paris said:

"In the country north of the Lys there is nothing to report.

"Between the Lys and the Oise, in the sector of Nouvette, to the west of Lens, French batteries put an end to a spirited fusillade from the enemy.

"The Germans endeavored to float down the River Anore some blazing rafts, starting them from a point above Aveluy, which is north of Albert. We were successful, however, in stopping these floats before they exploded.

"Our artillery has continued to secure excellent results in the Valley of the Aisne.

"We have made slight progress and have taken prisoners and have repulsed a counter-attack to the west of hill No. 200, near Perthes.

"In the Argonne a second German attack took place yesterday near Bagatelle at about 6 o'clock in the evening. This also was repulsed, as had been the attack previously reported, and which took place at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

"The front from the Meuse to the Vosges has been quiet. On Alsace we are organizing our forces on the ground won by us to the south of Ammertzvvilier."

Where Did Supplies Come From.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—It was suggested in the House of Commons yesterday that the German submarines which have been playing havoc with British shipping recently might have obtained fresh supplies of fuel from a ship direct from an English port. Gershom Stewart, a member of the House, put before the Admiralty for reply to-day a question as to "whether a neutral oil steamer outward bound from Manchester was seen alongside two German submarines within the past week." Mr. Stewart also calls on the Admiralty for the names of the steamer, the shippers of the oil and the consignees, and asks whether the exportation of oil on neutral vessels will be permitted hereafter.

German Auxiliary Cruiser Sank.

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 4.—Buenos Ayres newspapers announce that a German auxiliary cruiser, formerly of the Woermann Line, was sunk on Jan. 7 off the Patagonian coast, by the British cruiser Australia. The crew were taken to the Falkland Islands.

Storm Hard on Prisoners.

KINGSTON, Feb. 4.—Owing to the heavy snow storm, it was with difficulty that supplies were taken over to Fort Henry for the war prisoners. The snow drifted mountain high around the fort, and supply wagons were stalled in the snow for hours.

Living High in London.

Walk into the Hotel Cecil or Savoy in London any day, says a correspondent with the Canadian troops in a recent article, and you will likely find a squad of Canadian privates and non-coms. There may also be a number of imperial officers — probably a major-general or two—but the Canadians don't mind them in the least. A British "Tommy" would never think of staying in the same rotunda with an officer of high rank unless on duty. He would keep some distance away. But not so with the Canadians. They are militiamen pure and simple, and many of them have lots of money, so when they go to London on leave they put up at the best hotels and imperial officers go hanged. Probably in these same hotels you'll run into a few British rankers. No doubt they are members of the sportsmen's or artists' battalions. They live at the Savoy, Cecil and other fine hotels and train in Hyde Park, or on the streets of London during the day. They earn a sovereign a week from the army and spend several to live. They don't try to secure commissions because they feel unqualified to hold any authority. They simply enter the ranks and rub shoulders with all the tinkers and bakers and other sportsmen or artisans. They are quite satisfied to become an ordinary "Tommy" or "Terrier," and thereby do their little bit for the Empire.

BRITISH DEFEAT TURKS AT THE SUEZ CANAL

Enemy Brings up Bridge Materials in the Dark With View of Crossing the Canal When Egyptian Corps Falls on Them Capturing Supplies.

CAIRO, Feb. 4.—(Via London.)—The following official communication was issued here yesterday:

"During Tuesday night the enemy attempted to cross the Suez Canal near Toussoum (35 miles north of Suez). They were permitted to bring bridging material to the bank of the canal unmolested, but directly they started bridging operations our troops attacked and the enemy fled in disorder, leaving all the material in our hands. Several of the enemy were drowned.

"The enemy also attacked on the El-Kantara front (40 miles south of Port Said), at daylight yesterday. They were easily repulsed, losing 16 killed or wounded and 40 prisoners. Our casualties were three men wounded."

British forces had a skirmish with Turks Tuesday in the neighborhood of Ismailia, on Lake Timsah, on the Suez Canal. The Turks finally retreated. The British had six men wounded. The engagement occurred during a sandstorm, but the shooting by the Turks, both with rifles and with artillery was bad.

An earlier despatch stated:

Australian troops were victorious over a detachment of Turkish soldiers in a skirmish near Nakhl, on the caravan route between Suez and El Akaba, Monday night, according to advices received here yesterday.

The Turks are said to have retreated, leaving 30 dead and wounded on the field. This fight was the Australians' baptism of fire, and they acquitted themselves with great credit.

The Australians here are now of considerable strength, a second expeditionary force having just arrived from the Commonwealth. The new forces include infantry, cavalry and artillery, with complete hospital and commissariat equipment.

A Pin-Prick Campaign.

LONDON, Feb. 4. — The opinion still prevails in London that the Turks will not attempt to cross the desert with a large force, and that the present pin-pricks were arranged only to compel the British to keep troops in Egypt instead of sending them to France.

Courts Would Acquit Airmen.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The announcement that Russia would treat as pirates, airmen who assailed unfortified towns, has been received with great interest in England. A prominent official, however, said yesterday that Russia's action would probably not be followed here. He pointed out that aviators could act under orders from the military authorities, and it would be difficult for a court to fix the responsibility for the killing by a bomb upon a certain individual.

The official opinion in England is that a court would discharge any captured airman who came to trial under the ordinary criminal procedure.

Canada's Harvest

Thirteen million acres, it is estimated, will be sown to wheat alone in Canada in the spring. This at an average yield of 20 bushels to the acre would suffice to meet the requirements of every human being in the British Islands. In addition to this acreage there are, of course, the vast areas sown to other crops, so that Canada is very literally a "granary of the Empire." Without such assistance the world could not be fed. Belgium is in ruins, the north of France is no better off. Russia's sons are confronting Austria, Germany and Turkey. There will be no harvests reaped next year over a major portion of the continent of Europe, and it is for lands more favorably situated to make good the deficiency. Canada, as shown by the figures quoted above, has risen to the occasion, and the result must be beneficial not alone to her farmers, but also to the economic condition of the country as a whole, since it is almost a truism that when agriculture is booming other industries are in a healthy condition.

Germans Refused To Fight.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 4.—The Telegraff's correspondent at Lemmell reports that the Germans have formed a barbed wire enclosed zone of a camp south of Voorat which contains 4,000 unarmed Germans who were brought to the front as members of Landsturm, and who have been sentenced to imprisonment for mutiny or for refusing to fight.

Vatican To Participate.

ROME, Feb. 4.—The Gironale d'Italia publishes a report that Pope Benedict will participate, through a representative in the conference of the Pan-American Union, which are being held at Washington to define the relations of North and South American countries to the belligerent nations in respect of questions arising from the war.

SUCCEEDED AT ALL POINTS BUT ONE IN ALSACE

French Carry Fighting to the Positions of the Enemy

PARIS, Feb. 4.—The fighting in Alsace is being carried on with the greatest fierceness by both sides. The French began the new attack with an army which had been amply reinforced, and were able successfully to storm the German positions at Hartmannsweiler-kopf, Molkenrain and Hirzenstein. They met with check at but one point in the valley between the first-named places.

The Germans, thinking their positions were secure again, tried to take the offensive. At only one point, north of Hirzenstein, did the enemy meet with any success, and this trivial gain cost them dearly. At every other point the French held their ground.

After the last heavy bombardment of Cernay it was rumored in Switzerland that the Germans had succeeded in reoccupying the town, but this report is quite untrue. French guns mounted on the hills commanding the town made any German occupation impossible, but the enemy is able to drop shells into Cernay from their present position. The fact of the matter is that neither the French nor the Germans are in possession of the town. According to The Journal du Jura, the Germans have retired to the north to a strongly fortified position east of Steinbach. The Germans also have increased their fortifications around Uffholz.

The German guns that are bombarding Cernay are installed in the forest of Nonnenbruch. The French will not attempt to enter Cernay until these batteries are silenced.

There is every reason for believing that the recent advance of the French on Altkirch was more important than has been officially stated. The French are considered to be in an excellent position on the Cernay-Altkirch front. Their next attack is likely to mark yet another advance.

NO PRIVATE BILLS.

British Parliament Will Deal Only With Government Business.

LONDON, Feb 4 — Premier Asquith presented a resolution in the House of Commons yesterday to devote the present session entirely to Government measures.

"There is no precedent for this resolution," said the Premier, "but all our energies as a nation are concentrated on the war, and every interest must be subordinated to this overmastering purpose. Accordingly, the Government purposes to take away the opportunity for private members to introduce bills, and will confine its legislative proposals to measures for prosecution of the war."

A Bonar Law, speaking for the Opposition, agreed to the resolution. He said that the Opposition intended to treat the present sitting of the House as a war session, as had been done in Canada and France.

In support of his resolution, Premier Asquith said, further:

"So long as war conditions prevail, and until they are determined — I hope and trust that at no distant date they will be determined in our favor —we must postpone discussion of the plural voting bill and all domestic legislation in subordination to the one national purpose."

The House adopted the resolution.

British and Turks In Conflict.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—Fighting between the British and Turks continues at Kurna, according to a despatch from Bagdad, which describes a night attack made by 200 Turks. The Turks were driven back at daybreak by the fire from two British gunboats.

Boer Leader Surrenders.

CAPE TOWN, Feb. 4.—It is officially announced that Lt.-Col. Kemp and his commando of Boer rebels have surrendered to the British forces.

SHOOTING A DEER.

The Tropical Poisoned Arrow Sent Him to Sleep and Death.

Hunting with poison, as practiced by the natives of Brazil and other tropical American countries, is thus described in a communication to the National Geographic society, at Washington, by Dewey Austin Cobb:

"In hunting, the arrows, which are dipped in poison, consist of a point of wood or bone, not more than an inch long and the size of a toothpick, to which is attached a little tuft or hairy fiber of the silk cotton tree. The gun is a straight bamboo tube from five to six feet long, with a sight at one end and a funnel shaped expansion to fit the mouth at the other. The principle is precisely the same as the schoolboy's tube for blowing putty balls, and the accuracy of the natives is wonderful."

Mr. Cobb gives the following description of the shooting of a deer:

"A good sized buck walked out of the corn and stopped, exposing to us its full broadside as we lay some thirty feet away. Our hunter fired. The animal gave a slight start as he felt the prick of the arrow on his flank and turned partly around, sniffing the air for a scent and looking around as if searching for the insect that had bitten him. Detecting nothing, he stood still and unalarmed. At the end of a minute or so his head dropped a little, as if he was sleepy. The hunter stepped out in plain sight. The deer looked at him and moved forward, not away from him, a few steps and stopped. He showed no fear, but simply curiosity.

"My companion and I rose, and the three of us walked quietly within reach of him. He made no movement to run away, but watched us intently and shifted his position a little. His movements seemed perfectly easy and natural. Absence of fear seemed the only observable change until at the end of three minutes or more; then he lay down, not falling, but as naturally as a cow or sheep when ready for sleep. His breathing seemed easy and natural. At the end of ten minutes, though he opened his eyes when touched, his breath became shorter and slower. Eighteen minutes after he was struck by the arrow he was dead."

ACOUSTIC CLOUDS.

Why Church Bells Sound Louder on Some Days Than on Others.

Every one has noticed that on certain days church bells are heard much better than on others and sometimes are not heard at all on other days. The same distance intervenes between the church and the person's residence, the same intensity is used to strike the bell, the same visible obstacles are between the two at one time as at another.

Then why does the intensity of the peal vary? It has been found that there are what is known as "acoustic clouds" in the air. They cannot be seen, but they may be detected artificially. They have the property of reflecting sound just as a brick wall has. So if a thick one of these so called "clouds" intervenes between the church bell and the observer most of the sound is reflected back to the bell, and very little gets through. The acoustic clouds consist simply of a large quantity of water vapor in the air, and water vapor itself is invisible. So we are able to see through something that we cannot hear through. Generally, of course, it is the other way round. We can hear through a piece of black paper, but we cannot see through it.

Now, if these acoustic clouds are disposed in a certain manner it is possible that they will reflect the sound into a region where the bell's tone is ordinarily not heard at all save when the clouds are present and disposed in the proper manner.—Chicago Herald.

FOOD RIOTS BREAK OUT

Peasants in Italy Make Raid on Shops

ROME, Feb. 4.—Riots growing out of the agitation over the high price of bread, are assuming a graver character. Crowds yesterday went about the streets sacking the stores. Strong reinforcements of troop have been called out to maintain order.

The disturbance continued throughout the day and the municipality finally fixed minimum and maximum prices on foodstuffs as follows:

Breads, per kilo (2.2 pounds), from 6 to 11c.; fish, per kilo, 15 to 20c; meat, per kilo, 16 to 30c.

Many Italian peasants, both men and women, are going to Germany to engage in farm and factory work, in response to offers of unusually high wages. For the men 6 1-2 marks ($1.62) a day is promised, and for the women 3 marks (75c.).

Italian newspapers are warning the peasants against accepting this employment, in view of the uncertainty in regard to Italy's foreign policy, but apparently many unemployed persons are willing to assume the risk involved.

Seven Sikhs To Die.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 4.—The judge at Firozpur, in the Punjab, has sentenced to death seven Sikhs who had been convicted of killing two police officials at Calcutta last October in the rioting which followed the arrival of the steamer Komagata Maru at that port from Vancouver.

The Hindus who mutinied at Calcutta last year were the men who for several months resister the Canadian Government's order of deportation, but who finally, were compelled to return from Vancouver to India on the same steamer which brought them out. The rioting at Calcutta was suppressed by troops, who fired on the Sikhs.

Portuguese Troops For Angola.

LISBON, Feb. 4.—(Via Paris.)—An additional contingent of troops has sailed for Angola, Portuguese West Africa. The Ministers of Marine and of the Colonies inspected the troops before their departure. Large crowds of people cheered the soldiers.

A Berlin despatch says a large portion of Angola is in German hands.

Death of Father Murphy.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Edwin S. Montagu, member of Parliament for Cambridgeshire West, has been appointed Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in succession to Sir Charles Frederick Gurney Masterman, who, having been unable to win a seat in the lower House, resigned his portfolio a few days ago.

Cecil Bishop Harmsworth, son of the late Alfred Harmsworth, member for Bedfordshire, south, has been made Under Secretary to the Home Office. Walter R. Rea and Arthur C. Beck have been made Junior Lords of the Treasury.

Francis Dyke Acland, Parliamentary Under Secretary to the Foreign Office, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Montagu as Financial Secretary of the Treasury.

AUSTRIANS OFFERING BUT LITTLE RESISTANCE

Russians are Conducting a Vigorous Offensive and Have Taken Important Positions With Little Trouble

PETROGRAD, Feb. 4.—With the successful Russian advance on the Hungarian side of the Carpathians, behind the sources of the San river, the period of elaborate reconnaissances is over and the southern army has taken the offensive along the entire front from below Dukla Pass to the east of the Beskid Mountains. The Austrians have lost hope and are yielding important positions with scarcely any show of resistance.

The Russian column, which crossed the broad main ridge east of Yaslisk, seized a battery of six guns, with their ammunition mortars and a quantity of machine guns before the Austrian forces could bring them into action. Detachments of Germans are among the prisoners taken during the advance both in the Uschok region and the eastern Beskids.

The only visible counter-demonstration from the Austrian side has been the increased activity of artillery fire along the line near Dunajetz, but all sectional attempts at an offensive there were destroyed in a few hours. Gen. von Hindenburg seems to realize that the campaign of 1915 is beginning very badly for his strategy. His personal quarters are established at Lenckza, about 20 miles north of Lodz. He is living in a hotel, and Prince Joachim of Prussia occupies a neighboring doctor's house. Their supplies are brought from Kalisch on the frontier. Their position is becoming insecure through the determined Russian advance north of the Vistula. Germans are now pressed further back in that region than they have been at any time since the commencement of the present invasion from Thorn at the beginning of December. They keep an unsteady hold on Lipon, twenty miles from the Prussian frontier and their four corps which recently introduced themselves between the Vistula and Wlawa are all drawing north as a consequence of the continued westward pressure from the Russian army moving north of the Mazurian Lakes.

As Gen. von Hindenburg abhors inaction he has been driven to repeat his disasterous frontal attacks on the line of Russian entrenched positions westward of Rawka. Gen. von Mackenzen again turned full blast with his heavy and light artillery and best infantry upon Bolimow, Monday and Tuesday, with even less success than on Sunday. The Russians after desperate bayonet fighting recaptured the southern section of the front entrenchments which the Germans held Sunday night. The fight for a farm south of Gumine continued all Monday and re-commenced at daylight Tuesday.

The Russians in Central Poland are withstanding these monotonous positional onslaughts with unflinching steadiness in the knowledge that their armies in the north and south have definitely grasped the initiative from the enemy and are forcing the campaign in East Prussia and Hungary into a situation which must mean the final ruin of the second invasion of Poland.

While in the "flap" they are fed by the mother, upon whom falls the duty of foraging around for food.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 3.—May wheat sold as high as $1.61¼ in the opening five minutes of business; July sold at $1.62 at about the same time; 70c was bid for May oats while July was unchanged. The market was excited and nervous, and in the official openings a wide range in prices was registered.

Trading was light in futures and millers buying, exporters holding aloof, awaiting more settled conditions. The cash market was quiet.

Wheat futures closed 2½c lower. Cash closed 3c to 4c down; oats 1¼c lower, and flax 1½c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 3.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat showed little improvement, but there were bids for No. 1 northern for February-March shipment, and as they were 1s per quarter higher than yesterday, sale of a few loads were made at 65s to London, which is the highest price made up to the present. Owing to the decline in prices for oats in the Winnipeg option market today there was an easier feeling in the local market for Canadian western grades and prices were reduced 1-2c per bushel, but the demand is very limited on account of them being so much higher than local oats, which were stronger at an advance of 1c to 2c per bushel, with sales of 30,000 bushels of No. 2 white at 64c and carlots at 65c. The flour market was without any new feature, but the feeling is firm at the recent rise.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 3.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.53½; No. 1 northern, $1.48½ to $1.53; No. 2 northern, $1.46 to $1.50½; May, $1.50 bid.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 72c to 72½c.

Oats—No. 1 white, 55¾c to 56c.

Flour and bran—Unchanged.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Feb. 3.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 148 cattle, 341 hogs, 40 sheep, 15 calves and 519 horses.

Outside of the horses which were for army purposes, it will be seen that there was scarcely enough in the different classes to make a market.

Values in the different classes were practically unchanged excepting for hogs, which being scarce on account of the storm, were reported 25c higher, as follows: Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8, and $8.25 weighed off cars, and $7.60 f.o.b. cars.

J. Hodgkinson bought for Armour of Hamilton, 21 cattle, 1100 lbs., at $7.50.

Fred Armstrong bought six milkers and springers at $85 each.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Feb. 3.—At the C. P. R. live stock market there were no new developments in the market for cattle, the feeling being steady and demand fair. Choice steers sold at from $5.75 to $7.25; cows, $4.50 to $6, and bulls, $4.50 to $6.50 per cwt. Demand from packers for common canners is fair, and sales were made at $3.75 to $4 per cwt. Lambs are firm under a good demand and small offerings, and sales were made at $7.75 to $8.25 per cwt., as to size and quality, while sheep were steady at $4.50 to $5 per cwt. Hogs declined 10c to 15c per cwt., owing to the fact that the supply was somewhat in excess of the requirements. Sales of selected lots were made at $8.25 to $8.40, and heavy at $7.75 to $8 per cwt., weighed off cars. Trade in calves fair at prices ranging from $5 to $12 each.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Lesson VI.—First Quarter, For Feb. 7, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Ruth i, 6-18. Memory Verses, 16, 17—Golden Text, Ruth i, 16—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We have just one lesson in this beautiful story of Ruth, but we will seek to gather many things from the whole story. The first and last names in the book, Bethlehem and David, are two of the most suggestive in the Bible. No man's name is mentioned so often as David, and his is the first and last name of a mere man in the New Testament. Bethlehem, besides all the other interesting facts connected with it, will always be of special interest as the birthplace of the firstborn son of Mary, Jesus Christ our Lord. Ruth is one of the four women mentioned in Matt. i among the ancestors of the son of David. Some one has said that the four chapters of this book might be entitled Ruth deciding—gleaning—resting—rewarded.

The devotion of Ruth is an example of the devotion to Jesus Christ, which is expected of all believers. Her patient gleaning in the field of Boaz has in it an example of the patience and faithfulness which should be seen in every Christian. Her quiet expectation of some great result at the suggestion of her mother-in-law makes us think of the assurance that the meek shall inherit the earth. When we see her as the wife of Boaz, the owner of the field in which she had so patiently gleaned, we cannot but think of the time when the church, the body of Christ, the company of all the faithful gleaners of this present age, shall become the bride of our mighty man of wealth, the owner of the field, which is the world, and then we shall inherit all things with Him and reign with Him on the earth (Rev. xxi, 7; v, 10).

That Naomi and her husband and sons should leave Bethlehem because of a famine and go to sojourn in Moab seems like the misstep which Abram made when he left Canaan because of a famine and went down to Egypt, for he only got into trouble there, and we read of no altar unto the Lord until he returned again to Bethel (Gen. xii, 10; xiii, 1-4). Poor Naomi found trouble enough in Moab in the loss of her husband and two sons, but she seems to acknowledge that the going to Moab was her affair, while it was her gracious Lord who brought her back to Bethlehem. "I went out full and the Lord hath brought me home again empty" (chapter i, 21). She turned her steps homeward because she heard that the Lord had given bread to Bethlehem (verse 6).

The wandering boy of Luke xv turned homeward when he thought of the bread in his father's house. It seems as if we should be ever telling to the perishing of the bread, and to spare, in our Father's house, for how can they hear unless some one tells? Naomi knew the God of Israel. These women of Moab must have learned of Him through her, and Ruth had learned to know Him well enough to forsake all for Him, to esteem Him more than her own people and her father's house. Orpah had not so learned to know him. If our testimony is what it should be and our life He will use us to gather some to Himself. The devotion of Ruth in the ever memorable words of verses 16, 17, are in a measure repeated by Ittal to David in II Sam. xv, 21. The words in verse 19, "So they two went," are found in II Kings ii, 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 11, and there again we see a steadfast purpose on the part of Elisha which brought to him that which his soul desired. This is the steadfastness which we so greatly need (I Cor. xv, 58).

The friendliness and thoughtful kindness of Boaz in chapter ii are but a faint type of the loving kindness of our Lord Jesus, who can truly say, "I know thy works," etc. (ii, 11, 12; Rev ii, 2, 9, 13, 19).

If, as His redeemed ones, we have not recognized many "handfuls of purpose" as we have gleaned in the part of the field He has assigned us, we must be blind indeed (chapter ii, 16). The words of Boaz in Ruth iii, 11, "Fear not, my daughter; I will do to thee all that thou requirest," made a great impression upon my wife, as we saw them in a motto in the Y. W. C. A. at Cape Town, South Africa, in 1898, and we have often passed them on to others since then. There is also much comfort in the words of Naomi in chapter iii, 18, "Sit still, my daughter, * * * for the man will not be in rest until he have finished the thing this day."

In chapter iv Boaz as the kinsman redeemer, having the right to redeem and accomplishing the same, is wonderfully suggestive of our Redeemer, who not only redeems us, but also our inheritance, the earth, and seals us with the Holy Spirit, the earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession (Eph. i, 13, 14). When Naomi became nurse for little Obed (chapter iv, 16, 21) she no doubt forgot in a measure the emptiness of chapter i, 21. Ruth also forgot the weary days of her poverty when she gleaned in the field of Boaz. So we shall forget all our misery and remember it as waters that pass away (Job 15, 16).

Let us be certain that we are redeemed by the precious blood of Jesus Christ and then patiently and unweariedly fill the place to which He has assigned us, rejoicing in the glory which shall be ours at His appearing.

ANY DYSPEPTIC CAN GET WELL

By Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Says Capt. Swan

Life is very miserable to those who suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach and Biliousness. This letter from Captain Swan (one of the best known skippers on the Great Lakes) tells how to get quick relief from Stomach Trouble.

PORT BURWELL, ONT., May 8th, 1913.

"A man has a poor chance of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. I am sure that "Fruit-a-tives" have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking "Fruit-a-tives" according to directions, any person with Dyspepsia will get benefit".

CRATER LAKES

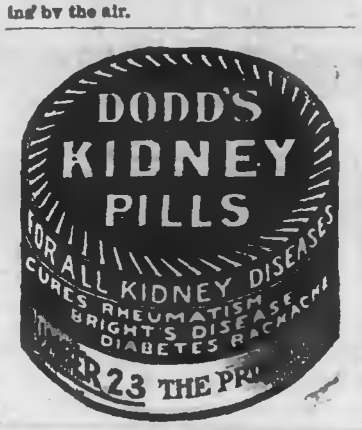
Wonderful lakes are often found inside the craters of volcanoes. One of these can be seen upon Easter Island—the island which bears wonderful remains of an unknown ancient people inside a crater is a lake, near the borders of which lie several unfinished crowns composed of tufa, evidently destined for the huge figures on the shores of the island, but never completed. And on this lake float many waterfowl, one of which is said to be a goose unknown to science.

Another curious crater lake existed until recently within the icebound crater of a volcano in New Zealand. The water was heated to boiling point, but a short time ago an eruption of more than common violence tossed the whole lake into the air.

A most interesting crater lake can still be seen in Java in the volcano of Papandajan, and it is possible to enter the crater and gaze down on the scene below. Standing on the rim, one can see the vast seething mass of boiling mud. Every now and then a wave of mud moves heavily along the sides of the chasm, only to fall back into the molten mass, and here and there columns of sulphur thrown out of the lake of mud are gradually forming walls. It is indeed pleasant to escape from this dismal inclosure to breathe the free air once more.

Resistance by Air.

The effects of air resistance are well shown in the twelve and a half miles Simplon tunnel, where an exceptionally high amount of energy is required for running the electric trains. The tunnel, which is fifteen feet wide and eighteen feet high, with a sectional area of 250 square feet, has a ventilating current of 3,530 feet cubic of air per second, maintained by two large blast fans at the Brigue end and two exhaust fans at Iselle. Trains going with this current encounter less resistance than in open air up to fifteen and a half miles an hour, but at higher speeds or in the opposite direction the resistance is much greater than outside. Moving by gravity down the seven per one thousand maximum gradient, a train, even though going with the current, cannot exceed thirty-five miles an hour on account of the braking by the air.



THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Baltimore, Md. — "I am more than glad to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I suffered dreadful pains and was very irregular. I became alarmed and sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until I was without a cramp or pain and felt like another person, and it has now been six months since I took any medicine at all. I hope my little note will assist you in helping other women. I now feel perfectly well and in the best of health." — Mrs. AUGUST W. KONDNER, 1632 Hollins Street, Baltimore, Md.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Duke's New Carriage.

The new state carriage of the Duke of Connaught is a very handsome vehicle of its kind and is now safely installed at Rideau Hall.

This carriage is the one that the duke uses for state ceremonies like the opening and closing of Parliament. He proceeds in it from his official residence to the Parliament buildings. On such occasion two lackeys sit in the rear seat attired similarly to the men on the horses and the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, in their gorgeous uniforms and carrying lances, escort the royal carriage.

The parade from and to Government House at the opening and closing of Parliament is one of the show sights in connection with this event and the royal carriage is the object of much attention.

All day yesterday and today the curling rink has been the mecca for curling fans. It is safe to say that this year's bonspiel will establish a record in every way. Enthusiasm is more marked, the attendance is greater and the games are producing sharper competition, a combination which is irresistible. Last night ended with everything pointing towards a climax occurring tonight by which time the bonspiel will have sifted down to the final contests. Those who are forging their way to the front in the consolation and primary rounds are not unmindful of the handsome trophies which await the winners, and which repose invitingly in the windows of Charlie Banks' sporting goods' store next door to the rink. Curling stones, and club bags, are worth striving for. The Grand Challenge Cup is the first prize in the Grand Challenge competition, to be held for one year only by the victors. With it go four pairs of red hone curling stones. The second prize consists of four sets of cutlery in cases. In the second competition the first prize is four leather club bags, and the second prize, four sets of carvers in cases.

In the 4.30 p.m. draw in the primary, Sharpe of Uxbridge put it over D. Davidson's rink by the overwhelming number of 14 points. Davidson's rink struck a snag as the following score indicates.

Sharpe—

x 1 1 3 1 1 x 2 x 3 3 2—17

Davidson—

Graham—

Stewart—

ORILLIA BEAT MIDLAND.

In the Intermediate play-off last night at Coldwater between Midland and Orillia for the honors of Group Eleven, Orillia won 5-2.

AT THE SIGN OF THE TEE

Some wonderful scoring is being recorded at the bonspiel. Wonderfully low in some cases. For instance Dick Davidson is too nifty a curler to mind us saying that he skipped a rink to the extent of three points in running up against Uxbridge yesterday in the primaries. Every one has their off day.

Many members of the fair sex made the rink a rendezvous last night to see the fun. It goes without saying that the curlers were conscious of such an audience.

"Doesn't he look swell in a tam-a-shanter," was one young lady's remark.

When experts like Frank Matthews and R. Neill are skippig opposing rinks there's bound to be something doing. So it happened last night when they chased each other in the consolation. At the tenth end they were tied.

Even the best of them go down. Skip J. D. Flavelle had to accept his defeat to the tune of nine points at the hands of a rink skipped by J. E. A. Fitzgerald.

Any man who has ever curled has a good one to spring on his wife now. If he opens the door at two, or three, or even four a.m. the pass word is. "I was at the bonspiel." Nothing more needed.

A rink of three heavyweights and one lightweight ran up against an Oshawa rink this morning skipped by Mr. Sykes. The former term themselves the Durham rink, named after the famous variety of Shorthorns of that name. However there is a jersey on the team in the person of "Billy" Menzies. The Durham rink consists of Robert Stewart, W. H. Denham, W. Menzies, and skip Geo. Stevenson.

"RED" FISHER MAY RETIRE

Husky Backstop Says he Will Play Ball no More

Hamilton, Feb. 4.—There is a likelihood of Dusty Bullock, the former Berlin and Ottawa third-baseman, being found in a Hamilton uniform this summer. Just now the Hamilton club has a deal on with Manager Frank Shaughnessey, of the champion Senators, whereby either Bullock or Lage come here in exchange for "Red" Fisher. Which one will be chosen depends solely on Manager Billy Cristall.

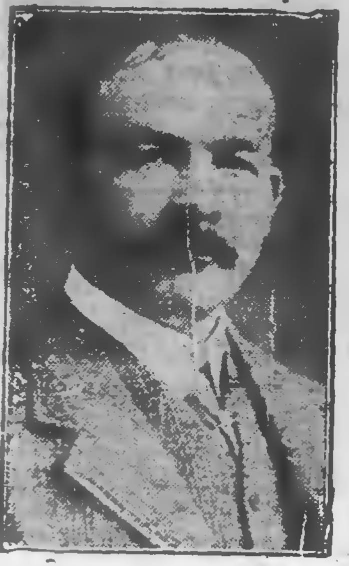
Bullock has shown himself as one of the top-notch guardians of the danger corner in the Canuck League. He's a fair fielder and a rattling good hitter. Hamilton has always shown a weakness in this position, and no mistake would be made in getting Bullock.

If big "Red" Fisher carries out his present intentions he will not be here when the bell sends the Canuck Leaguers off on their four-months' battle for the gonfalon. The big catcher was a visitor in the city last Saturday night, coming along with the Black Rock basketballers, and he seemed quite determined in the stand that he would not play ball any more. Red claims to have a lucrative position in Buffalo and is certainly not eager to play the game.

Very Lasting.

"Is your wife an economical cook?"

"I should say so. She makes the most durable cake you ever saw."



MAJOR SAM SHARPE, M.P.

COMMENT

As You Like it

Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the O. H. A., has notified the local hockey club that in event of the Petes winning the honors of Group One tonight in Picton they will play home-and-home games with Brampton, the winners of Group Two. The first game to be played here tomorrow night and the second game to be played in Brampton on Monday. It is very probable that the Petes will win from Picton as they have a four goal lead since Monday night's fray. Watch the press tomorrow for the final announcement as to the Brampton-Peterborough game.

Here's a scream from Belleville. The Intelligencer says:

The spectacle of Mr. Hewitt, secretary of the O. H. A., applying the whitewash to Peterborough's hand-picked importations is extremely amusing to the hockey fans of Belleville. It appears, from the telegraphic report in the Montreal Herald, that Mr. Hewitt, who represents that august body, the O. H. A., was blissfully unaware that any but the products of the Peterborough fire-side were doing battle under the banner of the Lift-lock City; although it was known from one end of Ontario to the other that the captain of that aggregation has been flirting with the big pro. teams all season. He did not accept the offers—why? Again we know that two other fast men were imported from the leading Toronto teams of last season. Did they go to Peterborough because that northern climate agrees with their complexions?—again we wonder. But lastly, while the hockey authorities of Quebec have been aware for some time past that mysterious Tetreault, who disapeared at the beginning of the season, has been playing in the O. H. A. all season. The O. H. A. has never questioned the certificate of one Moinse, another mystery, who bobbed up with the aforementioned hand-picked aggregation. Now that the mysterious Moinse and the mysterious Tetreault appear to be one and the same, to quote the Herald despatch, Secretary Hewitt of the O. H. A. expressed great surprise today when informed of the charge that Joe Tetreault, a Montreal PROFESSIONAL, has been played by the Peterborough team under the name of Moinse, and again, "The Peterborough club, according to Secretary Hewitt has always had a great reputation for amateurism." It is to laugh.

We wonder if Sec. Hewitt would have expressed as great surprise had the charge been made agaginst a Belleville team or a Kingston team. We have no record of any great surprises being expressed when Belleville's team of bona fide home-brews were thrown out with the championship in their mitt because of Jack Marks who was born and raised here, or on other occasions when there was danger of the championship falling into the hands of the unordained.

Picton has put up a grand fight this season. They have a team of good clean players, all local products, and it would be hard luck for a team like that to be put out of business by a team which has no business in amateur ranks. Secretary Hewitt also "expressed surprise" that Picton had not protested any of the games. Pictons have been out to win "on the ice," and have left their rights to be protected by the O. H. A. They have never "squealed" when they got licked, and everyone admires them for it. But it's up to the O. H. A. to protect them in the interest of clean sport.

ENLISTS IN HOPE OF GETTING EVEN

Westerner Lost His Ranch in Poker Game

Because a German won a ranch from him in a poker game several months ago, a "six foot two" westerner has enlisted with the 8th C. M. R., seeking revenge.

The man, who is a real giant, walked into the recruiting office, at Ottawa, and although the Mounted Rifles are now handpicking their recruits, he was snapped up by the sergeant. He was dressed in true western style, and in a few minutes was before the doctor being examined, which to him seemed a superfluous procedure. While he was being tested he talked quite freely and his story proved quite interesting.

The man had owned a large ranch in the far northwest and which he was fast piling up a fortune. He fell in with a German, who proved to be a card shark and who soon got most of his money away from him. The Westerner finally staked his ranch in a poker game that lasted two days. He lost this too, and had to get out and work as a cowboy.

The young giant arrived in the city a couple of days ago in charge of a carload of race horses and when he heard that mounted regiment was being raised here immediately went down to the headquarters at 120 Victoria Street and enlisted.

"I've got a lasting grudge against the Germans and I'm going to get even some day," he said. "I guess there is no better way than by going to war. I may run against my friend," he added, with the accent on the friend.

RECORD SHIPMENT FROM CANADIAN VEHICLE FACTORY

The Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways have just handled the largest single shipment of motor cars and carriages ever made by a Canadian vehicle factory. The McLaughlin Carriage Company, Limited, of Oshawa, Ont., shipped this week 45 carloads—a solid train of their McLaughlin automobiles and carriages for Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Edmonton, and Calgary, over the Grand Trunk System Line.

Business conditions in Western Canada, the McLaughlin Company believes, are founded upon the solid basis of agricultural production, and they see every sign of increased, instead of diminished demand for their products. The vehicles in this train would make a procession three miles long, and the Grand Trunk authorities are giving them a fast run over their lines.

The case will come up at a future sitting of the county court.

TWO WRITS ISSUED

The cases will come up at a future sitting of the county court.

A SOLDIER'S VISION

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

For a period of three weeks along the front of our brigade a picket had been murdered on his post every night. The front was a mile long, with the posts within ten rods of each other, and a bushwacker had crept up on the lone picket with all the craft of an Apache and stabbed him to death. The one assassin had killed twenty-two men before any great stir was made about it. All that was done when the matter was finally taken hold of was to put two, three and four men on a post in place of one and to send out small parties to look for a needle in a haystack, as it were.

That all these murders had been committed by one single band no one doubted. A knife had been used in every instance.

On the night that the order was issued to double the men on the posts I was ill in my tent with a sore throat and fever. My tent mates were on guard or detail, and I realized that I was light headed. I could not fall into a sound sleep, but I dozed at intervals, and the noises of the camp were confused with queer dreams. Of a sudden this confusion cleared away, and I had what you call either a dream or a vision. I saw a man in the uniform of a Federal captain, mounted on a dark bay horse, ride up to a farmhouse. The face and form of rider and horse were as plain to me as if I had seen them in my normal state of health at noonday. The captain was a man of about thirty, blue eyed, with brown hair, brown mustache and a front tooth filled with gold. At the corner of the left eye was a small scar from a wound inflicted years before.

As the officer descended from the saddle and hitched his horse to the fence I saw a woman's face at the window for a moment. The same face was seen again for a moment as she opened the door for the captain. She was a tall, dark haired woman, and the face bore a smile.

As suddenly as the vision came it was blotted out, but it returned again. This time the captain was mounted, and it was night. It was the same house, and his horse wanted to speed too fast and was pulled in. I could not make out how I followed on, but follow I did, and we had just descended a hill and were crossing a creek by a plank bridge when there came a red flash, followed by the report of a firearm, and the captain threw up his arms and lurched to the right and fell out of the saddle. The horse sprang to the left off the bridge, which had no rail, landed in the creek and went off among the underbrush. I saw that the officer was dragged along with his foot in the stirrup. I also saw the man who had fired the shot. He was tall and gaunt faced, with long black hair and glittering black eyes and dressed in the rough clothes of a farmer.

When one of my tent mates came in I at once related the dream or vision to him, but neither of us attached any importance to it. One with a fever always has queer dreams and fancies.

A week had gone by and I was all right again when I read in a Washington paper of the singular disappearance of a captain in our brigade. This officer, so it was stated, had left camp on a certain afternoon on his horse and had not been heard of since. My vision came back to me so clearly and I was so sure that it furnished a clew that I reported to my captain. He ridiculed the idea, but sent me to the colonel. My statements were received with a smile, but I was given a pass and a note to the brigadier general. He was a gruff old dog, and he called me a fool before I had spoken ten words. When I had given a close description of the missing officer he began to listen, and the result was that I went out with a squad to search. We passed for two miles over a road I had never set foot on before. We came to a farmhouse I had never seen in my waking moments. We found the black haired woman, and she corroborated my story of the captain's arrival. She was a widow, living with her mother, and the captain had been calling for many weeks, and it was a case of love. A horse had gnawed a fence rail; a horse had pawed up the earth; the captain's horse was a bay. When we returned to the bridge we found the marks where the bushwhacker had jumped. We found where the iron shoes of the horse had scraped the stones and where he had clambered out. In the woods, a mile away, we found the horse and the rider.

The captain had been shot through the body. He had been dragged by the stirrup until his body had become tangled among the underbrush. The horse had eaten every bush and limb within reach, but had been without water and was just able to stand. His rider was probably dead within five minutes after being shot. You may have made up your mind to hear that the assassin was also discovered through my dream, but he was not. I have always believed that it was his hand which knifed the pickets, but it is only my belief. No one charged with any of the crimes was ever brought to book so far as I know. I could have identified the bushwhacker among a thousand men, but I never had the opportunity. A week after the finding of the captain's body our brigade was marching and fighting forty miles away, and if the assassin was a farmer living in the neighborhood of his crimes he was safe from discovery.

Fire-Arms—Past and Present.

An interesting collection of firearms, showing the evolution of the old match-lock pistol of 1453 into the modern death-dealing "10-shots-in-5-seconds" automatic, are contained in the private armory of W. A. Shaw, of Toronto, who has spent years in building up one of the most complete collections of antique firearms in the country. Included in the display are a smooth-bore match-lock of 1453, a wheel-lock invented about 1509, a snap-haunce of 1598, a flint-lock pistol of 1630 (many of which are used in semi-civilized countries to-day), the pill-lock pistol of 1807, percussion-cap type of 1818, and a 10-shot automatic of 1914 vintage. The most wicked-looking piece is a "knife-pistol," combining a double-barrelled "Derringer" with a stiletto-bayonet and a six-inch razor-edged knife. For long-range "pot-shots" and fancy close-up "carving," this antique artillery must have been a highly efficient weapon in its palmy days.

This Shell Game Pays.

Two hundred thousand shells for the allies have already been made in Canada and 600,000 more are now in process of manufacture.

The British Government early in the war asked the Canadian Government what could be done regarding a supply of shells for the allies, and Gen. Hughes got a committee of experts together, including such authorities as Col. Bertram, Col. Cantlie, and Col. Carnegie, who acted in conjunction with the experts of the Militia Department.

They developed a plan to distribute the orders amongst the various shops in Canada which had the proper lathes and presses. It worked successfully, with the result that about $8,000,000 has been distributed among the firms of Canada. The money comes from the allies.

Distributing Canada's Gift.

More than half of the stock of the Canadian gift flour received in Britain to date has been distributed, according to a statement made by an official of the local Government Board, which has the flour in charge. A good part has been placed at the disposal of the War Office and the Admiralty, as public distress is not abnormal, and there is, therefore, no pressing need for its widespread distribution to the poor. In those cases where the flour is being used for relief purposes by the local committees, the loaves baked from it are issued with a paper band, on which is inscribed the words: "This loaf is made from flour sent by the people of Canada."

Report Lots of Herrings.

Reports from the winter herring fishery off the west coast of Newfoundland, now closing, indicate that the catch will be fairly large. In a good year about 100,000 barrels of the fish are taken in the three centres of the industry, Bonne Bay, Bay of Islands and Bay St. George. Of this approximately two-thirds goes to the United States and the remaining third to Canada. The herring are used partly for food purposes, when smoked, but are chiefly valuable as bait for the cod fisheries.

Mounted Police 1,278 Strong.

The Royal Northwest Mounted Police force is now the largest in its history. Since the war broke out the force has been increased by over five hundred men, many of them old members of the force. The total men on the roll is now 1,278. At the time of the rebellion of 1885, the force totalled a thousand men, but since then has never reached that figure until this year.

THE BACON HOG.

One of the Foundations of Ontario's Agricultural Prosperity.

With the desire of placing an up-to-date handbook on swine raising within the reach of every farmer in the province, the Ontario Department of Agriculture requested Prof. G. E. Day of the Agricultural College, Guelph, one of Canada's leading authorities on live stock, to prepare such a work, which has been issued in the form of Bulletin No. 225, entitled "Swine," containing 80 pages, profusely illustrated.

It is a most practical and complete statement, covering every point helpful in the selection, housing, feeding, and general handling of the bacon hog. The bulletin opens with the place of the pig on the farm, Prof. Day very plainly showing the why as well as the how. The various types of swine are then described, with photo-engravings of prize-winners at some of the leading live stock shows.

The author goes fully into methods of feeding, prescribes the best rations, gives the causes of soft bacon, and show how to avoid that and other drawbacks to a perfect carcass. His hints on pasturing and soiling crops in hog raising, especially where he compares rape with clover and alfalfa, are particularly suggestive. He also gives valuable directions as to the feeding of roots, potatoes, pumpkins, apples, and dairy products.

Prof. Day places great emphasis on the selection of both sire and dam, and his counsel in this regard is much needed. Every feature pertaining to mating is thoroughly dealt with, the description of the breeding pen being especially helpful. The management of the sow during and after gestation is thoroughly handled, and will likely save many a litter to the swine-raiser who will read this bulletin.

The advice on raising young pigs is intensely practical. Hints on dealing with rupture and other troubles are also given, together with excellent counsel regarding exercise.

The chapter dealing with the curing of pork is worth much to those who put up their own meat. An excellent method of try out lard is also described.

Prof. Day bestows much attention upon the question of buildings, and gives plans of both stationary and portable pens that he can heartily recommend. He also pays considerable heed to sanitation, giving the latest suggestions regarding disinfection, ventilation, etc.

A valuable chapter is that devoted to the common disease of swine. Many of these are described, and their treatment is covered in so full and practical a manner as to make every hog-raiser practicaly his own veterinary.

Any farmer desiring a copy of this latest bulletin on "Swine" will receive one free by writing to the Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

A Fur Hanger.

Every woman knows that furs should not be folded nor hung over a sharp edge, and a recent invention by a Frenchman points the way to care for furs without very much trouble or expense. A roller with a large diameter is provided with end pieces of wire terminating in a ring. A wire hanger which engages these rings and having a hook by which it may be hung in a closet or upon a support in a display window completes the device.

The collision mat, which is carried by all warships, is a very valuable part of the vessel's equipment and often prevents a ship sinking when she has been badly hit by the enemy.

The mat varies in size from 10 to 18 feet square and is made of sailcloth into which has been interwoven a number of "thrums," or pieces of tarry hemp, closely knit together.

In case of the vessel being damaged by shells or collision the mat is lowered and held over the hole by the ropes which are attached to it.

The pressure of the water forces the mat closely over the gap and thus temporarily stops the leak till it can be closed from within.

Pleasant For the Landlord.

The neighborhood of Toxeth Park, Liverpool, has decided drawbacks, from the point of view at least of some of the landlords of the cheaper property. It is said that an agent on making the usual Monday morning call for rent at one house was offered 1s. 6d. The rent was already in arrears. He showed his discontent. "Look 'ere, mister, you ought to be jolly thankful you've got this. If my old man hadn't sold the back door you'd have got nothing."

Settled.

An old woman, on being examined before a magistrate as to her place of legal settlement, was asked what reason she had for supposing her husband had a legal settlement in that town.

The old lady said:

"He was born and married there, and they buried him there, and if that isn't settling there what is"

PIRACY ACTS WILL FAIL TO LOOSEN NAVAL GRIP

British Fleet Will Not be Scattered to Hunt Sea Raiders, no More Than Did German Mines and Zeppelins --- Time for United States to Protest is Now Says Tribune

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 5. — Regarding the German proclamation of the British waters as a war zone, in which merchant vessels, hostile or neutral, run the risk of being sunk, the Westminster Gazette, which usually voices the opinion of the Government, says: "If the Germans turn from legitimate war to piracy, it is because in legitimate war they have had no success. The use of submarines against British merchantmen will no more induce the Government to scatter the fleet for supposed security against these sea raiders than did German mines and Zeppelins or raids on undefended coast towns."

WILL NOT AFFECT STEAMSHIP MOVEMENTS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5. — Representatives of Atlantic shipping companies hold the opinion that Germany's declaration that the English Channel will be in the war zone after February 18th, will have no effect on the movements of steamships between New York and French and British ports. Risk is admitted, but it is almost the unanimous opinion that there will be no suspension of sailings.

The New York Times says it is a declaration of a "paper blockade," and that the German admiralty cannot seriously suppose this declaration will be respected or that the destruction of a netural ship will be passed over as unavoidable and excusable.

The Tribune says Germany's declaration is a vicious invitation to international embroilment. It is playing with fire. "The time to protest, to make our national resolve clear, is now. When the American flag has been flouted and an American ship torpedoed, opportunity for clearing away disputed contentions will be poor indeed."

"A HIGH HISTORIC MISSION"

BERLIN, Feb. 5. — The German admiralty's declaration is greeted with satisfaction by the German press. The Berlin Post says after February 18th "men and freight, not only on British ships, but under a neutral flag, are doomed to sink."

The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger says: "England's own weapons are being turned against herself, and when Germany destroys the English yoke under which the world has suffered for centuries, it will have accomplished a high historic mission, and will have freed the world from one of its most dangerous enemies."

KNOX CHURCH ACTIVITIES ARE REVIEWED IN REPORTS

More Accommodation Has Been Required for the Growing Sunday School

The annual congregational meeting of Knox Presbyterian Church was held in the lecture hall Wednesday evening, with a good attendance. Much interest was displayed in the proceedings.

Rev. J. A. MacKenzie opened the meeting with devotional exercises, after which Mr. M. Clark was appointed chairman and Mr. J. W. Buyers secretary.

Mr. T. R. Kennedy read the message from Session, in which acknowledgment was made with profound thankfulness for the many favors bestowed upon the congregation by the Giver of All Good. The services throughout the year were well attended and the spiritual life of the congregation was correspondingly maintained. The Session viewed with great regret the removal of Rev. H. J. Keith, who was minister for over seven years, but they feel the people have a worthy leader in the person of Rev. J. A. MacKenzie, under whose guidance the work of the church will be carried on.

The installation of the new pipe organ was noted with thankfulness, and acknowledgment was made of the faithful services of the choir, under the efficient leadership of Mr. George Kenyon.

Mr. S. Sands presented the report of the missionary fund, which gave receipts of $881.20.

Progress in the Sunday school was shown by the report of Mr. Roy Laing, who also submitted a very satisfactory statement on behalf of the primary department, which is in charge of Miss M. A. MacDonald. The attendances have increased so that more accommodation was made necessary.

Mr. H. J. McCannan referred to the fitting up of the new quarters for the primary class, and Mr. C. Huffman was tendered a vote of thanks for the work he contributed.

Other reports were as follows:

Men's Bible Class: Mr. Ken. Denoon: receipts, $29.93. Women's Bible Class, teacher, Mrs. Roger, report read by Miss Dickson. A. S. K. Class, teacher, Mr. A. MacKenzie, increase in membership from 15 to 45. Volunteer Bible Class, Mrs. A. McKenzie. Cradle Roll, Mrs. J. F. Morrison. Goforth Club, Miss Grace Watts, receipts $32.90. Young People's Guild, Mr. Cecil Williamson, good attendance, receipts $46.64. Ladies' Aid, Mrs. R. G. Clifford, receipts, $261.73. Women's Missionary Society, Mrs. F. Allin, $85.10 contributed to general society, thank offering of $46.10; total receipts $87.83. The Choir, Miss L. A. Yule, receipts, $40.56.

Board of Managers.

The report of the board of managers, presented by Mr. J. W. Buyers, showed a year of activity and harmony with the various organizations. Appreciation was expressed for the assistance given by the Ladies' Aid, in the grants toward the current and interest funds. The retiring managers were: Dr. J. M. McCulloch, R. Mulligan, J. W. Buyers, J. Tully and A. Parker.

The treasurer's report was read by Mr. R. Mulligan, showing receipts of $3338.79. The report of the organ fund, J. F. Morrison, treasurer, receipts $3592.95. Building fund receipts, $500.45. Interest fund, receipts, $877.26; F. J. A. Hall, treasurer.

The following managers were then elected to complete the board: Dr. J. M. McCulloch, Mr. R. Mulligan, Mr. J. W. Buyers, Mr. J. Tully and Mr. J. Morton. The auditors appointed were Mr. M. Clark and Mr. W. W. Yale. Representative to the Protestant Home, Rev. J. A. MacKenzie; for Lord's Day Alliance, Mr. H. Sturter; to the Charity Board, Mr. C. Huffman.

A MEDAL FOR C.P.R. BRAKEMAN

Little Tot Was Saved From Being Ground to Death

Havelock, Feb. 5.—Brakeman J. J. Carter of town is to be presented with an Albert medal of the second class for his heroism in saving the life of a little three year old girl in Tweed on May 10th last.

On that day the child's life was saved by Mr. Carter at the risk of his own life. The little tot was standing on the track with a monster locomotive thundering upon her. There was not time to stop a big engine and Mr. Carter ran to the pilot, jumped and caught the little one in his arms and threw himself and his precious burden clear of the track.

Reeve Kindred took the matter up some time ago with C.P.R. officials and the Secretary of State. He has received a letter from Gen. Mgr. MacTier of the C.P.R., stating that he had written Gen. Supt. Arundel of Toronto, advising that official that the C.P.R. had received official notice from Mr. Thomas Mulvey, Under Secretary of State, that he has been advised by the Colonial Secretary that King George had been pleased to award an Albert Medal of the Second Class to Brakeman Carter.

SHOOTING BY HOME GUARDS

Members Will be Graded for Target Practice

THE ORDERS

The regular weekly drill of the Home Guard was held at the armouries last night and about 300 men turned out. After roll call the companies were handed over to Sergt.-Major C. Peters and formed into five large companies and a good hard drill was indulged in. It was noticed that this method of drilling had immediate good results as there was no lost time and it was much easier to handle the small number of companies.

A meeting of the officers was held after drill and a new shooting schedule was drafted also arrangements complete for shooting during day time in the armouries ranges and drill by company commanders during the evenings.

Reports as to the shooting to date was received.

Number of men who have put in part of their shooting practice 600

Average number of rounds fired per man 44

340 men have made scores 25 to 30.

125 men have made scores 25 to 30.

The balance of the men are coming along first class.

The practice so far has been on targets with 1 inch bulls eye, the members who have qualified on these targets will find that the bulls eye under the new regulations will not be quite so easy to reach.

The following the the approximate dimensions for the different ranges:

Bull	...1 in.	¾ in.	½ in.
Inner	..2½ in.	1⅞ in.	1¼ in.
Mag.	...4 in.	3 in.	2 in.
Outer	..8 in.	6 in.	4 in.

The class of instruction was organized last Monday night and will be continued each Monday evening until further orders. Sergt.-Major C. Peters is instructor, and he promises that with good attendance and strict attention he will turn out the officers and non-commissioned officers of the battalion fit to take the several examinations.

The following are orders for the week:

Aldermen Interview Dr. McCullough in Regard to Site

FOR DISPOSAL PLANT

Ald. G. W. Green (chairman of the Board of Works and Ald. Johnston made a trip to Toronto yesterday and surely "covered the ground." The brace of city dads had a big program to go through but all was completed. Dr. McCullough of the Provincial Board of Health was first interviewed. The matter was in connection with the proposed site for the sewage disposal plant. Dr. McCullough asserted that the Provincial Board is backing the city in every step and again gave his assurance that the site selected by the city, that is across the river from the Street Railway Wharf, is the correct and only one. The chairman of the Board of Works thought this very satisfactory and as he stated today, "That strengthens our hand very much."

The next place to which the aldermen proceeded was to the office of Consulting Engineer Chipman. The question was the old account he has against the city for some $800 for services in connection with the Romaine Street sewer. A very satisfactory agreement was drawn up and will be submitted to the next meeting of the Board of Works. They also visited the Hydro offices.

Second Step in Campaign Threatened by Von Tirpitz is to be Put Into Execution at Once and War Zone is Declared Including British Isles---Washington is Aroused by Statement.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—No news from the fighting front has been as significant to London as last night's official pronunciamento from Berlin, in which the German Admiralty declares all the waters around Great Britain and Ireland a war zone on and after Feb. 18.

This is taken to be the second step in the campaign forecasted by Admiral von Tirpitz: a war against all ships approaching the British Isles. The destruction a few days ago of British merchant ships by German submarines was generally regarded as the first step.

This Admiralty announcement is also the chief topic of conversation in Britain to-day, and the feeling is one of confidence that the British Admiralty will soon find a way to nullify the effect of the German warning and probably to react so on Germany itself that her statesmen will wish they had not made the announcement in the first place.

Although The Morning Post and other London daily newspapers repeatedly have urged a blockade of German ports, thus cutting off all cotton and foodstuffs, the British Foreign Office repeatedly has made it clear that such a step is not contemplated, and announces that its policy is the same to-day as in the past.

It is added that the British Government has no thought of antagonizing neutral countries, whose shipping would be stopped by the closing of the North Sea.

The German Declaration.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—(By wireless to Sayville.) — The German Admiralty issued yesterday the following communication:

"The waters around Great Britain and Ireland, including the whole English Channel, are declared a war zone from and after Feb. 18, 1915.

"Every enemy ship found in these waters will be destroyed, even though it be impossible to give crews and passengers time to seek safety.

"Also, neutral ships in the war zone are in danger, as in consequence of the misuse of neutral flags ordered by the British Government on Jan. 31, and in view of the hazards of naval warfare, it cannot also be avoided that attacks meant for enemy ships endanger neutral ships.

"Shipping northward, around the Shetland islands, in the eastern basin of the North Sea, and in a strip of at least thirty nautical miles in breadth along the Dutch coast is endangered in the same way."

Washington Is Indignant.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5. — Germany's declaration that a war zone exists in the waters surrounding the British Isles was received in Washington last night, as new evidence of the state of desperation to which Germany is drifting by reason of the cutting off of her entire outside supply of foodstuffs. It is characterized as a new and far broader proclamation of a blockade than anything of record in international law, and the enunciation of a new doctrine more far-reaching in its purpose and possible effect than anything heretofore promulgated by one belligerent against another.

It is felt here that the announcement of such a policy as Germany has outlined in her declaration will be immediately productive of a vigorous protest from the United States. It is thought that Germany is advancing quite too far along the lines of belligerency to be able later to justify her course before the world.

FRENCH RE-TOOK TRENCHES AND GAINED EXTRA GROUND

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 5. — The official statement today says: "The French blew up a German trench to the west of Arras, on the Lille road, killing or making prisoners of all its German occupants, and immediately installed themselves in the captured position.

"In the Argonne, at Baggatelle, an attack on French positions resulted in Germans gaining about one hundred yards of trenches, which, however, two counter-attacks re-took, and some extra ground was gained.

"At several points French artillery silenced that of the enemy."

SAYS HE WON'T SELL PROPERTY AT ANY PRICE

Ald. Green and Ald. Johnston, who were in Toronto yesterday in the city's interests, waited on H. P. Kennedy in connection with purchasing the property on the south side of the Otonabee River, opposite the street railway wharf, where the proposed sewage disposal plant will be constructed. Mr. Kennedy still takes the same stand that he will not sell at any price. It appears as though the property will have to e expropriated and the price set by arbitration.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915

THE HON. N. A. BELCOURT'S ARGUMENT.

SOMEONE has been kind enough to forward to the Review some pamphlets on the bilingual school question. Among them is the argument of the Hon. N. A. Belcourt, K. C., before the Supreme Court of Ontario, on November 2nd, 1914. Mr. Belcourt sought to prove that Regulation 17 of the Department of Education of Ontario, regulating bilingual schools, was (1) unauthorized under the law of Ontario, and (2) "ultra vires," or beyond the constitutional power of the Legislature, (1) because I. Ed. VII. c. 39, s. 80, which prescribes English as the only language of instruction and communication in the schools, applies only to Public Schools, and (2) because of the Quebec Act, sub-sections 1 and 3 of Section 93 of the B. N. A. Act and Section 133 of the B. N. A. Act.

In the first place, it is noticeable that the Hon. Mr. Belcourt makes no reference to the Constitutional Act of 1791, which superseded the Quebec Act of 1774. He states that the Quebec Act has never been repealed, which, technically, may be true, but the very fact that the Constitutional Act was passed is evidence that the Quebec Act never applied to Upper Canada after 1791, or 1792, when the Constitutional Act became operative. The English settlers in that province protested against the Quebec Act — they did not want French civil law, nor seigneurial tenure; they wanted trial by jury, English criminal law, freehold tenure—they did not want to be governed by a council, but by the procedure of the English constitution. So, to satisfy them, and not to offend the French, the Province of Quebec was divided into Upper and Lower Canada, the intention being that Upper Canada would be the English province and Lower Canada the French province. The French could still keep the Quebec Act in force. If it had been thought necessary, it would have been repealed, so far as applying to Upper Canada, but some of the provisions of the Act of 1791 conflicted directly with some of the Quebec Act, such as those relating to the tenure of land and the kind of law that was to prevail, and this confliction was not considered because the Quebec Act was held not to apply to Upper Canada. The Act of 1791 undoubtedly annulled in Upper Canada any privileges conferred on French-Canadians by the Act of 1774. Upper Canada was, and is, an English province.

The Hon. Mr. Belcourt bases the bulk of his argument on what he calls natural rights, and he points to the brilliant and courageous work of French explorers in discovering new territory in Canada and in opening it to trade, particularly the fur trade. That the French did write many a glorious page of the early history of this part of North America is true, and that such works created rights to the soil and national privileges is also true, but, at the same time, every right and title so created, all the work of explorer and missionary, was swept away by the conquest. The surrender of the French forces at Quebec and at Montreal, afterwards confirmed by the Peace of Paris in 1763, abrogated every right and privilege and title as a nation and as a race that the French-Canadians had previously enjoyed. As a consequence, the French-Canadians have no rights or privileges except those conferred by the victors, as stated in the terms of the Capitulations of Quebec and Montreal, and by subsequent Acts, like that of 1774. As we have pointed out, the Quebec Act was not held to apply to Upper Canada after 1791.

The Constitutional Act was, in turn, superseded by the Act of Union of 1840. This Act, while still preserving the two provinces that had been brought into existence by the Act of 1791, united them under a joint parliament. This Act prohibited the use of the French language in the United Parliament, to which the Province of Quebec sent representatives. Just because Quebec did send members to this legislature was a good reason why French should be recognized; these members, many of them, knew only the French tongue, they represented French-speaking people who would understand only French, yet not until 1848 was an Imperial Act passed that recognized French as an official language in the United Parliament.

The Act of 1867, the B. N. A. Act, does not confer the privileges claimed under sub-sections 1 and 3 of Section 93. These clauses guarantee certain privileges to the Roman Catholic subjects of the Sovereign, such as the having of separate schools, but these very clauses cut at the root of the claims of the French-Canadians when the words "by law conferred" are used. Clause 2 of Section 93 reads thus:

> "All the powers, privileges and duties at the Union by law conferred and imposed in Upper Canada on the separate schools and school trustees of the Queen's Roman Catholic subjects shall be, and the same are hereby extended to the dissentient schools of the Queen's Protestant and Roman Catholic subjects in Quebec."

In clause 3 the words "exist by law at the Union" are used, so that these clauses, forming a chief buttress of the Hon. Mr. Belcourt's arguments, throw the claims of French-Canadians not on natural rights, but on the specified terms of written laws. Thus, the only basis for the claims of French-Canadians is the legal basis. Section 133 establishes the two languages, English and French, in the Dominion Parliament and Quebec Legislature, with the privilege of using either language in pleadings or process of any court of Canada, established under the B. N. A. Act, or of any court of Quebec. Both languages are employed in the Supreme Court of Canada. Thus, French is an official language only in the Dominion Parliament, the Province of Quebec and certain courts.

But the French-Canadians are casting the legal argument aside, precisely because it is very weak, so weak that their claims are not justified. The Act of Union of 1840 failed because one province was permitted to interfere in the affairs of the other. The Act of 1867 ended this difficulty by giving each province control of local affairs, yet this is exactly what the French, who are backing this movement, are striving to undo. They are interfering with the affairs of another province, and thus cutting at the very foundation of the great Act of Confederation.

The Quebec Act does not mention language as one of the privileges of French-Canadians, nor do the terms of the Capitulations of Quebec and Montreal say anything about language. The B. N. A. Act mentions only such privileges as were by law conferred, and it gives control over educational affairs of each province to its own legislature. Hence, because there is no law conferring special language privileges, such as the French claim, at the time of the Union, Regulation 17 does not conflict with other clauses of the B. N. A. Act, as Hon. Mr. Belcourt has attempted to prove. It is not, therefore, ultra vires or unconstitutional, and the emphasis placed on the statement of natural rights, both by Mr. Belcourt and by others, shows that they do not place very much reliance on the legal foundation of their case.

CANADIAN RIFLES FOR RUSSIA AND BRITAIN.

THOSE who have been condemning the Ross rifle will be gratified, no doubt, to learn that the Russian Government has contracted for three million of them, to be delivered during the next two years. In addition to this, the factory has undertaken to supply England and Canada with 500 rifles per day. The plant, which has already been doubled since the outbreak of war, will be doubled again before November, when it is expected that some five thousand men will be given employment.

The manufacture of rifles is at present a big problem of Great Britain, because the enlistment of men is so great that the factories cannot make rifles fast enough for them. One thousand rifles a day means only about 300,000 a year, so that one can see what it meant to Germany to have an army of even two million men equipped for war when it began. Besides the rifles, there are the vast quantities of ammunition required, as well, so that arming Kitchener's new armies is a tremendous amount of work. Even equipping an army such as Caanda is raising is no small achievement, especially in so short a time. Moreover, only the best weapons are worth using. It would be suicidal to place inferior weapons in the hands of the soldiers of the new armies. So that the contracts for Ross rifles for Russia and Britain show that it is up to the high standard required of the weapons in this war. Military authorities say that Kitchener's first army of 500,000 men, which is now being moved into France, is splendidly equipped. Never did an army leave for the seat of war that had finer equipment. Neither money nor time nor energy has been spared to fit it out, and the same policy is being followed with the other divisions of the new army. The use of the Canadian arm by these men is a compliment to Canada and to the weapon with which Canada will uphold the honour of the Empire on European battlefields.

A Royal Duke's Pun.

(Pearson's Magazine.)

The popularity of the Duke of Connaught in Canada at the present time is unbounded, and it is greatly due to the esteem in which he is held that recruiting has been so brisk among Canadians.

The Duke dearly loves a joke, and he is very smart at at repartee. Some years ago he visited Ireland, and a gentleman named Henn insisted on being introduced to him because, he said, his son had sat next to the Duke when they were up for their examinations for the army.

Without a moment's hesitation, the Duke replied: "I was, then, between two birds, for on my other side was a Mr. Peacock, and," he added, with a twinkle in his eye, "not one of us was plucked."

Germany Facing Famine?

(Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

Germany's food shortage is occupying a great deal of space in the papers these days, but if an examination be made into her resources and requirements, the interest need not be wondered at. In normal years, Germany imports $1,500,000,000 more agricultural products than she exports. Her great exports have been chiefly chemicals, textiles, base metals, machinery and miscellaneous manufactured articles. The only food stuff exported in large quantities was beet sugar. Germany must be face to face with famine.

Fair Warning.

(Cincinnati Enquirer.)

The lanky youth who occupied a seat in a passenger coach persisted in sticking his head and shoulders out of the window. The brakeman was passing through the coach and he touched the youth on the back.

"Better keep your head inside the window," advised the brakeman.

"I kin look out of the winder if I want to," answered the youth.

"I know you can," warned the brakeman. "But if you damage any of the ironwork on the bridges, you'll pay for it."

Count Bernstorff, German ambassador to the U. S., acting on instructions from his Government, suggested yesterday that an American Consul supervise the distribution of foodstuffs on the steamer Wilhelmina to German civilians.

A Dish of Snails

It is a mistake to think that snails are eaten only by the French. They have been known and used to a certain extent by the English ever since the days when snails boiled in milk were esteemed a remedy for consumption, and it has been said that a certain breed of snail now found in Surrey, England, was imported by one of the earls of Arundel for use of his failing wife.

One of the recipes for cooking snails is indicated by the verse of Edmund Spenser, which runs:

With our sharp weapons we shal thee fray,
And take the cae till that thou liest in.
We shal thee flay out of thy foule skin,
And in a dish, with onyons and peper,
We shal thee dresse with strong vynegare.

If you have never eaten snails, and the majority of persons who will read this have not, it is difficult to comprehend what the snail tastes like. It is difficult, if not impossible, to describe a flavor or a scent without comparison to something already known by the person to whom one would transmit the information, and it is said by an authority on snails that they have an original kind of flavor, not in the least like anything else. To be at his best the snail should be young and in vigorous and robust health. If improperly cooked he will be tough; if properly cooked he will be tender.

Snail culture in France is profitable. A single snail can produce sixty little snails in a season, but birds like them, frost kills them and some may run, or crawl, away. A French newspaper recently published the information that half a million "first quality" snails, the price of which averages about $1.40 per thousand, can be produced on an acre of land. It is necessary to feed them only once a day, but they have good appetites, especially after a rain, for cabbage and other green vegetables.—Washington Star.

Chinese and Japanese in This Land.

The total number of Chinese in the United States proper, according to the census of 1910, was 71,531, while the total number of Japanese was 72,157. These figures for 1910 are comparable with 89,863 Chinese and 24,326 Japanese who were in the United States proper in 1900, showing that the number of Chinese in this country in 1910 was 18,332 less than in 1900, while the number of Japanese increased 47,831 from 1900 to 1910. These figures do not include the Chinese and Japanese under the American flag living in the outlying possessions of the United States.

Desert Signposts

In traveling over the plains of western Texas, writes a contributor, I have now and then come on two little isolated heaps of rock that at first glance seemed not at all remarkable. After a time, I noticed that one heap was generally about three feet high, and the other about a foot lower. The two were always within a few feet of each other, and usually on an elevation or plateau that had a view of the country for five miles or more.

The rocks were roughly heaped together, as if left by children at play. I sometimes wondered if they could be the ruins of an ancient stone building; but that was improbable, for there was scarcely another stone in sight.

Years later I learned the actual significance of these rock heaps from an old Indian whose mind was stored with all the legends and customs and deeds of his people. According to him, when the Great Spirit lapped up the mighty rivers of the plains, he left springs and water basins here and there for the antelope and the Indian. These the antelope easily found by scent, but the Indian had to search long and anxiously for them. Once found, they were seldom lost—thanks to these rude rock heaps.

I watched the old fellow crouch down behind the taller heap, sight over the low one, and mark the farthest object in a straight line, which in this case was a clump of bushes on the horizon. We rode toward these bushes and found—not water, as I had expected, but two other heaps of rocks. Sighting as before, and taking a rock faced cliff toward the southwest as a goal, we rode two miles farther, and there, trickling out from beneath the cliff's rocky brow, was a spring of fresh, clear water.

The old Indian said that whenever a band of Indians came upon a new spring, they built these rock heaps along their trail; since then I have followed some half dozen of these rude signposts, and found them to lead either to water, or to places that showed traces of a former watercourse.—Youth's Companion.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

Smart Embroidered Neckwear.

The chemisette pictured here is combined with a flaring collar. It is a useful accessory to the one piece gown or the dark blouse.

The flowers and leaves can be worked either solidly or as eyelets or in a combination of solid work with eyelets. To obtain the effect illustrated let the front edges of the chemisette meet, work buttonholes in each side and close with links. Make solid embroidery by first darning backward and forward over the stamped dots, and then cover closely with over and over stitches, working in the opposite direction from the padding. To make the leaves and petals of the daisies as eyelets run a thread around the outline, then cut a slight slit lengthwise, then crosswise and work closely over and over.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

SYNOPSIS

Matt Broughton leaves the service of John Mort on a pacific island to return to America. Mort gives him a valuable ring. Broughton promises to say nothing about the mysterious Mort and his woman companion. He is shipwrecked and must realize in San Francisco on the ring.

Raising $1,000 on the ring, to be repaid, Broughton returns to his old home at Mamaswan. He thinks of going into the mule business with Victor Daggancourt, a colored garage keeper. Broughton is visited by the local editor, who calls him "king."

The "king" is due to a "fake" newspaper story about Broughton's adventures in the Pacific. At a church fair he meets Christine Marshall, daughter of a local magnate.

Matt falls in love with Chris, who asks him to call on her. Daggancourt is anxious to make the start in the mule business in Kentucky.

On his way to the Marshalls' Matt is detained by an importunate stranger, but Matt is late and cannot listen to him. He tells his love to Chris.

Chris also loves Matt. The stranger, who calls himself Kay, shows Matt an old portrait of Mort and offers him $50,000 for information about him, but Matt remains loyal.

There was no escape except through the window and that was double—two panes of almost the thickness of plate glass. Matt threw up one without difficulty, but the other stuck. He fumbled frantically at the catches, as he endeavored to lift it, while the door shivered now under the deadlier blows of an ax. But, thank God, the cramped passageway gave them no room for a swing! They were striking at an angle, as the lip of the blade once showed as it drove through and remained imbedded for an instant.

Oh, that window! He could get no real purchase on it. He skinned his fingers and strained his back to breaking, and still it defied him. He must burst it, then; that was the only way—burst it. But with what? There was Mr. Kay, crying out inarticulately and handing him something! Mr. Kay's shoe—a patent leather shoe with buttons, still warm from the foot. He seized it with avidity, this help from a quarter so unexpected—seized it with exultation.

Taking it by the toe, he crashed the heel through the window. Hammer, hammer, hammer, with the glass shattering and the jagged, vicious edges disappearing beneath a rain of blows, disappearing till he could trust his hands on the frame and wriggle out. He went legs first, crawlingly, scraping his wrists and hands on the thin knife of undislodged glass, waistcoat and shirt half pulled to his neck—but out, no matter how, till, hanging his full length, he let himself drop to the track alongside the car.

He heard shouts above, as though the broken window had filled with emerging heads; he saw the chauffeur jump from the automobile and slink to the ground; there was a vision of the porter, with outstretched arms, rushing to intercept him, and a guttural voice from somewhere cried out with a sort of wail, "Don't shoot!"

If anything more were needed to hasten Matt's feet it was this thrilling command. He ran till the stitch in his side was insupportable and his heart was ready to burst—ran, trotted, limped till, thank God, there were people all about him and lights and animation and security.

It was the hour of the New York express, with passengers waiting and three hotel omnibuses drawn up for their evening quota. Matt threw himself on a bench between two of his unconscious preservers, panting and grateful, while they looked at him askance, wondering at his disordered appearance.

There he sat, slowly recovering himself and meditating what he ought to do. His first idea was to invoke the police; to enter a formal complaint and return to the car with a posse of constables. But as he thought it over the wisdom of this course grew less apparent. His story was not likely to be believed; indeed, his cunning foes might turn the tables on him and invent a complaint of their own, with him as the culprit. It might resolve itself into his word against theirs—the word of people in a private car against that of a lunatic prating of $100,000 and of a stolen ruby ring worth a fortune. Thus analyzed his case was ridiculous—a fantasy.

He hastened home in some trepidation and only felt safe when he had snuggled into bed.

The next day there was a note from Chris, brought by a messenger:

You Dear You—It was so foolish of me to be ill and spoil everything, though I got so cross at your being turned away that I improved instantly and ate a whole plate of calf's foot jelly. This is to ask you to come and share some more with me on a sofa, and call it an invitation to lunch. Papa is going to New York on business, and we can be all by ourselves, and I'm awfully glad and excited, though I suppose I oughtn't to tell you so—or ask you at all, for that matter. But come anyway, even if the heavens fall and you should get your beautiful wavy hair all covered with plaster. Twelve-thirty, please, and don't think I've changed, because I haven't, and all last night I was thinking and—I am awfully, deliriously happy, and somehow it is your fault, and I feel the back and shut my eyes—and if you are a minute late I shall hate you. CHRIS.

It would be impossible to describe the heartrending effect of this letter on Matt. When his debts were paid he would have exactly $112 left in the whole world. True, many a man had succeeded with as little—with less—but that took time—years—and Matt had no years to spare. The only thing he could look to, the only thing that offered him a living was the sea.

He went out to search for the private car, impelled by a forlorn hope of regaining his ring. Somehow, perhaps, this might happen. Seen in the retrospect, Mr. Kay appeared to be his friend. At any rate, Kay had defended him and held the door against his enemies. Mr. Kay might be terrified or persuaded into returning the ring. Matt stopped at a pawnbroker's and bought a cheap revolver for $3; stopped at a hardware store and bought ten .38 cartridges for 25 cents; loitered under a tree and surreptitiously shoved six of them into the chamber and then went on with his right hand pocket bulging.

He was ready for anything—was cool and determined. But there was no private car to be found. He searched the entire yard and questioned every one, but the private car had vanished. Nobody knew anything about a private car—nothing.

Matt idled about till it was time to start for Fair Oaks. Idled and smoked pipe after pipe and wished he had never bought that confounded revolver which weighed down his pocket like a brick. He walked all the way to save the hire of a carriage and waited again at the entrance to the grounds to time his arrival exactly for half past 12. She had said she would hate him if he arrived a minute late. So, watch in hand, he dilly dallied until he could make his appearance with the precision of a Monte Cristo.

"Miss Marshall?"

"Oh, yes, sir! This way, please."

CHAPTER IX.

The Kay to Paradise.

CHRIS was half reclining on a sofa, propped about with pillows, and in a Chinese wrap of magnificent old brocade, all gold and twisted embroidered dragons. Her delicate beauty was unimpaired by any trace of illness, though enhanced by the unusual brilliancy of her eyes and a flush, too hectic for health, that mantled the fine oval of her face.

Matt ran to her, taking her hands and kissing them, and then sank on his knees beside her. His cares, his wretchedness, the misery of his renunciation—all were gone as the soft bare arms closed round his neck and drew down his head. Somehow, mysteriously, he knew not how, the load was lifted from his heart.

She raised his face and scrutinized him with a pretty air of ownership and a gravity that dimpled at the corners of her mouth.

"A tired boy?" she said speculatingly. "A wondering, worried, scared boy! A boy who has been thinking too much and eating too little, and, oh, dear, what a scratched boy!"

"I got that climbing out of a Pullman window last night," explained Matt, showing his wrists. "I had to break it with a shoe that an old gentleman kindly lent me and got out in a hurry."

Chris' eyes opened very wide.

"What a funny, strange, impetuous boy!" she exclaimed. "Wasn't there any door?"

"There were people banging that in, yowling for my destruction," continued Matt tantalizingly. "I don't know what they wanted, I'm sure, but they were going at it in the liveliest way with an ax, and I chose the window rather than wait and find out."

"That was a prudent boy, but—but—where on earth did all this happen?"

"In a private car, sidetracked near the railway station."

"But how did you happen to go there?"

"That old gentleman took me there—the one who lent me his shoe. Paid me $50 for going and rode me there in an automobile."

"But why?"

"I'm telling it all the wrong end foremost," went on Matt. "It's an extraordinary story—Chris, it's astounding. I can't make head nor tail of it. I was actually offered $100,000—think of it, Chris, positively $100,000—right there in greenbacks to betray a man I knew. Had it forced on me—almost stuffed in my pocket."

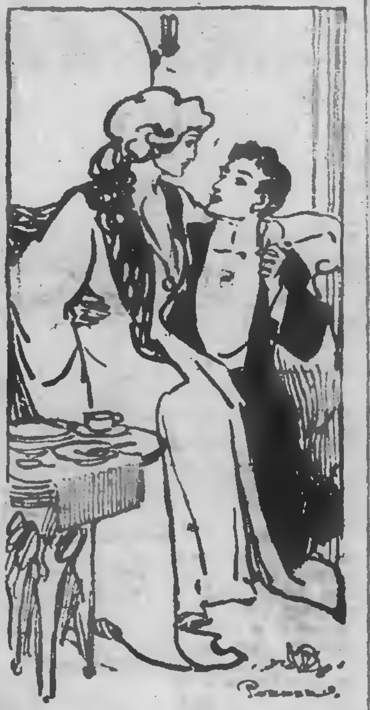
Her surprise, disbelief even, caused him to draw forth the revolver in witness.

"It's not a joke, Chris," he said. "I bought that this morning and may be mighty glad I did so."

The momentary flash of steel was thrilling in that quiet room and amid such peaceful surroundings. Chris uttered a little cry, breathing fast and gazing at him in amazement.

"You frighten me," she gasped out. "Matt, I'm frightened. What does it all mean? Tell me!"

"The trouble is I don't know myself," he returned as a tide of depressing recollections swept over him. "I am somehow a blind cog in other people's business, and the thing that hits me hardest is that they have ruined me.



"What a funny, strange, impetuous boy!"

I've lost everything, Chris, everything I counted on to make a start somewhere. I had $4,000 as safe as though it was in the bank, and it's gone, stolen, God knows how, but they have got it—robbed me, Chris, robbed me."

His voice was shaking. The realization of his loss was unnerving him. His shoulders heaved. "I don't know which way to turn. Four thousand dollars isn't much, of course, but it meant you. I—I hoped it meant you after what you had said; believed it did anyway; counted on it. Yes, you and I together, no matter how poor, but with some sort of a home of our own. And now it's gone, and I haven't anything, and it means goodby, Chris. It means goodby."

He bowed his head in shame, refusing to be comforted, while she whispered and whispered that she loved him; that it would never be goodby, never, Matt, never; that as long as they had each other nothing could hurt them; that he was a poor, precious, foolish, silly, devoted boy person without any sense at all, who thought he could walk away from love and leave it behind, like an umbrella, just because he hadn't $4,000! As though it made the least difference what he had, her lover boy, her darling, for he was strong and splendid and brave and big. And if that wasn't being rich what was? And he had her, hadn't he? And he wasn't to think she was always a helpless, draggy thing, lying down on a sofa in a dragon coat, eating calfsfoot jelly. No, indeed, she wasn't, but able to go out and fight, too, and jump out of a Pullman window, if need be, as well as he could, and probably better, judging by his poor, cut wrists. And work, yes, work her hands off for the man she loved—and he was that, wasn't he? He knew he was that.

Then the great secret trembled on his tongue, and it seemed impossible to withhold it any longer, for it had become essential for her to know it. That it was safe in her keeping was a sacrilege to question.

Accordingly he told of Lotoalofa, of John Mort and Mirovna and of his long, lonely voyages at the behest of this strange, wealthy pair, who in that waste of sea and reefs had founded a mimic kingdom and hidden themselves beyond the ken of men. He told with pride of their reliance on him, of their steadfast trust and friendship, of the silence he had been pledged to and which he had hitherto kept so loyally.

"That's the story," said Matt in conclusion. "If you can make head or tail of it, go ahead."

"Of course he has run away," Chris replied with intense interest. "And they want him back a whole hundred thousand dollars' worth."

"Agreed."

"A defaulting banker perhaps?"

"Knows too little of money—I could have robbed him of thousands."

"A South American president ousted by a revolution?"

"He cannot speak Spanish. Go on."

"Perhaps this lovely Mirovna isn't his wife?"

"I've never thought she was, but"—

"The husband is enormously rich and is trying to follow them?"

"That isn't likely. Besides, he said it would shake the world. Those were his own words."

"How could anybody being found—any man—shake the world?"

"That's the puzzle of it."

"You are not positive of his nationality?"

"Well, I think he's a German. He speaks German fluently, though French, too, for that matter, and Italian."

"But a German's a German—they are unmistakable."

"I'm pretty sure he's a German."

"And Mirovna?"

"Oh, less sure. I couldn't guess what she is, but possibly a Pole or some eastern European. She has a profile like a Byzantine medal."

"I've known awfully German kind of Russians—stiff, autocratic and yet delightful."

"Yes, he might be a Russian."

"Oh, there it is! Political refugees—state secrets—the myrmidons of the czar! It's as plain as daylight, Matt; he's a nihilist!"

"An awfully rich nihilist, Chris? It hardly fits into one's ideas of him or Mirovna. What! A nihilist with an inexhaustible supply of Bank of England notes?"

"How do you know he doesn't make them himself?"

Then why not patronize purely CANADIAN INSTITUTIONS

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years)	$419.00
The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years ..	51.00
Total cost in 25 years	470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period	475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

QUEER JOURNALISTIC FEAT.

It Hit the London Times and Boomed the Manchester Guardian.

Once there was an obscure subeditor of the Manchester Guardian in England. It was a long time ago, and the Guardian was scarcely known outside of its own city.

The subeditor had a habit of drinking ale until he was so drowsy that he could not lift his head from his desk. On one occasion the composing room was yelling for "copy," as the editorial page was absolutely vacant.

The subeditor had been asleep on his desk for hours and his pen had been idle. The foreman of the composing room finally succeeded in arousing the man and yelled in his ear that something must be done for copy.

Whereupon the sleepy one grabbed a pair of shears and clipped one whole column from the editorial page of the London Times. At the top he wrote in a crabbed hand:

"What does the London Times mean by the following?"

It was printed, column and all. That single quizzical introduction made the Manchester Guardian famous. People began to ask what the Times did mean by the editorial, which was on a rather revolutionary subject. The subeditor slept for several hours, but John E. Wilkie says his paper's greatness began from that moment.—Washington Star.

To Fight For Depositors.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 5. — In the Legislature yesterday afternoon, Attorney-General Bowser, speaking of the Dominion Trust failure, said the Government had decided to employ E. P. Davis, K.C., of Vancouver, as a special counsel for depositors, and he believed the latter could be reinstated in their position amongst the general creditors of the company. Many depositors are now without funds, and in order to assist their position the Government will, if necessary, said Mr. Bowser, fight the case to the Privy Council.

Turk Torpedo Boats Sunk.

ATHENS, Feb. 5. — Despatches from Mitylene says that Turkish torpedo boats made a sortie from the Dardanelles to attack the Anglo-French fleet bombarding the forts. Two of the Turkish ships were sunk and a third badly damaged. The rest gained the protection of the forts.

ALLIED ADVANCE AT ALBERT SHATTERS GERMAN DEFENCES

First Attack Compels Germans to Fall Back on Second Line of Trenches and Operations Will Force Further Retreats—French Have Now Placed Long-Range Artillery in the Aisne Valley.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—French successes in the neighborhood of Albert, south of La Bassee and Armentieres, were recorded yesterday. First the French artillery destroyed a number of German blockhouses and next the infantry captured about 300 yards of the enemy's trenches, near Heburterne, north of Albert. The success thus gained permitted the guns to be pushed forward sufficiently to reach German convoys and assembling points and create big execution.

This development will have the effect of forcing the Germans to withdraw from their advanced positions along this section to take up new lines and be constantly exposed to a heavy fire all the time this operation is being carried on.

Long-range artillery has also been put in place by the French in the Aisne Valley, and they are now able to dominate the German guns. Efficient marksmanship put a number of batteries out of action, blew up caissons with their ammunition, and dispersed parties of men engaged in construction work Wednesday. German aeroplanes which attempted to do some scouting were fired at so accurately that they had to take to ignominious flight.

Verdun was also the scene of the destruction of a German aeroplane, which was brought down by gun fire, and the aviators taken prisoners.

In Belgium, heavy artillery fire has thundered along the lines. North of Arras, along the Lys, and to the north of Nieuport, the duel of big guns has been terrific.

Three infantry attacks on the French trenches in the vicinity of Perthes were made by about one thousand men at each point. French artillery fire dispersed the first two onsets, and though a mine explosion forced the French to fall back north of Messiges, the lost ground was recovered in a counter-offensive, and new trenches were dug a few yards from the old ones, which had been rendered incapable of occupation.

The afternoon report said:

"To the north of the Lys there was in the vicinity of Nieuport a particularly spirited artillery engagement.

"At Notre Dame de Lorette, to the southwest of Lens, a determined German attack the morning of Feb. 3 was driven back by the fire of our artillery. The French guns also put an end to a bombardment of the road between Arras and Bethune.

"In the region of Albert and Duquesney-en-Santerre we destroyed several blockhouses. Throughout the entire Aisne valley there was on Feb. 3 an artillery engagement in which the advantage rested with us.

"The three attacks reported Wednesday night against our trenches in the vicinity of Perthes, Mesnilles-Hurlus and Massiges were carried out by forces of the enemy which equalled a battalion (1,000) men at each point. The first two attacks were completely dispelled by the fire of our artillery. The third, which took place north of Massiges, took advantage of a mine explosion to make headway. Later we captured these locations. We built new trenches at a few yards distant from those which had been blown up by the Germans and which had become untenable.

"Feb. 3 passed quietly in the Argonne.

"In the Woevre district and in the valley of the Seille, we were successful in some outpost encounters, and we dispersed certain of the enemy."

Not Raising False Hopes.

Collector—Then I'm to tell the firm that you will probably settle this account next week.

Poorpaye—Well "probably" is pretty strong. Better make it "possibly."

WAS KILLED WHEN MACHINE FELL

Canadian Aviator Perished at Shoreham

MADE DARING FLIGHTS

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Lieut. Wm. F. Sharpe of the Canadian contingent, attached to the Royal Army Flying Corps, was killed yesterday afternoon when making his first flight unaccompanied. The accident happened at Shoreham, where he had been under instruction for about a fortnight. Piloting a Maurice Farman biplane, he made a flight up the Adur Valley. He was descending, and when he had about reached the ground his machine was seen to tip nose downwards abruptly and then fell in a heap. When assistance arrived Sharpe was still breathing, but he died almost immediately. His machine was smashed to pieces.

Cables a few weeks ago described a number of daring flights made by Lieut. Sharpe over the German lines in company with Poulet, the French aviator.

Sharpe was born in Prescott, Ont., but spent most of his life in Ottawa. He took up aviation at the Curtiss school and has seen aerial service in Japan and Mexico.

VON HINDENBURG TRIES TO RELIEVE PRESSURE

APPALLING SACRIFICES

In a Desperate Attempt to Break the Russian Line in Front of Warsaw—German Positions at Ends of Line Are Perilous.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 5.—A series of battles, with full strength on both sides, is developing along the entire front. Their swaying fortuntes are immediately registered in the cockpit around the junction of the Bzura and Rawka rivers, in front of Warsaw, where the most hardened men of the opposing armies in central Poland are thrown within bayonet-thrust of each other. The measure of increasing danger to the Germans in north Poland and the elaborate Austro-German combination in the eastern Carpathians are marked by the rapidly-growing fury of Von Hindenburg's attempt to drive a wedge through centre Russia to a stationary position between the Bolimoki and the Bzura.

The cost of this desperate plan is appalling; but it is the only alternative left. About 50,000 of their best infantry, which the backing of an incredible mass of artillery, were sent by the Germans into a narrow front among the shattered farms around Humin. All day Tuesday was a continuous succession of charges, without the gain of a foothold of the way into Russian entrenched line. No tactical manoeuvring was attempted. There were only headlong rushes, the men bending over their bayonets.

More than half of them were shot down before reaching within 50 yards of the frozen ditches where the Russians lay waiting, and then sprang on the Germans with bayonets and butt ends of rifles. In the short, silent, death grapple the issue was decided, and the surviving Germans were sent reeling back underground.

To cover this supreme sacrifice of Mackenzen's best trops, is the necessity of an Austrian compact. Von Hindenburg has no railway system over which an army can be sent round to be in time to convert the Austrian column in the Carpathians into a victorious army. He must consequently, by gigantic frontal assaults on the heart of the Russian position in Poland, try to compel his enemy to bring up substantial forces from the Galician side of the Carpathians and so relieve the Austrians.

He has an even more immediate motive for hammering at the Russian centre. His army in North Poland is in a worse position than any purely German force in the eastern theatre of war. The Austrians already confess themselves unequal to their task. German reserves already have been brought up chiefly by railway from Munkacz, in Hungary, and distributed among the Austrian columns to try to prevent them from yielding. This transference of the German contingent in Hungary was readily made when the Austrians saw the last hope of attacking Servia extinguished by the flooding of the Danube and Save to an extent that precludes the idea of a campaign for several weeks. The Austrians maintain their defence south of the Uzhok Pass, while the projected offensive, with principal German supports east of the Beskid Mountains has been repulsed.

In the vicinity of Tilsia and southward of the Mazurian Lake region in East Prussia and on the right bank of the Vistula between Plotsk Dobryzin and Lipno, daily skirmishes are reported.

This fighting is chiefly between cavalry and artillery and each side apparently is only intent on discovering the weakness of the other's line, or preventing flanking attempts.

It is announced that the Russian troops on Feb. 3 occupied Voliachidlowska (Wola Szydlowiecka) to the east of Bolimow, Poland.

Emperor Nicholas left Tsarskoe Selo yesterday for the front. He was accompanied as far as the station by the Empress Alexandra and his daughters.

AUSTRIANS ARE OUT OF TARNOW

They Admit Fall of Town on Way to Cracow

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 5. — (Via London.) — The Austro-Hungarian war press bureau has issued the following:

"Artillery and infantry fighting continues along the Nida river.

"We evacuated Tarnow (Galicia) after the Russians bombarded the place with heavy mortars.

"A decisive battle is being fought in the region of Dukla, where strong Russian pressure is felt in the direction of Dukla Pass and neighboring passes. The fighting in the Carpathians is being seriously interfered with by the deep snow."

The Russians are marching on Cracow via Tarnow, which is a town of some 40,000 inhabitants, on the Piala river, a short distance from its junction with the Dunajec.

Few German Waiters Released.

LONDON, Feb. 5. — The Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna, put an end yesterday to an agitation which has been conducted by certain London newspapers, because, they alleged, thousands of German waiters who had been interned as alien enemies were released recently and were returning to work in London hotels. Mr. McKenna said in the House of Commons that the actual number released in January was three. In the last four months thirty were released after a careful investigation of their records.

HASTINGS HAPPENINGS

Hastings, Feb. 5.—A comedy entitled "The Dust of the Earth," was rendered in the town hall on Friday night, under the auspices of the Hastings Chapter I.O.D.E., and universally acknowledged to be one of the best entertainments ever presented here. Th actors who took part were all local and certainly brought great credit to themselves, as well as to those who had charge of their training. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, standing room being almost at a premium and the best of order prevailed throughout the entire play. It would be a very difficult matter to decide which one of the actors performed their part the best, as each one seemed to vie with the other in excellence, and performed their part so perfectly in every detail that the audience throughout were almost spellbound. The proceeds are to be contributed to the patriotic fund. Following are the characters:

David Moore, of Maple Farm Cottage—Chas. Plant.

Susan Moore, his wife — Pansy Runnels.

Elizabeth, their daughter—M. Halpin.

Jerry, their son—Harry Chapman.

WILL STOP THE WILHELMINA

Confiscation of Cargo Now Necessary Says British Government

LONDON, Feb. 5. — Great Britain has decided that, if the American steamer Wilhelmina, now on her way with a cargo of foodstuffs for Germany, is intercepted, her cargo will be submitted to a prize court, so that the new situation arising out of the action of Germany in ordering that all grain and flour shall be placed under control of the Government may be regularized. In a statement issued last night the British Foreign Office says:

"The new German decree makes it evident that all grain and flour is to pass under control of the German Government, and it must, therefore, when imported, be regarded as virtually consigned to the German Government, or to the authorities under their control.

"This creates a novel situation and it is probable that if the destination and cargo of the Wilhelmina are as supposed, the cargo will, if the vessel is intercepted, be submitted to a prize court in order that the new situation created by the German decree may be examined and a decision reached upon it after full consideration.

"There is no question of taking any proceedings against the vessel, and the owners of the vessel will be indemnified for any delay caused to it, and the shippers of the cargo compensated for any loss caused to them by the action of the British authorities.

"The apparent intention, however, of the German Government to sink merchant ships by submarines, without bringing them into port or providing accommodation for their crews, and regardless of the loss of civilian lives and the attempt to effect this even against a hospital ship has raised very seriously the question whether Great Britain should adopt in retaliation more stringent measures against German trade."

FAILED TO CROSS CANAL

Turks in Wednesday's Battle Numbered Twelve Thousand

CAIRO, Feb. 5. — Full details of Wednesday's twelve-hour fight on the Suez Canal show that fully 12,000 Turks, employed at three points, were beaten, with a heavy loss in killed, wounded and captured. The main attack was delivered at Tusun, near Serapeum, where a splendid brigade of British troops acquitted itself magnificently.

Shortly after 3 o'clock in the morning during a sandstorm the Turkish infantry attacked under cover of heavy Maxim fire, and made a resolute attempt to cross the canal by means of pontoons and rafts.

At sunrise the Turkish troops tried to advance on Tusun and Serapeum, their artillery opening fire on both places. Our artillery ashore and from the ships replied, but the fighting kept up until our infantry advanced from Serapeum, forcing the enemy to retire at 3.30 in the afternoon.

During this action, which was very creditable to our troops, eight Turkish officers and 282 men were taken prisoners, while a large number of Turkish dead were left on the desert below the rising sand hills on the east bank of the canal.

The British warship Hardinge was twice hit by shells, and ten men of her crew were wounded. Our other losses were two officers and 13 men killed and 58 wounded.

A battery of Egyptian field artillery behaved extremely well near Serapeum, their losses including one officer and two men killed.

The New Zealand contingent, and presumably the Australians, as well as British Territorials, Egyptians and Indians, took part in the fight. The New Zealanders had two casualties.

Cure For Nosebleed.

I sometimes read in the daily papers of death caused by bleeding at the nose. Here is a cure discovered by me and not known or practiced by any physician. I am an old shipmaster, have tried it in a number of cases and never knew it to fail. It is very simple. Any one can perform the operation.

Place the patient in a sitting position or propped up in bed, and with the forefinger press gently in the hollow of the throat just above the breast bone, and the bleeding will gradually cease.

THE WORLD'S SWEET TOOTH

Marvellous Confections of Fifteenth Century

In making desserts and pastry the ancient Assyrians, Egyptians, Persians and Greeks excelled, but they had no sugar; instead of it they used honey. The Romans also were great eaters of sweets, and the Emperors Caligula, Heliogabalus and Vitellius did not disdain to descend to the kitchen and make pastry.

Jam was invented by the Spaniard Gallicus, puddings by the Roman Apicius, almond cake by the early inhabitants of Turin, flat fruit pies originated in Naples, and spiced cake in Bologna. The Carmelite monks invented tarts. We owe the Arabs the addition of essences and perfumes to cooking, also the candying of fruits and nuts.

Sugar was first introduced to European kitchens by the Venetians in the fifteenth century.

Some of the pastry cooks of that day must have been wonders, for contemporary documents describe several such feats as that performed by Cardinal Riario's chef, who, on the occasion of a banquet given by his master to Queen Eleonora of Aragon in 1473 served a cake showing all the "labors of Hercules, with castles and ten ships made of sugar and sweetmeats, containing living men." And the chronicles of Salimbeni narrate that at the wedding of Annibale Bentivoglio at Bologna a sumptuous banquet was served, at which there were "castles of sugar with live birds and rabbits inside, and a live sucking pig that tried to get out and grunted and climbed up till his head looked over the ramparts. And each cake took eight men to carry it, and all the viands were gilded, from the bread to the eggs and oysters and to the claws and beaks of the birds."

The city of Venice gave a banquet to Henry III., King of Poland, in 1574, at which "tablecloths, napkins, plates, knives, forks, bread and everything were made of sugar. So well were they imitated that the king was deceived, and when he took hold of the tablecloth it broke off in his hands, wherefore he was pleasantly astonished, as he had already been by the trees and two lions and horses (life size), all made of sugar."

The Lone Wolverene.

Michigan is called the Wolverene State because at one time it was the habitat of the animal of that name. The same state used to have wild pigeon roosts of such vast size the sky would be darkened for many miles when the birds were arriving and leaving their roosts. Now the wild pigeon is a thing of the past, and the fact that a lone wolverene has been captured in Alaska and is to be placed in the Detroit zoo is regarded as a great achievement. Washington has its Potomac shad, but it may become extinct unless it is properly protected.—Washington Herald.

Blasting With Oxygen.

A practical way of using liquid oxygen for blasting has at last been found. Bags filled with a special form of lampblack are soaked in liquid oxygen for a few minutes. When detonated they explode with the force of dynamite, but when lighted with a match they burn quietly and slowly. The cost is much less than that of dynamite, much less carbon dioxide is given off, and there is no danger from a misfire, as the oxygen will evaporate quickly if not exploded at once.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 4.—The wheat market at the opening was a repetition of yesterday, as regards excitement. May wheat had a range of 2 cents, the figures being from $1.53 to $1.55. At about noon the price was standing at $1.58¾ for May and $1.59¾ for July. In the first twelve minutes of business prices jumped to $1.57, the fluctuations following being quick and wide, and ranging from $1.52¾ to $1.59¾. The volume of trading in futures was light, and in export circles there was nothing doing.

Oats opened easier, but regained strength later.

Inspections on Wednesday totaled 300 cars, as against ten last year, and in sight today were 140.

Wheat futures closed 1¾c higher, cash 1¾c higher on contract, oats ⅛c to ⅜c lower and flax ⅛c to 1¼c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 4.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable today was very quiet. There was enquiry from foreign buyers at a decline in prices of 1s to 1s6d per quarter for regular grades which exporters would not consider, but the bids for sample wheat were satisfactory and sales of a few loads were made. There was a good demand for oats and sales of 40 cars were made. Canadian western oats were unchanged but the tone of the market for local oats is stronger and prices are tending towards a higher level. The feature of the flour market was the stronger feeling in winter wheat grades and prices have scored a further advance of 20c to 40c per barrel under a fair demand and small offerings. Spring wheat flour is firm with a steady business doing for domestic account. Demand for millfeed is good and the market is active at firm prices. Butter is stronger at an advance of 1c per pound. Cheese unchanged. Eggs easier.

Marrying Debora

How She Fooled Them

By AGNES G. BROGAN

"It is the most ridiculous thing I ever heard," said Debora. "No one but aunt could have conceived such an idiotic idea."

"Why, I don't know," mother answered musingly. "People who leave their money to be disposed of after death miss the pleasure of seeing others enjoy it. When your Aunt Debora makes a present of $50,000 to the niece first satisfactorily married she will not only be sure that her money has been wisely placed, but will furnish, at the same time, an incentive to early marriage among her young relatives."

"If aunt is so keen about early marriages," Debora spitefully remarked, "she should have made one herself. It is my private opinion, mother, that this unique proposal is made especially for my benefit."

Mother looked troubled.

"You must confess, dear," she said, "that you are rather difficult where men are concerned. I'm sure I don't know what is to become of you unless you give up some of your high ideals. Men are not perfect, you know." Mother sighed deeply. "The provoking part of it is," she continued, "that your cousin, Lucretia, already has a constant admirer."

"She may keep him, mother," Debora interjected cheerfully, while Brother Jack laughed.

"But it is such a pity to let all that money go out of the family," mother complained, "when we might just as well have it, if you would be more reasonable, Debora."

The family finally determined to send Debora away. There was a vague possibility that "Love," traveling abroad, might meet the contrary one unaware, and Cousin Lucretia's young man had now reached the flower and candy stage. It was decided that Debora should visit no less a person than her wealthy eccentric aunt.

"The very thing!" the girl exclaimed joyously. "Perhaps Aunt Debora will like me so well that she will make me a present of the money without—a man attachment."

"Rosemere is a settlement of millionaires," mother said importantly. "You ought to meet a number of eligibles there, Debora."

Judging from her first epistle, Debora had evidently dismissed the vexing man problem from her versatile mind.

She told enthusiastically of learning to run a tremendous horsepower automobile, and from then on her letters became a confused repetition of carbureters, spark plugs and other terms of automobile mechanism.

While, to add to the annoyance and chagrin, Lucretia's mother called to say that Lucretia's young man had proposed.

"We shall notify Aunt Debora as soon as possible," Lucretia's mother triumphantly concluded.

The mother of Debora broke the sad news to her assembled family that evening. Father smiled slyly as he drew a telegram from his pocket.

"Read that," he said, and, snatching it, Jack read aloud:

> Am bringing Larry home to see you. We have been engaged for two weeks.
> DEBORA.

Immediately there was the clatter of high heels down the hall, and then, there in the doorway, appeared the winsome face of Debora herself. Talking in a delighted incoherent chorus, the family fell upon her.

"Engaged!" cried little sister.

"Two weeks before Lucretia," added mother exultantly.

"You gave us so little information, dearie," grandmother complained, and the radiantly transformed Debora, seating herself, beamed upon them all.

"What is his business or profession, and—has he any money?" asked her father.

Debora shook her head.

"Not a penny," she answered regretfully. "He has no business or profession, either. Larry just sort of knocked around before he met me. He had no incentive to do better, but now"—

"Debora," mother asked deliberately, "where did you meet—this paragon? Was he introduced to you by your aunt?"

The girl's sunny smile returned.

"He wasn't introduced at all," she said pleasantly. "I met him in Mrs. Vandyke's garage."

The family exchanged glances of shocked incredulity.

"A garage?" Jack repeated.

"I said so," Debora answered petulantly. "Mrs. Vandyke lives next door to aunt. They have been lifelong friends. Aunt's pet spaniel got through a gap in the hedge one day, and I chased him into the Vandyke garage."

The old lady peered over her spectacles.

"Granddaughter," she asked wonderingly, "what was this Mr. McClure doing in Mrs. Vandyke's garage?"

Debora smiled again. "Why, didn't I tell you?" she said. "He runs Mrs. Vandyke's car!"

"Do you mean to tell me," father cried out sharply, "that this man is an ordinary chauffeur?"

"Not an ordinary chauffeur, father," the girl answered rebukingly. "Why, Mrs. Vandyke says she would not risk her life with any other driver."

"I should like to see the young man for about five minutes to tell him what I think of him," father said heatedly.

Debora rose and collected her belongings.

"You will have a chance pretty soon," she announced. "Larry and I rode in from Rosemere together, something went wrong with the automobile, and he stopped to fix it."

She had barely disappeared when a brilliant red car flashed past the windows, and the driver, alighting, hastily tossed his leather coat and goggles back upon the seat, then with nimble assurance dashed up the steps to the entrance.

"I am Mr. McClure," the young man announced, and mother recognized at once the soft tones so recently described.

"You will come in, please," she said, but even the infectious smile with which her invitation was accepted had no power to melt the frigid coldness of mother's manner.

"I seem to know you all from Debora's description," he said genially. Father bowed.

"We are glad to have this opportunity of speaking to you, Mr.—er—McClure," he said. "Be seated, please."

With a puzzled glance at the forbidding faces, the young man obeyed.

"Debora has informed us of entering into a hasty and foolish engagement," father continued, "an engagement which you must realize to be altogether impossible."

"Why impossible, sir?" Mr. Larry McClure asked quietly.

Father cleared his throat.

"In the first place," he began, "you may have heard of a gift of $50,000 which my daughter's aunt proposed to give to the one of her nieces first satisfactorily married. This reckless engagement would entirely exclude my daughter from receiving that gift."

Larry McClure wrinkled his brows.

"Debora told me about the money," he frankly confessed. "And Debora is the first niece to become engaged, isn't she?"

Father frowned. "You evidently forget the stipulation—'satisfactorily,'" he said.

"Well," Larry asked, "what's so unsatisfactory about me?"

The family looked aghast.

"Why, you've no prospects, no business, no profession."

Larry breathed a vast sigh of relief.

"If that is all," he said, "then everything will be right. I am going to study for a profession after Debora and I are married. It would be too long to wait—before."

"Would you mind telling me," father asked, and his tone was severe again, "how you and my daughter intend to live while you are studying for this profession?"

"Certainly, sir," Larry answered briskly. "You have forgotten the fifty thousand which I shall receive with my bride."

"Does my sister understand that you are counting on this money?"

Jack burst out hotly, "Has Debora quite gone crazy?"

"It was your sister who suggested the plan," Larry McClure indignantly retorted. Father rose to end the discussion.

"You are overconfident concerning this gift of money," he said cuttingly. "I am very sure that my daughter's aunt would not consider an ordinary chauffeur a satisfactory husband for Debora."

Mr. McClure stared inquiringly.

"An ordinary chauffeur?" he repeated.

"Father," cried a reproachful voice from the doorway, "didn't I say that Larry was not an ordinary chauffeur! I distinctly told you that Mrs. Vandyke would not trust any one else to drive her car. So Larry simply had to do it. He is Mrs. Vandyke's nephew, you see, and she has cared for him and—just doted on him ever since his mother died."

Debora waited, enjoying the general astonishment. Then grandmother came forward eagerly.

"Oh, Mr. McClure!" she said. "Can it be possible that your mother was Mrs. Vandyke's young sister? Dear, dear, I remember her well!"

"And—and your father the famous writer, Lawrence McClure?" mother exclaimed.

"The same," Larry answered, wondering. But his eyes were on Debora. Her own twinkled back a merry response.

"And Larry's aunt and mine being bosom friends," she continued, "they conceived together this brilliant idea of marrying off their young relatives, with this slight difference: Mrs. Vandyke's money goes to the first nephew satisfactorily engaged. And as Larry happens to be the first nephew and as his choice is entirely satisfactory to the aunt, why, that is the $50,000 which he expects to receive with his bride and to use in his future career."

"By Jove," said Jack, with a low whistle, "a clean $100,000 between you two!"

"You should have told us," mother said reprovingly. But Debora shook her head.

"You deserved punishment," she accused, "every single one of you. You were all so disgracefully anxious to marry me off."

And when she had closed the door upon them she went swiftly, with a happy sigh, straight into the arms of Larry. The Irish blue eyes looked down upon her with a tender light that was all Debora's own.

"You dared to malign your future husband," he whispered. Debora touched the wavy forelock caressingly.

"You are Irish, Larry, dear," she said, "and you know your hair is red."

DECOY PERISCOPES

Submarine Trick to Lure the Enemy to Destruction

Such things exist as decoy periscopes—short lengths of pipe held upright on a float and looking exactly like the real periscope. The submarine sets them adrift for you to find—sometimes scatters several of them.

When one is sighted you cannot stop to consider whether the little object dancing on the sea half a mile or so distant does or does not mean 250 pounds of high explosive coming straight at you. Maybe you will see an aeroplane maneuvering over it in a way that carries conviction that it does. You don't dare to take any chances and so you train all the guns at it.

Then the real submarine slinks up on the other side of the ship, and with the swift rush of its torpedo, the latest of sea tragedies comes to an end.—Park Benjamin in the New York Independent.

Reproducing the Grand Canyon.

A panoramic reproduction of the Grand Canyon of Arizona is being built at the Panama-Pacific International exposition at a cost of over $300,000. Over 50,000 square yards of linen canvas imported from Scotland are being used for the set pieces. Visitors in this concession will view the panoramas from observation parlor cars moved by electricity on an elevated trestle seemingly along the rim of the canyon. The observer will be enabled to see eight of the most distinctive points of the canyon, and the ride will last over half an hour, including, apparently, a journey of more than 100 miles of the great gorge. Every resource of modern science is employed in the work of reproduction.

Harvard's Low Is High.

You can't size up a Harvard freshman by his name this year. J. Low is a strapping six footer, while L. B. Tall is the smallest chap in the class. H. Shortall is right between Tall and Low in stature. He is neutral. There is a Kaiser among the yearlings. M. T. Coffin, despite his gloomy name, is the life of the Smith hall joymakers. Mr. Rich is in the class, also two youths of Means, but they are offset financially by Mr. Poor. Arthur Stonestreet and Johnnie Starbird are other names enrolled.—New York World.

Died In Battle.

From the beginning of the Christian era to the present, according to historians, there have been less than 240 warless years. Up to the middle of the nineteenth century it was roughly computed that nearly 7,000,000,000 men had died in battle since the beginning of recorded history, a number equal to almost five times the present estimated population of the globe.

Semi-Finals.

To the accompaniment of gallery plaudits and the sounding of the midnight hour by Little Ben in the curling rink, the primary honors of the bonspiel, were won by the Peterborough rink skipped by J. E. A. Fitzgerald, which four, finished five up. Those sixteen ends constituted a long journey for the men who had battled their way through keen competition to the finals of the most successful 'spiel, yet recorded in the long history of curling in the Electric City. Worthy foemen they were. Interest and excitement ran high as the rocks shot up and down the ice. Positions were made, guards were placed, only to be ruthlessly swept away time and time again.

The Orillia rink made a great getaway and seemed to have the honors cinched in the sixth end as the Farewell four were nine up. The Peterborough curlers however kept pegging away and finally found themselves, with the result that at the twelfth end they were leading by two shots. The visiting rink went ahead again and it was skip Fitzgerald himself who kept the local rink still within the range of a victory. It was in the fifteenth that he made the shot of the night and as a result the locals counted five. The good work was continued in the sixteenth which netted three more.

The Orillia curlers were the first to congratulate the winners and they did so in a hearty manner. The curlers adjourned to the quarters upstairs where the presentation of the Grand Challenge Cup was made to the Peterborough rink, by Mr. J. W. Flavelle of Lindsay. Each member of the winning rink also received a pair of curling stones. The runners up each received a set of cutlery.

Consolation Final.

This afternoon, De Laney of Cobourg defeated Carley, of Lindsay, in the semi-finals of the consolation, and at 3.30 entered the finals with Hinds of Orillia. The semi-final score:

Hinds, Orillia, won by default.

"The fun of it is we aren't curlers at all," said one member of Mr. Carley's rink after trimming J. D. Flavelle in the sixth round of the consolation race this morning. Both rinks were composed of Lindsay players and the former were the dark horses of the bonspiel, in fact this was the first time that Mr. Carley has taken an active part in curling. Consequently his showing against such a curler as Mr. Flavelle is worthy of recognition. Spectators and curlers who have stayed with the bonspiel for the whole four days declared this morning that the match was the most exciting and interesting and surprising of the whole meet. At the twelfth end there was a dead lock each team being tied with fourteen points. An extra end therefore had to be played the honor of playing the last shot falling to Skip Flavelle. His shot went wide and the game ended with Carley's rink one point to the good giving them the victory. The score:

Carley—
1 0 0 5 0 0 1 0 1 2 0 4 1—15
Flavelle—
0 2 4 0 3 1 0 2 0 0 2 0—14

There is a good chance of this same rink of Lindsay players fighting it out for first place against Hinds of Orillia. If they are capable of trimming De Laney's rink they go up against Hinds for first place in the consolation. De Laney was drawn to meet the winners of the Carley-Flavelle bout in the semi-finals. It is possible that De Laney will be handicapped by having to curl with strange stones as by mistake the Cobourg stones were shipped away this morning.

Yesterday morning and afternoon games were run off pretty close on schedule time. After the defeat which Skip Fitzgerald's rink administered to De Laney's rink, Farewell of Orillia was drawn to meet Major Sam Sharpe's rink. However the latter were easy picking for the Orillia curlers who trimmed them with ten points up on the round. Farewell started off well but in the next two ends got nothing each time, while the Uxbridge four scored two, and one. Farewell got five in the very next round giving him a big start while his opponent drew a cipher. The tables were reserved when Sharpe got two on the next end and Farewell got the zero. But another five points which Farewell took, soon showed which way the round would end, and in the following ends he scored six more to Sharpe's two which left him with ten up. The score:—

Farewell—

D. Davidson's rink went down to defeat yesterday in the consolation largely because they went on the ice with only three men. Mr. Davidson was suffering from a bad cold contracted at the rink and was unable to play. His vice skip George A. Benore however went on the ice with just two men but pluckily contested the game losing out against Stouffville by three shots.

"It looked to be a Farewell to us at one stage of the game," remarked Mr. Fitzgerald.

FOURTH STRAIGHT WIN FOR ST. LUKE'S SEVEN

George Street and Murray Street Also Won in Church League

In the opening game of the Senior Church League attractions last evening, the St. Luke's seven added another victory to their list at the expense of St. Paul's. This is the fourth straight win for the Anglicans The score was 4-1 while at half time the figures were 3-1. There was just enough "mixing" to keep the fans excited. Incidentally it might be remarked that the attendance was not any too large. The class of hockey being presented by the Senior Church League deserves much better patronage.

Referee Harold Morrow gave entire satisfaction.

The St. Luke's septette scored two right off the reel but St. Pauls came to life and their efforts resulted in a counter. For some time the teams battled with the score 2-1 but just before half time St. Lukes made it 3-1. After the resting period both teams hit a terrific pace and kept it up for the twenty minutes. St. Lukes annexed the only goal of the period, through a long individual rush by Regan.

For the winners A. Butcher and Phillips were perhaps the most effective forwards while both Regan and Hagerman the defence went strong all the while. George Butcher, in the nets, was very good, blocking and clearing cleverly For St. Pauls Cranfield was particularly brilliant with Loucks and Waters running him hard for the honors. Fleming, the centre man, also played well.

The teams:—

St. Lukes.		St. Pauls
G. Butcher	goal	Hall
Hagerman	r. def.	Kerr
Regan	l. def.	Turner
Carter	rover	Loucks
A. Butcher	centre ...	Fleming
Stewart	r. wing	Waters
Phillips	l. wing ...	Cranfield

One Goal Win.

In the second game George Street succeeded in winning over St. Johns by 2-1. It was easily the best game of the evening and the Methodists had to extend themselves to carry away the victory. The score at half time was 1-0 in favor of George St.

The close checking and the speed of the forward lines kept the play mostly at mid-ice for the fore part of the first half. The two defence men of St. Johns rushed well but to no avail. Finally Stewart secured the rubber from a scrimmage and scored from close in. There was no more scoring in that period. It was only a few seconds after half time when Heard, the speedy man of St. Johns beat Johnston on a shot from outside the defence. With the score a tie both teams put forth greater effort but it rested with Wade to turn the trick. He beat Flowers after a brilliant individual rush.

The teams:—

St. Johns		George St.
Flowers	goal	Johnston
Lebar	r. def.	Wade
M. Pammett ...	l. def.	Lowes
Heard	rover	Palmer
Stevenson	centre	Stewart
N. Pammett ...	l. wing	Tully
Morphet	r. wing ...	Darling

Overtime Contest.

Although the final encounter of the evening between St. Andrews and Murray Street was a strenuous affair the hockey was not so fast as in the two preceding games. The fact that several strange faces appeared on the line-ups meant absence of team play. The score was 1-0 in favor of Murray Street at the close of the first half, a tie, one all, at full time but the Baptists went strong in the ten minutes of overtime and succeeded in winning by 2-1.

For Murray St. Eastwood and Routley were about the most prominent while McDonald and Lees played best hockey for St. Andrews.

The teams:—

St. Andrews		Murray St.
Gibson	goal	Lewis
Brown	r. def.	Brown
Lang	l. def. ...	Eastwood
McWilliams ...	rover	Webb
McDonald	centre ...	Routley
Lees	r. wing ..	Fitzgerald

Petes Lost Out in the Second Game With Picton

Hopes of district honors and further trips along the route to the John Ross Robertson silverware were rudely shattered last night when the Petes slipped enough cogs to debar them from further competition. The score was 6 to 1, and the count on the round 9 to 8.

When first they invaded Picton the Petes failed to score a goal. That they came through with one counter last night is about the only salve hundreds of good loyal fans can apply to their wounded feelings. No fault can be found with the local lads, who have given their best to bring home the bacon.

If the hockey club officers of last season produced some comedy the fans will have to hand it to this season's directorate for having beaten them a dozen different ways, when it came to providing a real joke.

However, here's what the despatch from Picton has to say about the game:

Picton, Feb. 4.—One to one, three to one, and six to one—that is just the way it happened last night, when Picton intermediates defeated Peterborough's good team. With a lead of four goals to overcome, Picton took the ice and outskated, outchecked and outgeneraled Capt. Hunter's team from bell to bell. There was not a weak spot on the home team. Janes and Kelley put up a good game for the Petes, and it was only the grand work of Janes that held the score to single figures, as time and time again he was simply bombarded with dead-on shots. This gives Picton group No. 1 after a strenuous campaign.

The line-up:—

Referee—Bernhardt, of Bradford.

JUNIOR CHURCH LEAGUE GAME

Last night Mark Street's team defeated St. John's in a fast game in the Junior Church League, by 8-3. The stars for St. Johns were Pidgeon, the goalkeeper, Heard and Soward, while McIntyre, Lipsett and Gillespie played well for Mark Street. Mr. George Bain refereed. The teams:—

Lipsett	r. def.	Seward
McIntyre	l. def. ...	Ecobichon

Tea growing is a fine art. The quality of tea depends on the elevation of the land and the nature of the soil. Cheap teas are produced in vast quantities in the low lying valleys where the humidity encourages the growth of large coarse leaves. On the breezy hill-tops are found the most delicate and tender growths. Salada tea is grown entirely in hill-top gardens, hence its distinctive charm of flavor.

Acting Superintendent A. L. Killaly, of the Trent Valley Canal, with head office at Peterborough, was in town today on business. "Mrs. Black is Back," is making large audiences at the Empire Theatre laugh as they never laughed before. Mrs. Black is the central figure and the ludicrous situations which envalve about her are highly entertaining.

90 PER CENT OF MEN RECEIVING WAGES

In last evening's issue of a contemporary the question "Is it right that one must be an applicant for charity before they can be given work on the corporation?" was asked, yet left unanswered. City Engineer Parsons desires through the columns of The Review to explain to the public that of the 138 men employed yesterday in removing the snow from the streets, but 18 were from the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Relief Association. These eighteen were men who applied to the Executive Officer for relief and expressed their desire to work for it. The desire was gratified and City Engineer Parsons has expressed himself as being in favor of giving such men the preference. All the men sent by the Executive Officer are put to work but the fact that 120 other men, or nearly ninety per cent. of the total number employed are working for wages, should make a satisfactory explanation of the misleading "filler" quoted above.

Prominent Artists

Miss Lina Drechsler Adamson, violinist, and Mr. Leo Smith, 'cellist, who will appear at the concert of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music Orchestra on Monday night are two of Toronto's most distinguished artists and were prominent members of the Toronto Symphony orchestra which has been temporarily disbanded owing to the war. Miss Adamson who has on one or two occasions been heard in Peterborough is a violinist of European training and recently scored a great success at the concert of the Speranza Club, Toronto's most select musical organization. Mr. Leo Smith is the 'cellist of the Toronto String Quartette and not only a performer of rare talent but a gifted composer as well.

BIG NIGHT FOR BASKETBALLERS

This is to be a gala night for the basketball players who took part in the league games which have been conducted at the "Y" this winter. The league winners were the Veterans, men who played the game here ten and twenty years ago but who came back strong this year and vanquished every team in the league. As a result they laid claim to the handsome Crescent Cup donated by Mr. A. W. Cressman. The presentation of the silverware will be one of the interesting features of the celebration tonight. Toasts and speeches will be the order of the evening and representatives of each team in the league are expected to be ready with their pet jokes and speeches when called upon. H. B. Cowan will sit in the toast master's chair. The program committee consists of Walter Flowers, Fred Cressman, Ross Dobbin and Claude Bartlett.

It was originally planned to buy prizes for each team in the league but later the Veterans agreed upon the idea of donating this prize money towards a banquet.

Every man interested in basketball is wanted at the banquet because another league to finish out the season will likely be organized.

CANADIAN FINANCES SHOW GREAT STABILITY

Country Has Adapted Itself to New Conditions in Very Effective Way.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—The fifth session of the twelfth Parliament opened at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. Weather conditions were ideal and people took advantage of the perfect day to come out in large numbers to see the show, of which the residents of the capital never seem to grow weary.

The speech from the throne was, in part, as follows:

"Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate:

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"During the months which have elapsed since the outbreak of the war the people of Canada have given most abundant and convincing evidence of their firm loyalty to our sovereign and of their profound devotion to the institutions of the British Empire."

After referring to the despatch of the first expeditionary force and the preparation of the second and third contingents, the speech continues:

"Notwithstanding the inevitable disturbance of trade which was created by the outbreak of war on so vast a scale, the financial and business conditions of the Dominion have shown great stability, and on the whole the country has adapted itself to the new conditions in a very effective way.

"My advisors will submit for your consideration measures rendered necessary by the participation of this Dominion in the great task which our Empire has undertaken in this war.

"You will be asked to make necessary financial provision for effective aid in the conduct of the war.

"The strong unity of purpose which inspires his Majesty's Dominions gives us the firm assurance that the cause for which this war has been undertaken will be maintained to an honorable and successful issue. I commend to your favorable consideration the measures which will be submitted to you for aiding that great purpose, and I pray that the Divine blessing may be vouchsafed to your deliberations.

THEATRICAL

"In the Bishop's Carriage" was the title of the play presented by Ralph E. Cummings at the Grand Opera House last night. The story is that of a beautiful girl, Nance Olden, who becomes a thief or pickpocket, and who is loved by a desperate crook, Tom Dorgon. The latter gets into trouble, and Nance goes to a promising young lawyer, Wm. Latimer, for advice, who succeeds in getting them out of trouble. The lawyer at once becomes interested in the girl and tries to reform her. But she drifts back, under Tom's influence, to the old life, and, in an effort to evade the police, gets into the bishop's carriage and is driven to Mrs. Ramsay's house, where Latimer has come to celerate her daughter's birthday. He recognizes her and makes another effort to reform her, and, after a tense, exciting scene, in which Dorgan figures, she decides to lead a new life. She succeeds as a vaudeville artist. Dorgan breaks prison and comes for her, but, realizing she has no attachment for him, lets her go, gives no evidence against her, and returns to prison.

The plot is quite simple and interesting, and there is not so much philosophy in it as to make the play heavy. It is well balanced and makes its lesson clear.

The company made a good presentation of the play. Paul Doucet, who took the part of Wm Latimer, has a future before him, and Elsie Rizer, as Nance Olden, played the leading woman's role with skill. James Ryley, as Tom Drogan, made an admirable crook. Floy Murray, as Bessie Richmond, newspaper reporter, was charming in her part, but it was so brief that one would like to have seen it more extended. The play is appropriately staged with successful presentation of realistic effects, in which an automobile and horse and carriage are used. A good audience was on hand to witness the play, and the company received several curtain calls.

FRENCH SET FIRE TO CONVOY TRAIN

Satisfactory Results From Artillery Engagements From Arras to Rheims

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 6. — The afternoon official statement says:

"No infantry engagement has been reported as having occurred during the day of February 5th. From Arras to Rheims, there were artillery engagements, with results satisfactory to us. There has been no change in the situation in the vicinity of Perthes and Messiges.

"In the Argonne and in the Woevre districts French artillery yesterday dispersed convoys of the enemy and set fire to a convoy train of twenty-five waggons.

"There has been nothing to report from the rest of the front.

"We brought down a captive balloon behind the German lines at a point to the northeast of the Somme."

COST OF EATING

Meats Are Cheaper Than One Year Ago

SO ARE EGGS

Sweeping assertions that the cost of living is higher every year; that prices of staple food commodities have been increased by the greedy retailer, and that consumers are paying more for their household necessities today, would seem rather at variance with information collected by a reporter who went to some pains in order to see whether or not such statements are strictly correct. He discovered that on the whole, since last year and even since the war broke out, there has not been an increase in food commodities with the exception of sugar, flour, coffee and bread and in these the increase has not been such as to warrant too great a "holler" on the part of consumers. Allowance must be made for the customary winter advances in certain commodities.

One leading retailer who does a good business delved into his accounts of one year ago and found that there were several commodities which are actually lower, while a meat dealer found on investigation that the same held true in his line.

Of course the retailers feel that the public like to point to them as the cause of the high cost of eating, but in their opinion if they marked their goods as high in proportion to what the wholesaler had to them, there would be some justifiable cause for complaint. Since the outbreak of war flour had jumped. There was no getting away from the fact. For 25 pounds one has to pay 20 cents more now than six months ago. Sugar is one cent higher than one year ago, that is by the pound.

Turning to meat one finds a general reduction of from two to three cents. There is ample supply. Since the war began, meats depreciated in value, noticeably. Coffee is five cents higher owing to the imposition of a war tax.

One of the biggest reductions is shown in potatoes which are very reasonable just now. They are 25 to 30 cents lower than last year and the demand seems ample. Eggs are sliding downward and are five cents less now, with prospects of a bigger drop.

In regard to meat one reason advanced for the lowered price was that people were getting away somewhat from the meat eating habit, and were commencing to incline more to the vegetable diet. How the present prices compare with those in February, 1914, is shown in the appended list.

Stinson also seeks to restrain defendant from soliciting the business of his (Stinson's) customers and claim damages (amount not stated) for breach of the agreement mentioned above.

The plaintiff also seeks an injunction restraining Akey from advertising such busines by displaying a sign or otherwise, and to compel Akey to remove the sign at present erected over his premises at 411 Chambers street. The case will come up at a future sitting of the county court.

The Rural Publishing Company have contributed their share. This morning the staff of Farm and Dairy and The Canadian Horticulturist presented to Mr. Allan C. Sharpe, who has joined the third contingent, a gold wrist watch. Mr. Sharpe has been with this local publishing house for several years, and he leaves for the front with the very best wishes of his one-time associates.

BOYS OF THE KING HELD CONCERT

Interesting Program of Music and Speeches at Armouries

Members of the 39th Battalion, 3rd Overseas Contingent, held a very successful concert last evening in the recreation room of the Armouries. Mayor Buller kindly acted as chairman for the function, and in a few opening remarks expressed his thanks for the invitation and his delight at being present. His Worship remarked that although this was the third contingent, from general appearances they would be first in the game. After the chairman's words, part one of the program was carried out, and in the interval which followed refreshments were served and short speeches made. Should the boys put away the Germans as quickly as they did the luncheon, there is no doubt but the war will soon be over.

Lt.-Col. Walker, officer commanding the 57th Regiment, in a few well-chosen remarks, paid great tribute to the work of the officers of the 39th Battalion. He said he thought if he should call at the Armouries at four o'clock in the morning he would find the officers on the job. Lt.-Col. Walker also remarked on the bearing and general behaviour of the men. It was beyond reproach, and firmly convinced him that they would be a credit to Peterborough.

Col. Miler also made a few remarks in his usual breezy style, intimating that it was a real pleasure for him to be with the boys again. He hoped they would be sent right to the firing line, so that they would have the satisfaction of striking a blow for the cause of honor, righteousness and justice. Peterborough is prepared to give the men a royal send-off, and will be found waiting their return.

The chairman then called on Major Layfield, of the Home Guard, who also expressed appreciation of the honor conferred upon him by receiving an invitation. He stated that he had supervision over fifty-one employes of the Canadian General Electric Company, and of these, twelve, or 25 per cent., had enlisted.

Captain Spencer, Canon Davidson, Rev. J. N. Clarry and Mr. C. N. Meserve also spoke. After the conclusion of part two of the program, Col. Sergt. Maj. H. Wilford, on behalf of the 39th Battalion, thanked the audience for their attendance, and also the various artists who assisted in making the concert such a success.

The program was as follows:

EXPERIENCES IN GERMANY

Women Teachers' Guild Heard M. H. Staples M.A.

M. H. Staples, M. A., was the principal speaker at a meeting of the Women Teachers' Guild last night, which took place in the Collegiate Institute auditorium. There was a fair attendance. The audience greatly enjoyed hearing Mr. Staples relate his exciting experiences while in Germany, where he was engaged in the study of music when the war broke. He witnessed the mobilization of the German army, and later was held a prisoner himself on a trumped-up charge of being a spy. However, after many protestations and by showing his papers, and with the assistance of the American consul, he was liberated, and after other exciting passages managed to leave the country and reach Canada. Mr. Staples is an old Peterborough boy and a relative of Mr. Robert Fair.

FIREMEN OUT IN EARLY MORNING

Blaze Broke Out in Dwelling on Hunter Street, East

Fire in a room of a house at the corner of Hunter Street and Driscoll Terrace, this morning at six oclock, caused damage to the extent of about $150. The tenant is Edward Herrin and the owner, F. J. Hurley.

There are several frame structures at this point and it is fortunate the firemen were able to confine the blaze to one room. Socks which were in the process of drying, caught fire and thus caused the trouble. Herrin was slightly burned in assisting his three children to safety.

WOULD HELP SMALL TOWNS

Government Will be Asked to Guarantee Issue of Debentures

USE MONEY FOR IMMEDIATE WORK

OTTAWA, Feb. 6.—Backing from the Dominion Government for municipalities in obtaining money for carrying on work that will relieve the unemployment situation is what the Canadian Municipal Union has decided to ask. The union met in the city hall yesterday and endorsed a resolution to this effect.

The government is asked to give its endorsation to Canadian banks for the issuing of loans to the municipalities "for the purpose of employment."

The delegates to the meeting here were to have waited upon the government yesterday, but their visit has been postponed until later in the month.

Representations are being made to the municipal union by the bond dealers' section of the Toronto board of trade for action in the direction of limiting the debenture debt of municipalities. In placing the matter before the association the bond dealers claimed that the debt of some of the Canadian municipalities was enormously high.

Limiting Debentures.

It is proposed to limit the debenture debt according to population as well as to assessment. The proposals apply mostly to smaller cities, and the bond dealers suggest that the limits of debt be fixed at $200 per capita for cities of 10,000 population, $150 for towns between 2,000 and $10,000, and $100 for towns of 2000 only.

This matter the meeting left over for a report from the executive, which meets on February 18th, the report to be made to the main meeting on February 25th.

Those Present.

Among those in attendance in the council chamber yesterday were Mayor Church, of Toronto, president, Messrs. W. D. Lighthall, K.C., honorary secretary; George S. Wilson, assistant secretary; Controller Thompson and Ald. McGuire, of Toronto; the mayor of Preston; Mr. Thomas Adamms, of the Conservation Commission; Mr. L. A. Cannon, of Quebec; Mayor Porter, Controllers Ellis, Champagne and Nelson, and Mr. F. Cook, of Ottawa.

MR. GEO. COCHRANE MEETS WITH MISHAP

A serious accident happened yesterday morning to Mr. George Cochrane, high county constable, who lives at 765 George street. He was turning the corner of Hunter and George streets just outside of Kent's drug store, when he slipped on glare ice formed from frozen drippings, and fell heavily. He was helped into Mr. Kent's store, and on examination a painful bruise was found on his left thigh. It was first feared that he had fractured the thigh bone. His son, Mr. Will Cochrane, and Constable Blade secured a sleigh and drove him home, where Dr. Scott was called. Examination this morning showed that there was no fracture, but a very painful and rather serious bruise. Mr. Cochrane passed a restless night and is rather low today. His many friends regret the accident and hope for a speedy recovery.

THE INDUSTRIAL OUTLOOK.

THE CURRENT NUMBER of the Labour Gazette contains an interesting survey of the state of trade and industry throughout Canada. The general expression from nearly every city and town in Canada of industrial importance that was reported, is that there is much unemployment, little change, and a general shortage of business. This state prevails from Halifax to Vancouver. What is said, therefore, of Ontario, is very largely applicable to the rest of Canada.

Belleville reports trade and labour conditions as quiet, some factories, such as the two lock factories, busy, but others working short time. Berlin says the conditions for December were behind those of the previous month. The cost of living remained as usual, save for the drop in rents. New six and eight-roomed pressed brick houses could be had anywhere from $10.00 to $15.00. These houses have all conveniences, and a year ago could not have been had for less than $18.00 or $20.00. Foundries, furniture factories, planing mills, button factories, trunk and bag factories were dull, while tanneries were fair, and felt, robe, clothing, tire and rubber factories were busy. Brantford was in much the same state, the slight improvement being due to increased activity in the Massey-Harris works. Merchants claimed there was a decrease in the volume of trade, compared with other years. Brockville reported labour conditions less favourable, with eggs higher in price, pork cheaper, and rents lower than in November. Some factories were closed down, some were on short time, others were fairly busy. A confectionery and paper box factory were busy. Chatham has a similar report with this variation, however, that house rents remained firm, the vacant houses being the large ones, while there was a good demand for small houses. Cobalt was normal, and Guelph reports quieter industrial conditions for December. Hamilton reports that over four thousand men have registered for work, and that fifteen hundred applications were received for the forty extra positions in the post-office, occasioned by the Christmas mail. The new Canadian Cartridge Company is to be located there, and a reduction in water rates amounting to $35,000 a year was recommended by the Board of Control. Conditions in Dundas continue to improve, the big Bertram tool factory working nights to catch up with war orders. Kingston reports textile mills, hosiery mills and tannery as very busy, but other factories quiet. Conditions among workers in London were very bad, although shoe and brass factories and the foundry were very busy with war orders. There was an increase in the number of unemployed in Niagara Falls, and general unemployment in Welland was unchanged. Orillia is also in the grip of hard times, severe weather making conditions worse. Ottawa found no improvement in the local labour situation. The number of unemployed had increased, some 4,100 men being idle and 7,000 persons receiving relief during the month of December, and, at the end of the month 1,229 families were being supplied with the necessaries of life. There are 200 or 300 men out of work in Owen Sound, most factories running on short hours. Port Arthur shows no improvement, nor does Stratford, except in the knitting and woollen factories, which were working steadily on military orders. St. Catharines showed little change in conditions, one company, however, was making a large number of saddles for the soldiers. Toronto, Windsor and Woodstock are heavily oppressed with dull times, but have two or three factories busy on war orders.

St. Thomas is the one exception in the list, reporting labour to be generally fairly well employed during the month.

It will be noticed that the real state of industrial life is very bad, and that what stimulus it has received has been due principally to orders for war supplies. As long as the war lasts, those factories producing such supplies will likely be busy, but, in any event, this is an artificial stimulant to trade. It is not natural, in that the vast quantities of supplies are very largely for destructive purposes. The moment the war ends, or appears likely to end, orders for war material will stop like a flash, and factories throughout the world will be left to supply natural human wants.

It will also be observed that these large orders are for one kind or class of factory. Establishments that can be utilized for the production of such things as required by armies are benefited by war orders. These embrace clothing, shoe, and harness factories, machine shops, and iron foundries, and, to a certain extent, food factories. They are important branches of industry, but many other branches are at a standstill. Factories producing builders' supplies are doing nothing, because all those places above referred to report an almost entire cessation of building operations. Planing mills, sash and door factories, nail and floor factories, are very dull. Besides these, industries of an entirely different nature, such as carriage factories, glass, brass, interior fittings, and furniture factories, paper and pulp mills, newspapers, publishers, stove and tool works, jewelry factories, fur factories, have felt the pinch of hard times, with no compensating benefit from the war. The short hours of work reported from Ontario cities and towns show that these places have little to do. In time they will recover a measure of activity and will possibly have a fair amount of business when the war ends, but the tremendous absorption of capital in the struggle now going on in Europe must cripple industry for several years to come. Money will not be available except at high rates, for expansion and improvements in industrial work. For example, a factory building machinery will suffer because other factories will not be able to get the necessary capital or loans to buy new machines to replace old ones, or to add to the capacity of the plant. The employment of labour which will reach very likely a fairly high mark if the war is long drawn out, will again be very much restricted when peace comes. Building operations, and all those industries indirectly dependent on them, are almost entirely conditioned by capital, and, when capital is not available, new buildings are not built. The industrial outlook at present shows that the improvement due to the war is not of a permanent character and that several years of restricted output and retrenchment are facing the industrial world.

A NEW ERA IN THE UNITED STATES.

REPRESENTATIVE government, that is government by and through "representatives of the people" in the U. S., is said to have failed. It has failed for the same reason that the plan that preceded it, government by the few, failed. Cliques never can represent the people, whether cliques amongst the people or amongst their representatives. It became the fashion to find an "easily-persuaded" candidate, one who feared the Machine (whether big or small) more than the People. The latter have got tired of treachery, and are demanding government directly by the People, known as the referendum. The referendum does away with the whole chain that moves the various and multifarious parts of the machine. Every link of that chain was bad when it got into the control of the interests and their minions. Although for a time it was a vast improvement upon government by the few, in the end it became much worse, since it never at any time allowed a really good and conscientious public servant to come to the top. We are learning the lesson in Canada, and, while we cannot say that the referendum is quite perfect, yet if we are ever to have machine rule that is what it will come to. The People, Public Opinion and the public interest will yet win the day over all obstacles. The upheaval in the U. S. has been more general and more tremendous than most of us yet realize. The machine is a mighty engine of evil, plundering the People and destroying its happiness and its morals. Individuals must learn that treachery is a crime, and one that will be punished.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE ORILLIA PACKET was, in its last issue, over-generous to the Review, crediting us with some comments that did not appear in our columns. We merely mention this fact to convince our Belleville confrere that we, too, have no desire to appropriate other men's thoughts.

WE SEE his finish now — Hon. Jos. Martin buys the assets of the Vancouver Times and will publish and edit a new Liberal newspaper, the Vancouver Journal.

Factors Against Germany.

(Montreal News.)

A fairly long list may be made out in connection with the war as it unfavourably affects Germany and favours the Allies. It can be truly said that Germany's foreign trade, running into billions annually, has been wiped out, along with her merchant marine. Her colonies in the Pacific and in Africa are no longer hers. Her industrialism must suffer from lack of raw material. She has lost in killed, wounded, and prisoners, something closely approaching a million and a half of men. Her naval losses have shattered her maritime prestige. Military plans have been stopped by the failure of Germany to reach Warsaw, Paris, and Calais. The Turkish ally has been routed in the Caucasus. Every day brings more circumstantial accounts of the shortage of food in the Fatherland. War material, such as copper and gasoline, are at a premium. The efficacy of the air fleet for anything but observation purposes and cruel and unmilitary raids, has yet to be demonstrated. It is hardly necessary at this stage to dwell on the moral position of Germany as a consequence of these raids and those of her fleet. It is as weak as her international status in consequence of having "steam-rollered" little Belgium. Roumania and Italy appear to be drifting into the Allies' camp. Austria is smashed — almost pitiably so. In a military and political sense chaos reigns in the dual monarchy. In South Africa and Egypt plans of campaign looking to throwing off British rule have come to naught.

Then again, the Allies are growing stronger every day in a military and naval sense — Great Britain especially so in the latter. Their financial response is equal to the heavy call upon the money end of the game. Supplies are obtainable of all kinds. They do not have to resort to doubtful reports in order to feign successes they do not achieve, in an attempt to deceive their countrymen. There are many who predict a long-drawn-out war. We have that opinion from eminent military men. Details of expected operations do not accompany such prophecies. The war, however, may still be a long one. We are not going to deny it. But the factors that will lead to Germany's ultimtae collapse are already sharply in evidence. And, what is more, they are growing so rapidly that there appears to be no possible doubt of the downfall of the Potsdammers and their schemes of world power.

Germany's Food Shortage.

(Wall Street Journal.)

Women, children and old men, no matter how willing, cannot make up the lack of able-bodied men in the fields. War must have an effect upon the supply of live stock also, for soldiers in the field cannot be fed on wind. Blockading nitrates and commercial fertilizers must have an important effect upon the production of food, which cannot be made up by their utilization of sewage waste.

Perhaps the General Staff has provided for this. Certainly, if the food supply is cut off, the magnificent "fighting machine" becomes like a Mallett-compound engine without fuel — powerful but useless, especially when it is off the track.

The army and the people must be fed. But how?

Need of an Interpreter.

(Green Bag.)

Arthur H. Engelbach, in his collection of anecdotes of the bench, tells this story about Lord Braxfield, who was among the last of the Scotch judges who rigidly adhered to the broad Scotch dialect: "Hae ye ony counsel, mon?" he said to Maurice Margot when placed at the bar. "No," was the reply. "Do you want to hae ony appointit?" continued the judge. "No," said Margot; "I only want an interpreter to make me understand what your lordship says."

Toronto General Trusts Corporation

Annual Meet'ng of Shareholders Held at Company's Head Office Toronto, Wed. Feb. 3rd

In another column we publish the full Annual Financial Statement of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation including the address of Mr. J. W. Langmuir, the retiring General Manager.

Mr. J. W. Langmuir, Vice-President, who retires from the General Managership after thirty-three years with this Corporation which he helped to organize.

The Financial Statement would be a most creditable one even in flourishing times but for a year of depression the report shows a wonderful record of success. The Net Profits for the year were $324,281. New business amounts to $4,365,207.

Mr. A. D. Langmuir, who assumes the General Managership of the Corporation is successful to his father.

The position of General Manager left vacant by the retirement of Mr. J. W. Langmuir will be filled by Mr. A. D. Langmuir, his son, who has been for many years Assistant General Manager and is thoroughly trained in the policy followed by the Corporation for so many years and which has been responsible for its success. The position of Assistant General Manager will hereafter be filled by Mr. W. G. Watson.

Mr. W. G. Watson, who is promoted from Secretary to be Assistant General Manager.

There will be practically no change in the conduct of the business on account of the retirement of Mr. J. W. Langmuir who will remain on the Board as Vice-President as the entire staff will otherwise remain the same. It is safe to say that no institution has so completely deserved and won the confidence of the investing public of Canada.

THREAT A BLUFF

Foe Haven't Enough Submarines Say British Experts

LONDON, Feb. 6. — Germany's threat about a submarine blockade is received with mixed emotions. Many including some naval experts, consider it a bluff, and that Germany is setting up a jack-o'-lantern, to scare the people. While it is admitted that the exploits of the U-21 in the Irish Sea last week show the damage that can be done, it is not believed the Germans have a submarine flotilla capable of causing any total paralyzation of commerce. Bigger ships which can make over 15 knots are protected from submarine attack by their speed, slow-going freighters, however, are more vulnerable.

America's attitude toward this new method of warfare is a subject of the keenest interest, particularly in view of Germany's open declaration of ruthlessness and disregard of the rules of civilized warfare.

Bernstorff's warning to Washington for American ships to remain away from certain places is considered a piece of bald effrontery in view of the fact that attacks, such as Germany proposes are so far outside the pale of international law.

"Why, I should have been landed in jail so quick you couldn't have seen my coattails."

"Passing them?"

"Yes, passing them."

"I give it up, then," Chris exclaimed, with a baffled little air. "If you couldn't have found it out in six years I suppose I needn't expect to in six minutes. But it just makes you burst not to know, doesn't it?"

"There's a worse problem still—what is to become of me?"

"Us, Matt," she corrected him jealously; "poor little hundred-and-twelve-dollar us."

"I might as well shoot myself as stay on here. There's nothing here, Chris, in this little backwater of a place. What shall it be—east or west—try for a deep water ship or strike out boldly for Colorado or Wyoming or somewhere?"

"Go away?" she cried. "No, I can't let you go away—I can't, I can't, unless you don't care—unless it's all"—She broke off, looking at him poignantly, only to be crushed in the strong arms, overborne, blinded, panting and deliciously helpless and ill used. Of course he loved her, loved her better than anything in the world, would crush her again for ever doubting it. No, she had to admit how cruel she had been, how wicked and unkind; had to or he would hurt her more, obstinate little wretch that she was. But it seemed that she wasn't an obstinate little wretch at all, only terribly smothered and gaspingly eager to be forgiven, and anyhow how was she to know when he sat there so cold and distant and talked about going away—that he really and truly did love her—as though anybody who loved anybody would go away and leave somebody to break her heart?

Nor was she a clinging, useless, impractical young lady person without any sense or ideas. No, indeed, she wasn't! They were in a very serious predicament, and she meant to be mouse to the poor, tattered, scared, whiny lion and rescue him somehow. To all of which Mr. Lion acceded meekly, with a dawning sense that there was a stronger nature than he had dreamed behind those dark eyes and a courage and self reliance that shamed him in the contrast.

"Unfortunately papa has to be left out," she continued. "General Mouse would have a fit at the least notion of my liking anybody who hadn't a town house and a country house and a yacht and a [illegible], studded with [illegible] on top, and [illegible] mother" [illegible] at [illegible] rations. That's General Mouse's view, and he's likely to [illegible] at a poor little [illegible] lion! That's the bad part of it; the good is that when I'm twenty-six I come into my mother's money—three smug old New York houses, filled with dentists and doctors and subletting old ladies who have seen better times—somewhere between $8,000 and $9,000 a year. Isn't that nice, Mr. Lion, isn't that splendid? Come, cheer up and say it is worth waiting for. Yes, two years and ten months to wait, and then a fearful General Mouse rumpus—and me. If you are still of the same mind—that is, and haven't gone off in another direction? Though"—

"Oh, Chris!"

"But this is a secret—I have to be sure you love me first."

"You know I do."

"But awfully, awfully well—better than anything—just terribly."

"Yes."

"Don't smile about it. I said terribly."

"I was thinking of all that money; it frightens me even while I'm glad—to be called a fortune hunter and heaven knows what—yet I didn't know; how was I to know? It's staggering, Chris, I—I am trying to get used to it; why, we—we can get married."

"That's the secret—before then, perhaps!"

"Before then? Oh, Chris, Chris!"

"I don't care if it's only one room, I'm not afraid, Matt—only sorry about papa, and the way he is sure to take it. You must stay here and get something to do, no matter what it is, and as soon as it is enough for two I'll come, Matt, dear—I'll come if it's only $75 a month."

CHAPTER X.

General Mouse's View.

MATT gave an appalled glance about the room—at the pictures, the tapestries, the rich, dark, old furniture—at the elegance, luxury and beauty that everywhere surrounded him. "You couldn't," he exclaimed, overcome. "You don't understand what it is to be poor. You see it staged and dressed up, and with a row of footlights, and roses climbing over the cardboard cottage; but it isn't like that at all, Chris; it's ugly and detestable, and I should be the most selfish brute alive to let you do such a thing."

"It needn't be ugly and detestable, Matt," she returned, with a tender, reproving seriousness. "The trouble is that poor people are usually poorer still in taste, and are horribly oilclothy, and given to chromos of Swiss lakes and screaming green carpets. We won't be that kind of poor, and if you fight about it any more I shall think it is because you really do not want me."

"Oh, Chris, it isn't that. God knows it isn't that. I—I—am a man, and I"—

She drew his head to her bosom. "The mouse was some help after all," she murmured with a happy little laugh. "Lion thought he was at the [illegible] off place, but mouse caught its [illegible] frightened tail just in time—though it took an awful big mouse just to save him from going over—and now she's going to kiss him for being a stay at home work lion."

and ready to fight the whole world rather than let her go."

"It's going to be a hard business, Chris."

"I know it—but you mustn't get discouraged."

"Anderson, the surveyor, might give me a job. I know something of that, you know—a great deal."

"Then there are the mills."

"All too skilled for me, I'm afraid and unionized."

"The telephone company?"

"Yes, I'll try them. The electric branch was very thorough at the academy. I could take a dynamo to pieces once, and, what's more, put it together again and make it go."

"You see, you know lots more than you thought you did."

"And there is Beckles' bank. Beckles is such a funny old fellow, Chris; insatiable about the islands and specially about the girls. Has dreams of going out there, I fancy, and turning grand Turk, the fat old scallawag. When I said the prettiest women in the Pacific came from Manihiki and Uahine he carefully wrote down both names in a little book, with the most owlish expression you ever saw, right in the middle of stocks and bonds and mortgages."

"And Doty. Be sure and remember the Rev. Mr. Doty, Matt. He likes you awfully well, admires you and looks up to you tremendously."

"Oh, I'll manage somehow—some way. And then $75 a month and you."

"But try to save every penny of what you have, and I'll begin saving my allowance. I don't want to live at your horrid Mrs. Sellane's. We must have a little home all of our own."

"Well, that's a long way off. The important thing now is to land a pay envelope every Saturday night, isn't it?"

"Important? Oh, Matt, you just must!"

"And then you'll come—really come? Chris, I still can't believe it."

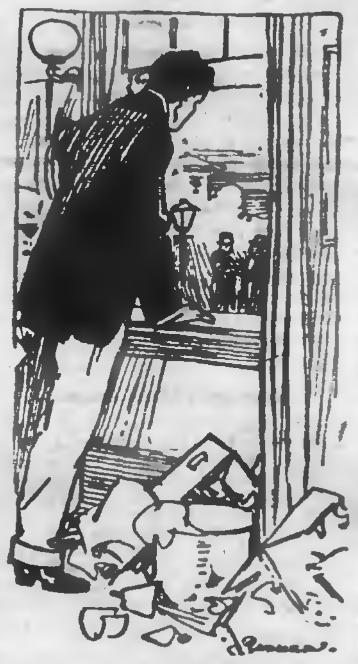
"You will when you've got $75 a month."

"I may not even reach that all at once. God knows, it may be hard to get $40."

"That will be a start, anyway, and if we do have to wait a little my allowance will be mounting up."

"We shan't wait if I can help it. I'll turn the old town upside down. Oh, Chris, with you to work for what couldn't I do!"

Matt strode homeward in a state of indescribable joy, though with many a care running blackly through the bright woof of his hopes and raptures. He was pledged to a desperate plan and one that would bring down on him a universal reproach. Such a marriage would shake Manaswan to its foundations and unloose a torrent of gossip that would be harder to endure than poverty itself. Alternately he gloated over Chris' fortune—those "three smug old houses"—and then inconsistently wished them to the devil. Matt was a proud man, and the thought of being misrepresented and misjudged was more than galling. What a humiliating figure he would cut before her father when the inevitable day of reckoning arrived! He would be seen as an adventurer preying on innocence and wealth. Yet ever before him was Chris herself, with upraised lips and quivering body and misty, haunting eyes, all her young womanhood his to take by the divinest of divine rights.



There Below Him Under the Street Lamp Were Two Men.

The boarders, assembled at supper, found him at first very backward and moody, while he found them altogether unendurable. There was a new boarder, a heavy, gray haired, deferential man with a gold tooth, who was ceremoniously presented.

"Two good fellows ought to know each other," said one of the boarders, taking it on himself to make the introduction. "Mr. Broughton—Mr. Bates." Matt politely expressed his gratification, and the two good fellows subsided into their respective seats. Mr Bates, as it appeared later, was spying out the land for a shoe factory site and had been very much impressed by the possibilities of Manaswan—yes, sir; very much impressed. At this Matt waked up and cultivated Mr. Bates as a potential dispenser of jobs, grew very animated and friendly and was more than pleased to learn that Mr. Bates' company maintained the principle of the "open shop."

Here was certainly a chance for a [illegible] man, or a shadowy chance, anyhow, and Matt, with shoe factory possibilities dancing in his head, absorbed himself in the conquest of Mr. Bates. After supper, over a pipe and a cigar, he continued the good work, even broaching the subject tentatively and receiving encouragement.

With a feeling that he already had a bulldogish grip on the shoe business, Matt said good night and went up to his room, more than satisfied with his evening's work. As he lit a match, however, and touched it to the gas, he was confronted by a sight that drove all these reflections from his head. The mattress was tumbled and bare; the bureau drawers were open; the room had been searched in his absence, and the moment he recovered from his astonishment he knew by whom. They had been there, seeking a clew, a scrap of paper, anything that might put them on John Mort's track. Impelled by an unaccountable instinct he ran to the window and looked out. There below him under the street lamp were two men in close conversation. All at once they turned and gazed upward, revealing the faces of Mr. Bates and Mr. Kay, and then they passed on and were lost in the dim street.

The next morning Matt was scarcely surprised to learn that Bates had departed. The representative of the shoe company was no more—in any boarder sense—and all that remained of him was a two-dollar bill on his dresser, and Miss Gibbs' recollection of sundry creakings and tiptoeings in the middle of the night. Yes, he had vanished, that quiet, deferential, gray haired person with the gold tooth, and with him also vanished Matt's job in the mythical shoe factory. The marveling boarders would have marveled more could they have known of Matt's devastated room, but this he kept to himself, and professed to be as much in the dark about Mr. Bates as any one else.

Afterward he sallied forth in his best clothes, and as spruce and well groomed as he could make himself, to seek work. The first place he tried was Mr. Beckles' bank, a small brick structure with plate glass windows and a red headed cashier in a cage. Mr. Beckles received Matt effusively in an inner office, proffered a chair, and seemed readier than ever to talk about south sea maids, and the respective allurements of Manihiki and Uahine. The stout old dreamer was frankly and unpleasantly gross. Matt, though far from squeamish, was disagreeably affected. The atrocious hypocrisy of the old fellow jarred on him. He would have been wiser in his own interest had he pretended to a greater enthusiasm. Instead, he switched off to the subject of his job with a suddenness that made the great Turk crimson to the ears and assume an expression of detected guilt.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 10 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. COOK, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

ACTION IN COUNTY COURT AT LINDSAY

Judge Harding is presiding at the county court proceedings today, the case on hand being that of R. F. Thomas vs. James Bogue, contractor.

Mr. Thomas had a sub-contract from Mr. Bogue to wire and install all electric fixtures at Lindsay armories. The defendant claims that in the original contract the two towers on the armories were not on the plan, the Government changing the plans later on. Thomas' contract so the plaintiff claims, did not include wiring the towers, so an "extra" bill was submitted for this work, which bill Contractor Bogue disputes, claiming that the contract called for wiring the entire building.—Lindsay Warder.

Four Hundred Were Killed.

CAIRO, Feb. 6.—There was no engagement of any importance Thursday in the vicinity of the Suez Canal. There has been no fighting since the action of Feb. 3, when the Turks advanced on the posts at Toussoum (35 miles north of Suez), but were later in the day forced to retire.

During the fighting in the vicinity of Toussoum the Turks left behind them 400 men in killed and a total of 600 prisoners. Judging from the reports coming into Cairo, the total casualties of the Turks number at least 2,400 men, exclusive of prisoners.

British Casualties.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The following British officers are reported killed: Lieut. Viscount Northland, Coldstreams; Lieut. Shapter, Suffolk Regiment. Died of wounds: Second Lieut. Stevens, Seaforths. Wounded: Lieut. Currie, Royal Scots; Capt. Douglas, Sherwood Foresters; 2nd Lieut. O'Brien, Leinsters; Lieut. Stacke, Worcestershires; Lieut. Stewart, Royal Munster Fusiliers.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvellous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

SLAVS WIN FIRST STAGE

Gen. Mackenzen Launches a Terrible Attack on the Russian Centre and After a Seemingly Incessant Offensive the Grand Duke's Troops Achieve Victory---Progress in East Prussia.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6. — Every fresh stroke in the terrible struggle raging in the bare frozen region of the Rivers Bzura and Rawka, makes it clearer that this again is one of the very great battles of the war. The concentrated fury of the incessant German attacks came to a climax by noon Wednesday when from the infernal concussion of bursting shells, point-blank slaughter by rifle fire and bayonet, and an overhanging mass of poisonous chemical smoke, the Russians emerged victorious and charged across three lines where the Germans had entrenched themselves after Sunday's tremendous fight.

Gen. Mackenzen made this crucial effort Wednesday morning by swiftly forcing forward a picked army of 100,000 men backed by nearly 600 guns of all calibres pouring shells without pause into the comparatively open gap of country six miles wide which has for its main features a deserted distillery on the north near Gumin and in the south near Bolimow the large manor house of Volia Shidlovskaya, standing in a woody park. Throughout their advance, the Germans maintained a hurricane of shrapnel over the well-covered Russian shelters. Many guns of the enemy fired shells charged with suffocating gas, which caused burning pains to the eyes, but the Russians withstood all this murderous business and remained unshaken even when the Prussian Guards were brought up fresh from Lovitch.

When the German supreme effort was spent, the Russians rose up through the smoke and doubled forward upon the low broken walls around the distillery, where the Germans had been working 50 machine guns. The Russians captured 14 in the desperate close-quarter fight which ensued. Meanwhile the Russians at the southern end of the battle found a weak position in the German line and through this they poured into the park at Volia Shidlovskaya. About an hour later the Germans were driven some distance southwest from the mansion, leaving thousands dead. They lost about 30,000 killed in this six-mile battle. Very many of them fell by the bayonet. The Russians established a great advantage by compelling the Germans to use their reserves prematurely. It is evident that Von Hindenburg left Mackenzen no free troops for manoeuvring. All signs, however, point to a renewal of this headlong fighting as being the imperative necessity of the plan to launch great battles simultaneously in central Poland and the Carpathians.

The position in the south is for the moment indeterminate, the Russian reserve succeeding in all passes as far east as the Tucholka Pass, behind the sources of the Opor, a tributary of the Stryj river. A great combined column of Germans and Austrians hold this gap and have a railway to Munkacz in their rear. The Russians, after ten assaults, drew back to prepared positions northeast of the Fringe Stryj Valley. The German leader refuses to send his men forward. The Russians continue to make valuable progress in East Prussia. One of their northern columns has emerged westward from the dense forests north of Pilkallen and another army, which forced a crossing of the River Angerapp, is now deploying on a wide front on the left bank of that river. It holds the country south of Darkehoen and faces an open country free from lakes.

ATTACK IS DEVELOPING

Turks at Suez Canal Are Preparing for Battle

LONDON, Feb. 6. — Despatches from Cairo indicate that the main attack of the Turkish army is developing east of the Suez Canal.

Between Port Said and Suez the Ottoman troops have thrown up earthworks a few miles east of the canal. These were shelled all night by light-draft British warships, and the Turks were compelled to retire. As soon as the bombardment ceased, however, they reoccupied their trenches.

British aviators reported Thursday that the Turkish forces number about 45,000 men. They are well equipped and have a number of heavy guns.

Another Cairo despatch says: Turkish troops yesterday resumed their attempts to cross the Suez Canal at Toussoum, near Ismailia. Several boats that they succeeded in launching were sunk and all on board perished.

British warships have resumed their bombardment of the Turkish positions.

The failure of the Turks in their preliminary attack on the Suez Canal gives a good deal of satisfaction to Britain, as it is felt that the Territorial and Australasian troops engaged there have proved their mettle. Military men express the belief that the Turkish attack was only in the nature of a feeler, and that an organized assault will be delivered by the Ottoman army when it is able to collect its main strength within striking distance. Correspondents at Cairo say that a very warm reception awaits it from the British troops.

FELL AS HE WAS LEADING CHARGE

Late Lieut. Norman Nelles Dies Fighting

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Col. Nelles, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, Toronto, has received particulars regarding the death of his son, Lieut. Norman Nelles, of the Northumberland Fusiliers, who was killed last week, after rallying his men, charging and taking some German trenches. The commanding officer of his regiment wrote: "He was a fearless soldier and was killed in a gallant charge. He was most popular in the regiment."

The new establishment of the Canadian division eliminates a junior major, assistant adjutant, a transport and a signalling officer from each battalion. This change means that all these officers will take a training course and not accompany the force to the front.

$25.00 FOR A LETTER

CAN YOU WRITE ONE?

Thirteen Prizes to be Awarded in a Letter Writing Competition

Some years ago the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., offered a series of prizes to residents of the Province of Ontario for the best letters describing cures wrought by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Hundreds of letters were submitted in this competition, and yet there must have been thousands of other users of the pills who did not avail themselves of the opportunity to win a prize. To all these another letter writing competition is offered. Thousands of cures through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have never been reported. These will furnish the material for the letters to be written in this contest. There is no demand upon the imagination; every letter must deal with facts, and facts only.

THE PRIZES.

The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. of Brockville, Ont., will award a prize of $25.00 for the best letter received on or before the 1st day of March, 1915, from residents of Ontario, on the subject: "Why I Recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." A prize of $10.00 will be awarded for the second best letter received; a prize of $5.00 for the third best letter, and ten prizes of $2.00 each for the next best ten letters.

THE CONDITIONS.

The cure or benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills described in the letter may be in the writer's own case, or one that has come under his or her personal observation.

More than one cure may be described in the letter, but every statement must be literally and absolutely true.

Every letter must be signed by the full name and correct address of the person sending it. If it describes the cure of some person other than the writer of the letter, it must also be signed by the person whose cure is described as a guarantee of the truth of the statements made.

The writer of each letter must state the name and date of the paper in which he or she saw this announcement.

Fine writing will not win the prize unless you have a good case to describe. The strength of the recommendation and not the style of the letter will be the basis of the award.

It is understood that The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. shall have the right to publish any letter entered in this contest if they desire to do so, whether it wins a prize or not.

The contest will close on March 1st, 1915, and the prizes will be awarded as soon as possible thereafter. Do not delay. If you know of a cure, write your letter NOW. Observe the above conditions carefully or your letter may be thrown out.

COMMISSION TO PROBE NICKEL

Report on Feasibility of Refining Ore at Home

TORONTO, Feb. 6. — The nickel situation is going to be investigated by a commission appointed for the purpose. This decision was last night announced by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, who, since his accession to his new office, has been giving the matter close attention. If the report of the commission makes clear the practicability of refining nickel in Ontario, the necessary steps will be taken to see that this becomes an accomplished fact.

The statement which Hon. Mr. Ferguson issued to the press is in part as follows:

"Conditions that have arisen out of the present war have made the nickel industry of Ontario the subject of a great deal of discussion.

"The nickel lands of the Canadian Copper Co., the Mond Nickel Co., the British American Nickel corporation and other corporations and individuals were sold years ago under a former Government in fee simple, without any restrictions or limitations as to the working of the mines or the disposition of the products thereof.

"The question, however, of refining nickel in Ontario is by no means a new one. It has received the attention of successive Governments, and it was the well-known policy of the Whitney Government, as it is of the present Government, to do everything possible to secure the refining of nickel in Ontario, when satisfied that it was commercially practicable to do so.

"To this end legislation was passed in 1907, authorizing the payment of a bonus of six cents per pound on nickel refined in this province, and that legislation is still in force. Moreover, the Department of Mines has constantly had this matter in view with the same object. The nickel industry in Ontario is a very large and important one, expending several millions of dollars in labor and supplies in this province, and up to the present time the Government has not been convinced that any action preventing the export of nickel would not have the effect of transferring the nickel business, or a substantial part thereof, from Ontario to New Caledonia, Norway or elsewhere.

"Up to the present there does not appear to have been any known process of refining the Sudbury copper-nickel matte that would have permitted of the operation being a commercial and economical success in Ontario.

"Metallurgical science, however, has made rapid advances in recent years, and it may be that the conditions with respect to the nickel industry have materially changed. In order to ascertain all the facts and acquire full knowledge of the situation, it has been decided to appoint a commission to investigate the whole question. If the report of the commission makes clear the practicability of refining nickel in Ontario the necessary steps will be taken to see that this is brought about.

"This commission will also consider whether the nickel and other mining industries of the province are paying their full share of provincial taxation, and the proper basis upon which such taxation should be levied. The commission will have plenary power to exhaust every possible source of information and make a careful study of every phase of the question, and make a complete report thereon to the Government.

"It is scarcely necessary to add that a subject of such magnitude and complexity can only be properly dealt with by men of exceptional ability, and those to be selected will be men of special qualifications, who will command the fullest confidence of the public."

AMERICANS ENLISTING

Militiamen are Anxious to Fight for Allies

OTTAWA, Feb. 6.—Efforts are being made by a number of officers of the United States militia and National Guard, some of them of high rank, to form a regiment or brigade of their compatriots for service at the front with the allies. The Department of Militia here has for months past been in receipt of daily applications from American citizens for permission to join the Canadian expeditionary forces. The Department of Militia could, of course, take no direct action in encouraging enlistment by citizens of a neutral country, but the answer in each case has been that by taking the oath of allegiance and enlisting they could become British subjects, and as such would be accepted. As a result, it is stated that possibly 2,000 former American citizens are now members of the first or second Canadian expeditionary forces.

The movement now on foot is to form a complete regiment or brigade of the men from across the line who wish to fight for the cause of the allies and of liberty. The Department of Militia, while not yet taking any official recognition of the movement, is advised that a number of officers who have served with the United States army are now enrolling their compatriots from the Atlantic to the Pacific at various centres, and that enlistments are very numerous. The men will, of course, have to come to Canada and take the oath of allegiance here by enlisting before any official action is taken toward forming a regiment or brigade.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe

There was another record meeting of delegates this week, President J. J. Hartley calling the men to order promptly at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Burnham Active.

Mr. Burnham wrote asking the councils opinion regarding his stand on the Orietal labor question. As can be expected the council are to a man in favor of excluding the Oriental and his cheap product; with the resources of the country developed by intelligent administration there is no need for the working men of Canada to toil long hours for a pittance just enough to save them from being called slaves. A committee was appointed to write Mr. Burnham a letter endorsing his action in the strongest terms.

Another Visiting Brother.

Mr. Lucas, business agent of the Moulders' International Union, is a visitor to the city, and was granted the floor on Wednesday evening. Mr Lucas is business alright, as exemplified in the neat speech he subsequently made. One point he presented which is worthy of note at this particular period is that the demand for pig iron, which is the barometer so to speak of the molding business, was on the increase, this commodity obtaining $2 per ton more than it did 6 months ago. Times may not be as good as formerly, still they were on the mend. Mr. Lucas is in the city adjusting business for the local sand manipulators.

One for the City Fathers.

It was remarked that a man, on applying for work by the city, was not given any encouragement if he lived outside the city limits, the city having enough of its own to look after. Nevertheless Sanitary Inspector C. A. G. Spence lived outside the city. Discussion of the anomalous situation brought forth the fact that the dictator on back yard conditions as they should be in the city kept his own in what was said to be a most deplorable condition. It was moved and seconded that the secretary write the township of Douro notifying them of the unsanitary condition of the Sanitary Inspector's back yard. Carried.

The Independent Labor Party.

This question was again brought up, and although eloquence was as plentiful as the snow which fell the early part of the week, yet the members would allow themselves to digress from the question. As an intelligent delegate from the Hod-carriers' Alliance pointed out, such subjects as cold feet among probable labor candidates; the probabilities of expensive butter this week end; the absence of Socialists in so-thought socialistic Germany; whether or no the Trades Congress of Canada was affiliated with the American Federation of Labors and others of a like nature crept in and the original proposition got another dose of procrastination, in other words was put off till "next" meeting.

Former "Empress of India" Now Completely Equipped as Hospital Ship With 500 Beds for Wounded

No passenger steamer on the Pacific was better known than the "Empress of India," of the C. P. R. Pacific fleet, but in the last six months this vessel has suffered so many changes that she would not be recognized by her old friends. When the British Admiralty first requisitioned her she was painted a dull grey and her fairy-like character was almost lost in the transformation. Then the Maharaja Scindhia of Gwalior and other Indian princes bought her and fitted her as a hospital ship, and as such, with the new name of the "Loyalty," she left Bombay a short time ago, repainted white with long black strips on the water line and on the deck line, with large red crosses amidships.

His Excellency the Governor and Lady Willingdon paid a visit of inspection to the ship shortly before her departure. Deck space which was made for holiday seekers with idle hours, is now mostly covered with beds for injured soldiers, just as all the available cabins are serving as private wards for wounded officers. On the main deck of the steamer space has been provided to fill the purpose of wards. Cleared of everything unnecessary the main deck is well suited for this purpose, for it gives two wide strips of space on each side and gives accommodation for a large number of beds in most pleasing positions on the steamer. Here rows of beds have been fitted and all the requirements of a hospital are installed. The work of reconstructing the interior of the vessel was put in hand soon after her arrival, and this work completed, the fitting up of the wards, etc., has been carried on under the supervision of Major J. W. Watson, Major J. R. J. Tyrrell and Major C. W. E. Kerr, of the Indian medical service. Between the two wards a small operating room has been constructed and has been completely equipped. Then here and there, wherever space could be taken small wards have been arranged, while on the top deck a number of private wards for officers have been prepared. Altogether some 500 beds are available on the vessel.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBERT INNIS.

The death of Mrs. Robert Innis removes one of the most respected members of one of the oldest and most highly esteemed families of Peterborough; one which has been prominently and creditably associated with, and a part of, the highest moral and industrial influences that have moulded the character of Peterborough and its citizenship. Her demise followed a long period of illness. Mrs. Innis passed away at the family residence, 356 Rubidge street, on Friday night, Feb. 5th at 8.45, at the age of 76 years.

Isabella Hamilton Innis was a native of Peterborough, born in this city when it was a comparative hamlet, on Feb. 1st, 1839. She was a daughter of the late James Hamilton, and sister of the late Peter Hamilton, also a sister of Mr. John Cameron, Reid Street, of the Custom House staff, and at the time of her death was one of the oldest continuous residents of Peterborough. She was also one of the oldest members of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church and active in movements pertaining to the promotion of its interests. She was Vice-President of the Ladies' Aid Society; and was, also, prominently connected with the Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society, a charter member as well as life member, and for many years filled the position of treasurer. The death of Mrs. Innis will revive many touching recollections among her church associates, and among a large number of our citizens who have learned to regard with affectionate esteem a life of quiet and unostentatious merit and usefulness.

Funeral services, held at the residence on Monday, Feb. 8th, at 2 p.m., will be followed by the funeral at 2.30 p.m. with interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

JOHN JOHNSTON.

The relatives of the late John Johnston received the sad intelligence of his sudden death, from acute indigestion at Seattle, Washington, U. S. A.

He was a pupil in the public school and collegiate institute here, having come here from India (his birthplace) when a child.

Afterwards he went to British Columbia for a few years, and has ever since been the trusted accountant and bookkeeper of the firm of Holmes Bros. in Seattle, who also were former residents of Cobourg.

He leaves to mourn his untimely loss a young widow and infant daughter, his mother, Mrs. Johnston, corner of King and Ontario Streets, town, one brother, Mr. W. F. Johnston, barrister, Peterborough, and one sister, Miss Marjorie, teacher of domestic science, Ottawa, to whom the deepest sympathy is extended. Mr. W. Burnet is an uncle of deceased.—Cobourg Sentinel Star.

WILLIAM BREALEY.

William Brealey, aged 58 years, passed away yesterday at his late residence, Hunter street, East City. Deceased was a resident of this city but two months, previously residing in Otonabee, where he was very extensively known and highly respected.

The deceased leaves, his wife, one son, Wallace, and two daughters, Misses Mayme and Reta, at home.

The funeral will take place Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

PROGRESS IN CHAMPAGNE

French Advance in Alsace Has Been Notable and Battle Line is Only Fifteen Miles From the Rhine---French Artillery Silences More German Batteries---Hard Fighting in Northern Area.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The gaining of more ground in the Champagne district north of Beausejour was reported by Gen. Joffre last night, and an attack of the Germans north of Massiges was defeated. This district has been the centre of distinct French progress in the past week, and if this progress is continued a little longer it will put the German lines in a predicament that may cost them thousands of lives and a disastrous defeat.

Reinforcements in the Argonne have enabled the French troops to resume the offensive and to capture some ground from the Germans near Bagatelle.

The extent of the French advance in Alsace is becoming more apparent each day. This time the Germans were forced to attack the invaders from south of Altkirch and were hurled back. The lines of French troops continue to draw closer to the Rhine and are now only twelve to fifteen miles from that stream. In the Vosges exchanges of artillery fire took place yesterday.

The effectiveness of the French guns continues to receive favorable mention from the general staff. At four different points along the River Aisne German batteries were silenced and put out of action, and further effective work in disorganizing the enemy has been done.

Beyond Notre Dame de Lorette, German detachments which endeavored to move from their trenches were scattered.

On the whole the French have made notable progress in the midst of winter during the past week, and the positions in which the Germans will shortly find themselves will be one of much peril for the preservation of the German armies in Belgium.

Military critics declare that the failure of the Germans to make headway or to hold their ground at many points will have a demoralizing effect on the rank and file, but it is also conceded that the unthinking obedience of German troops leads them to be less analytic of the effectiveness of their work than other soldiers are, and that they will not lose their nerve till they are driven back to Germany. This is not expected for some months yet.

A despatch from Geneva says:

"Gen. von Bordungen, staff commander of the German operations in lower Alsace, with headquarters near Altkirch, has been forced by allied aviators, who bombarded the headquarters, to return to Muhlhausen, from which place state papers and valuables are being removed to Freiberg.

"A German aeroplane fell at Mudorf, near the Swiss frontier at Basel, Thursday. The two officers in the aeroplane were seriously injured and the machine was smashed."

The Amsterdam Telegraaf has received a despatch from its correspondent at Sluis which states that stubborn bayonet fighting has been taking place for the last two days in the vicinity of Westende. The Germans assaulted the Belgian trenches in a desperate attempt to take the positions there. A stubborn hand-to-hand fight was made by the Belgians, who held their ground and still maintain their positions.

A large number of wounded Germans from this part of the battle line arrived at Bruges Thursday evening and during that night.

Heavy gun firing from British warships off Zeebrugge was audible all Thursday.

The movement of German troops to the western front continues. The soldiers who had been garrisoned for training at South Valkensward, near the Dutch frontier, started for the front Thursday, singing German national songs.

WOULD RATHER GO TO THE HILL

Hubby Against Living Under Same Roof as Wife

Declaring that he would rather go to gaol than live with his wife, William McCliggot, a teamster, 89 Park Street, maintained a very antagonistic attitude to his spouse who had him up before Magistrate Dumble today on a charge of non-support. Some rather strenuous scrapping took place in court between the two before the case was finally adjourned for a week from Monday during which the Magistrate earnestly advised them to come to an arrangement mutually satisfactory. He strongly recommended the husband to go home and keep his mouth shut and leave whiskey severely alone.

Mrs. McCliggot declared that her husband gave her very little money, that he abused her and refused to look after the children and would not live with her. Mrs. McCliggott displayed considerable talkativeness in court and time and again was sharply told to be quiet. Many of the details of the trouble between the two would not make nice reading. The husband however was emphatic in his dislike to again living with his wife. Between now and a week from Monday, he will be given an opportunity of providing for her maintenance and that of the two children. He is working steadily and earns fair wages. He was willing to give her $4 a week while he boarded somewhere else. After a slap on the face which she administered to him yesterday he couldn't think of going back to live happily with her.

UNITED STATES WANTS TO KNOW

Germany Invited to Prove Britain's Misuse of Flags

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—President Wilson and his Cabinet yesterday discussed the possible effects on neutral shipping of the German blockade proclamation.

Inasmuch as the text of the German Admiralty's proclamation had not arrived no conclusions were reached, and no consensus of opinion developed as to what diplomatic steps should be taken by the United States Government. Should the communication fail to arrive by to-day, Acting Secretary Lansing will direct Ambassador Gerard at Berlin to make the customary inquiry at the German Foreign Office as to the authenticity of a published report.

If the German proclamation, when officially transmitted, corresponds in phraseology to the report which came by wireless Thursday, it was suggested in executive quarters that the course of the American Government probably would be to inquire first of the German Government what measures of protection or convoy can be expected by American merchant ships passing through the designated war zones to neutral ports, and second, of the British Government as to whether or not it has issued the alleged secret order permitting the use of neutral flags by her merchantmen. A denial by Great Britain of the existence of the alleged order would be followed, it is understood, by an inquiry of the German authorities as to proof of their charge. The suggestion that neutral flags were being misused caused no little concern among high officials, who said they had heard no reports of it before.

Faces As Fair As An Orchid

Are Possible When Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Used After Meals to Clean Up Skin Eruptions And Discolorations.

When a face is covered with blotches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads, etc., Stuart's Calcium Wafers will act like some magical charm. However, there is nothing magical about them. They are nature's own way of cleansing the human blood and preventing it from filling the surface of the body—the skin—with pimples and little skin eruptions.

"With a Face as Fair as a Day in June."

The abolishing of all skin disorders must begin with the blood. Lotions, salves, cosmetics, etc., will do no material good. The trouble comes from within and there the remedy must be applied.

If you really desire quick action and at the same time a common sense, natural, harmless blood purifier, then Stuarts Calcium Wafers is this remedy.

The correct and best blood purifier known to science is—Calcium Sulphide. This great cleanser is contained in proper quantities in Stuart's Calcium Wafers and that is why all blood troubles and skin blemishes rapidly disappear after their use.

An unsightly and pimply face due to impure blood is one of the most disgusting sights one can see, and yet all about us, upon the streets, in the theatre, when travelling, etc., we see these horrible results.

There is no need for this condition if you will take Stuart's Calcium Wafers daily and keep all salves, lotions, cosmetics and other harmful preparations from clogging the pores.

Every first-class druggist in this country carries Stuart's Calcium Wafers, which are pleasant to take, harmless, and may be obtained for 50 cents a box. A small sample package will be mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

BAD ROADS KEPT FARMERS AWAY FROM MARKET

There was a good reason for the comparatively meagre attendance of farmers at the market today. Bad roads blocked by huge snow drifts presented obstacles to safe and easy travelling that many farmers had to overcome before they arrived on the square. As a result, many regular vendors were not on hand.

Since the last market day there have been few changes in the prices of fowl or produce or meat. Fowl quotations had a fairly wide margin. There was not a great amount offered at that, but nice chickens changed hands for 50c up to 90c each. Turkeys were not much in demand, but prices ranged from $1.50 to $3. No geese were discovered. The price asked for ducks was 75c to 90c.

Persistent inquiry failed to discover any one selling butter higher than 32 cents a pound. Eggs sold at 32c and higher.

In the produce line there was no particular change. From 70c to 75c was asked for potatoes. But a limited number of bags were brought on. Apples were not plentiful. There was all kinds of pork and beef, but very little lamb. Pork prices were 11c to 18c and beef the same. Pork has droped a little since last Saturday, when 13c and 14c was asked.

The market list was:

AUDITORS' REPORT.

We, the undersigned, beg to report that we have made a full examination of the books, accounts and vouchers of The Toronto General Trusts Corporation to the 31st December, 1914, and find same to be correct and properly set forth in the above statements of Profit and Loss and Assets and Liabilities. We have examined, and find in order, all the mortgages, debentures, bonds and scrip of the Corporation, as well as those negotiated for the Supreme Court of Ontario, and Trusts, Estates and Agencies in the Corporation's hands, and we have checked same with the mortgage and debenture ledgers and registers. The Banker's balances, after deducting outstanding cheques, agree with the books of the Corporation.

We have also examined the reports of the auditors of the Winnipeg, Ottawa and Saskatoon Branches, and find that they agree with the Head Office books.

R. F. SPENCE, F.C.A., "Can." }
GEO. MACBETH, } Auditors.

Toronto, January 18th, 1915.

The President, Hon. Featherston Osler, K.C., in moving the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Col. Hon. Sir John Gibson, made the following remarks:—

When we met in this room last year but few of us could have anticipated that our next meeting would take place during the progress of a war which, for its magnitude and far-reaching consequences—financial and otherwise—is perhaps unexampled in the history of the world, and in which this Dominion has taken a substantial part in the contribution of men and means to the support of the mother country and her allies.

Nine of the employees of this Corporation have now joined the ranks of the former in various positions, and the Directors have thought it right to keep their places open for them and to maintain them on half salary for at least a year.

As the war progressed it might well have been anticipated that its effect would be shown in the reports of the financial institutions of this country, but those of you who have followed these reports, as published in the newspapers of the last few weeks, must have been gratified to find how well the strain has been met, under the wise guidance of the Governments concerned, and the prudent management of those responsible for the handling of our monetary institutions. The case of our own Corporation is no exception to the general evidence of successful endeavor to cope with altered conditions, and your Directors have pleasure in presenting to you a report which they have every reason to believe will be received with satisfaction and approval, showing, as it does, a large increase in the volume of the assets entrusted to their care, a substantial increase in earnings, which has enabled them not merely to maintain the usual dividend, but to add largely to the Reserve, and, notwithstanding unusual calls, to carry forward to Profit and Loss a larger sum than was shown on the Financial Statement of the previous year.

As will appear by the address of the General Manager, the payment of interest has been well maintained both in this and the Northwest Provinces, and in the latter particularly it is noticeable that where mortgages have been renewed the mortgagors have been sufficiently prosperous in a large number of cases substantially to reduce the principal at risk.

As you know, the safety of our mortgage investments is, as a rule (so far as is humanly possible), insured by the practice invariably followed—unless otherwise directed by the investor—of not advancing more than one-half of the value of the security offered—a value which is carefully ascertained by reliable valuators.

The confidence of the public in the conservative management of the Corporation is well shown by the constantly increasing number of estates entrusted to its care, and the Directorate have no hesitation in appealing to the Shareholders to use the influence which each of them has in extending this branch of the Company's business.

The Shareholders will notice with sincere regret the loss by death of two of their old Directors, Colonel D. R. Wilkie, President of the Imperial Bank, and the Honorable Senator Jaffray, to whose advice and assistance their brother Directors and the Shareholders have for many years been greatly indebted. The vacancies on the Board were filled by the appointment of two well-known men of business, Mr. Edward C. Whitney of Ottawa and Lieut.-Col. J. F. Michie of Toronto.

Certain resolutions will be submitted for your approval—the first with reference to the General Manager, the founder of the Corporation, to whose unremitting oversight and care the Corporation largely owes its prosperity.

By another resolution you will be asked to confirm and approve the action of your Directors in making grants to the Patriotic Fund and the Red Cross Society, a course which under present conditions has seemed to the Directors of this Corporation, as to those of others, to be not merely reasonable, but right.

By a third resolution the Directors ask for power to apply for a charter from the Dominion Parliament, if they should be advised that it is prudent or desirable to do so in the present or anticipated state of the law.

In conclusion I feel that in maintaining the conservative policy which has always characterized the management of the Corporation we may look forward with reasonable confidence to the future.

The President then called upon Mr. J. W. Langmuir, Vice-President and General Manager, to address the Shareholders.

Mr. Langmuir spoke as follows:—

In submitting the Thirty-third Annual Report of the Corporation, with the accompanying statements, I do so with a good deal of pleasure, believing, as I do, that the results of the year's operations will be considered by all concerned to be most satisfactory.

You will observe from the Profit and Loss Statement that the net profits for the year, after payment of expenses of every kind, and making provision for all ascertained and anticipated losses, amount to $324,381.05, or 10.47% on the total amount of the paid-up Capital and Reserve of $3,100,000. Out of these profits and the balance of $28,361.85 brought forward from last year, we paid our usual dividend of 10%, wrote off an amount of $5,255.85 expended during the year on permanent improvements to our office building at Ottawa, subscribed $11,000 to the Canadian Patriotic and Red Cross Funds, transferred $100,000 to Reserve, thereby increasing that fund to $1,600,000, and carried forward to the credit of Profit and Loss the sum of $86,487.05.

The Assets and Liabilities Statement shows a total volume of assets in the hands of the Corporation as at the 31st of December last of $67,421,090.99, being a net increase of $4,265,207.02 for the year. The new business taken over by way of Executorships, Trusteeships, Administrations, Investment and other Agencies, etc., during the year amounted to $7,217,984.28, as shown by the Inspection Committee's Report, which you have heard read, and which will be printed in full in our Annual Report.

You will be interested to know that in respect of a volume of mortgages on real estate amounting to $16,327,454.79 negotiated by the Corporation on the security of improved farm and city properties situate within the Province of Ontario, 98.20% of all the interest that fell due during the calendar year 1914, including the arrears brought forward from 1913, has been received. The average rate of interest on these Ontario mortgages is 6.03%, an increase of .20% over the preceding year. With regard to our mortgages in the three Prairie Provinces, where we have some $8,150,776.88 under investment, bearing an average interest rate of 7.63%, I am pleased to say that the interest collections have been satisfactory, and the principal payments larger than we had hoped under the circumstances. Of all the interest on Western mortgages charged during the year up to the 31st December last, including the arrears brought forward from 1913, 80% has been collected, notwithstanding the fact that interest on farm loans in the West is payable yearly, instead of half-yearly, as in Ontario, the bulk of which falls due in the months of November and December.

There is no doubt that the Western farmer in many districts this last year, notwithstanding a light crop, realized a larger return than he did the preceding year, owing to the higher prices that obtained for grain, and the lower expenses incidental to the harvesting of his crop. The outlook in the West, for the farmer in particular, this year would seem to be highly satisfactory. The reports from our representatives indicate an increase of about twenty per cent. in crop area. The autumn months were unusually open, and conditions most favorable for the preparation of the land for next spring, which, with the abundance of snow in Alberta and elsewhere, should mean a heavy crop this year, if the spring and summer weather is at all favorable.

The almost complete failure of the crop last year in a number of districts has, I think, made clear to many the importance of farming on a more scientific basis, for here and there in the most seriously affected localities farmers who had carefully cultivated their land were rewarded with satisfactory results. Another encouraging feature is the growing disposition on the part of the farmer to undertake more diversified farming, which is being evidenced by the returns from the sale of cattle, hogs, dairy produce, garden stuffs, etc.

Our Western officials advise us that there is some little movement in sales of farm land, the purchasers being chiefly adjoining farmers and town people who were at one time farmers and are now for one reason or another disposed to resume their former occupations. These conditions should very shortly, with the high price of grain that must surely prevail for the next two years, make for an improvement of trade, and the establishment of the whole commercial fabric of the West on a much more stable and satisfactory basis.

We have, as a nation, just completed a year a large proportion of which was so fraught with financial uncertainty and unrest as to be without a precedent in the records of our country, if not, indeed, throughout the entire business world, and while, of course, we have not by any means reached the end of our financial cares and business depression, at the same time Canada should be congratulated upon the splendid manner in which not only the banks and large financial institutions generally, but the Government, as well as the main body of citizens, set themselves to meet in a sane and determined way the most unusual demands that were required of them on the outbreak of the war, and for the following months of 1914. It has been, and still is, no doubt, a time of real testing for our financial institutions. I may, therefore, I think, be pardoned if I take this opportunity of congratulating the shareholders and clients of this Corporation on the Report submitted for the year just closed, which, notwithstanding the financial conditions that have obtained, shows a new high record of assets under administration, and a net increase in profits of $24,364.65 over the preceding year, which was the best year in our history up to that date.

With your permission I will now pass on to a matter of a more personal nature. Thirty-three years ago I resigned my position in the public service of the Province of Ontario to undertake the organization and management of this Corporation, which began its career under the style of "The Toronto General Trusts Company," and had the distinction of being the first trust company launched in Canada. After thirty-three years of service with the Corporation I have now to state that, owing to advancing years and not too robust health, I have just recently handed to the Board of Directors my resignation as General Manager of the Corporation. During these years I have had the pleasure of seeing this institution develop from its very modest beginning to one of the largest and most important financial institutions in the Dominion. I have also had the satisfaction of knowing that the Corporation, which began its career by filling a long-felt need in the community, has continued with the passing of the years to render an increasingly important and valuable service to the public.

The advantages of the corporate over the private or individual executor and trustee have been borne in upon the public in Canada during the last thirty odd years, to such an extent that The Toronto General Trusts Corporation has not only found for itself an increasingly large field for its operations, but a large number of trust companies have since been organized, of which a considerable number have acquired an extensive volume of business of a fiduciary character. In the conduct of the affairs of the Corporation since its very inception, as most of you are aware, a very conservative policy has obtained, not only with regard to the investment of its funds, but also in the class of work it has assumed.

In concluding my tenure of office as General Manager of the Corporation I venture to repeat what I have so often stated at other Annual Meetings, that I am more than ever convinced of the wisdom of a company, organized primarily for the administration of estates and trusts, in refraining from the employment of its own Capital and Reserve, or any other funds under its control, in real estate speculation, the purchase of stocks or bonds of a speculative character, the underwriting of securities, or the acceptance of work that may embarrass it in any way in times of unusual or depressed financial conditions. A company having in its keeping the financial affairs of hundreds, and sometimes thousands, of beneficiaries, many of whom are altogether dependent upon the income received through the trust company, should not only confine the investment of its trust funds to such investments as are authorized by law, unless otherwise directed under the will or instrument under which it acts, but should be quite as careful to see that the guaranteed funds under its control, as well as its own Capital and Reserve, are equally well and securely invested. It was a matter of great satisfaction to all connected with the Corporation last August, and during the following months, to feel that, notwithstanding the acute situation that arose following the declaration of war, we were, owing to the policy that has always prevailed, entirely free from any anxiety whatever as to our financial position or our obligations to any class of our beneficiaries.

I have for a great many years at our Annual Meetings ventured to point out the evil of promiscuously granting charters to groups of individuals styling themselves "trust companies," whose chief object in organizing is to acquire the control of funds for the exploitation of this enterprise or that, the purchase and sale of real estate, etc., etc. The folly of granting such charters has been very clearly exemplified during the past year in the disastrous failure in the West of one of the so-called trust companies, that had established connections and branch offices throughout the Dominion.

In retiring from the position of General Manager of the Corporation, it is a matter of keen gratification to me to know that all its affairs are in an absolutely sound and healthy condition, not only in respect to the investments held for Trust and Guaranteed Accounts, as well as for its own Capital and Reserve, but also in the matter of its entire organization and equipment, both at the Head Office and Branches. The Corporation was never in a better position to efficiently handle estates and trusts of all kinds than it is at the present time. With the experience gathered during the years, departments have been organized for the expert administration of the various classes of assets, including businesses and going concerns of almost every description, and while the earnings of the Corporation on its Capital Stock are no doubt satisfactory to the shareholders, the most casual observer in examining our statements will see that our net profits, having regard to the volume of business in the hands of the Corporation, and the complex character of the assets under administration, are certainly very moderate.

In speaking out of an experience of over thirty years in trust company affairs, in connection with which I have had ample opportunity to compare the corporate with the private or individual administration of estates, I have no hesitation whatever in very strongly advising the public generally of the immense advantages to be had from the services of a reliable trust company in the administration of executorships, trusteeships, etc., which may be had at a cost no greater, if indeed as great, as administration by private individuals. A legitimate and carefully-managed trust company, to my mind, is a most valuable servant of the community in which it operates, in not only managing and conserving the estates of deceased persons, accumulated frequently by dint of hard work and the practice of economy, but in the care and management of the financial affairs of individuals who may, for one reason or another, wish to be relieved from such duties, and also in looking after the investments of charitable and other institutions.

In retiring from the position of General Manager I wish to express my unbounded confidence in the future success of the Corporation, knowing as I do the views of the Board of Directors and the officials and staff of the Corporation, who will be responsible for the direction of its affairs and the carrying out of its undertakings. I desire to thank in no formal way, but from the bottom of my heart, the members of the Board of Directors and Advisory Boards, the officers and the staff of the Corporation at Head Office and Branches, for the loyal support which I have enjoyed during all the years in which I have had the honor to fill the position of General Manager of the Corporation.

The report was unanimously adopted.

The report of the Inspection Committee, as signed by Mr. Hamilton Cassels, K.C., Hon. Sir John M. Gibson, K.C.M.G., and J. Bruce Macdonald, was also adopted.

The following Shareholders were elected Directors for the current year: W. R. Brock, Hamilton Cassels, K.C., Sir William Mortimer Clark, K.C., LL.D., Hon. Senator W. C. Edwards, Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., M.P.P., Col. Hon. Sir John M. Gibson, K.C.M.G., LL.D., Arthur C. Hardy, John Hoskin, K.C., LL.D., J. W. Langmuir, R. W. Leonard, Thomas Long, J. Bruce Macdonald, Sir Daniel H. McMillan, K.C.M.G., W. D. Matthews, Hon. Peter McLaren, Lieut.-Col. John F. Michie, Sir Edmund Osler, M.P., Hon. Featherston Osler, K.C., J. G. Scott, K.C., Sir Edmund Walker, C.V.O., LL.D., and E. C. Whitney.

The President, Hon. Featherston Osler, K.C., announced to the Shareholders that Mr. A. D. Langmuir, who has been with the Corporation for over thirty years, filling the position of Assistant General Manager since 1897, had been appointed by the Directors to the position of General Manager of the Corporation, made vacant by the retirement of Mr. J. W. Langmuir, and, further, that Mr. W. G. Watson, who has been with the Corporation for eighteen years, occupying the position of Secretary since 1907, had been promoted to the position of Assistant General Manager.

At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Directors Hon. Featherston Osler, K.C., was re-elected President, and Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., and J. W. Langmuir, Vice-Presidents.

The Inspection Committee was re-elected, namely, Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., Chairman; Hamilton Cassels, K.C., and Hon. Sir John M. Gibson, K.C.M.G.

The following members were elected to the Advisory Boards at Ottawa and Winnipeg:—

Ottawa—W. D. Hogg, K.C., Chairman; George Burn, Captain J. L. Murphy, Hiram Robinson and Sir Henry N. Bate.

Winnipeg—Hon. Sir Daniel H. McMillan, K.C.M.G., Chairman; H. H. Smith, W. H. Cross, A. L. Crossin, Sir D. C. Cameron, K.C.M.G., and Frederick T. Griffin.

Potatoes Scarce as Bread

BERLIN, Feb. 6. — (Via Amsterdam.)—In commenting on the decision of the restaurants to discontinue serving bread free with all meals, and to urge that customers order potatoes instead of bread when either will be charged for, The Vorwaerts says that bread, potatoes and fish are equally unabundant, and that there is therefore little sense suggesting that either potatoes or fish be substituted for wheat product.

Aberdeen Takes Another Title.

LONDON, Feb. 6. — The Earl of Aberdeen, retiring Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, whose announced intention of assuming the new title of Marquis of Aberdeen and Tara provoked strong protests from Ireland, has reconsidered his decision in view of this criticism. It was announced yesterday that he would style himself the Marquis of Temair, a name which is anciently associated with the historic hall of Tara.

Austro-Germans Guard Frontier.

PARIS, Feb. 6. — Austro-German troops along the Serbian frontier have been dispersed along an immense front because of the menace presented by the possibility of Roumania's entrance into the war, and plans for a new offensive against Serbia have been abandoned in consequence, declares The Petit Parisien, which does not give the source of its information, but declares it authentic. In the meantime, the Serbians are completely re-arming and refitting their army and have received large reinforcements of reserves and supplies of munitions.

Oil Tanker Abandoned.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Standard Oil tank ship Chester, which sailed from this port Jan. 23 for Rotterdam, was wrecked and abandoned in mid-ocean and her crew of about 35 were rescued by the American liner Philadelphia, according to a wireless message received yesterday from the Philadelphia's captain.

Blockade Pleases Germans.

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—(Via London.)—The entire German press greets with satisfaction the Admiralty's declaration that the waters surrounding England, Scotland and Ireland have been included in the war zone. The head lines of several papers speak of the announcement as a blockade.

SHOULD TIGHTEN SCREWS.

Morning Post Urges Britain to Make Full Reprisal.

LONDON, Feb. 6. — The Morning Post in an editorial yesterday characterizes The Hague conventions and the declaration of London as nothing but a carefully prepared conspiracy engineered by Germany against the British sea power. The paper argues that Germany now has thrown off the mask and declared for full rigor of the game. Great Britain should throw off the whole paraphernalia of declarations and conventions with which the navy is encumbered and reply to the German threats with another screw in the blockade.

The Morning Post also urges practical measures such as the arming of British merchantmen and trawlers with rifles, maxims, bombs and quick-firers—not to make them belligerents, but for employment against piratical attack.

Man's inhumanity to man makes countless millions of dividends.

Belgium and U. S. Agreed.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The Belgian Government has issued a protest against the recent action of Germany in annuling the exequaturs of the consuls of neutral powers in Belgium. The United States and Belgium agree, says the protest, that Germany has no right to annul the exequaturs. The two countries, it adds, only recognize the right of Germany to suspend the mission of consuls when military exigencies make such a step necessary.

HINDS BROTHERS WON FINAL OF CONSOLATION

Were Four up Against Cobourg Rink but Forfeited Three Points Owing to Absence of One Player

The Hinds brothers of Lindsay, although one was missing on the home stretch, won the finals of the bonspiel consolation last evening and took the four solid leather handbags which the club offered as first prize. The Cobourg rink, led by W. De Laney, were presented with four sets of carvers.

The Orillia rink was minus its vice skip, as T. Hinds, who had been taken ill, was unable to play. According to the rules of the bonspiel, the rink forfeited three points, and, while this was a big handicap, it was somewhat balanced by the fact that the Cobourg quartette were pretty well tired out by the grind they had faced in their efforts to reach the finals and the opposing players were fresh and in good shape, as they had not played since the evening before. Percy Fitzgerald subbed with the broom for Orillia.

De Laney, while he got away to a good start, fell behind, and, when the Orillians caught him in the seventh end, they maintained the lead to the end of the game, when Orillia was four up, just enough to give them the honors. The score:

Cobourg—	Orillia—
A. Staples	R. Hinds
H. Greer	R. Hinds
J. Davidson
W. De Laney.. 7	Ed Hines 11

A MILLION MORE MEN WHEN NEEDED

Britain Said to Have 780,000 Men at the Front

OTTAWA, Feb. 6. — Capt. Ernest Janney, formerly of Galt, commander of the Canadian detachment of the British Royal Flying Corps, arrived here yesterday from England to consult with the Militia Department on aviation matters. Capt. Janney has been doing considerable reconnaissance work for the British forces at the front. In his opinion the war is one of duration and will not get well under way till next May, when the allies will begin to move. The British forces in France and Belgium now number 780,000, and the French have 2,900,000 on the firing line, he says. The British at a moment's notice can put a million more in the field.

The following official memorandum was issued by the Government yesterday afternoon:

"The King has recently inspected the Canadian division with Lord Kitchener and was much pleased with their appearance. While they have experienced many hardships, through bad weather and heavy rain, they have borne all cheerfully."

PERLEY GOES TO FRONT.

He Will See That Provision Is Made For Arrival of Canadians.

OTTAWA, Feb. 6. — The Government has been advised that Sir George Perley, acting High Commissioner in London, is now in France with the headquarters of Gen. French. Sir George is understood to be looking after arrangements for the Canadian forces, who will shortly go to the front, making sure that every possible provision is being made for their health and comfort.

Eight Elections Pending.

LONDON, Feb. 6. — The appointment of Cecil Harmsworth to the Home Office Secretaryship and of Neil Primrose to the Foreign Office Secretaryship necessitates two more elections, bringing the total number of pending elections to eight, namely Wisbech and Chesterton in Cambridgeshire; Luton in Bedfordshire, Saffron Walden, in Essex; Wigtonshire, Scarborough and Hirsk and Howdenshire in Yorkshire. There is no expectation of contests anywhere.

MOINSE DENIES CHARGES OF PROFESSIONALISM

O.H.A. Will Continue the Investigation—Hills of Port Hope Juniors and the Club are Suspended

Toronto, Feb. 6.—At a meeting of the O.H.A. sub-committee held yesterday judgment was deferred on the case of Joe Moinse, of the Peterborough Hockey Club, who was charged with being Joe Tetrault, a professional hockey player, who figured in the Maritime Provinces several years ago. Moinse was present and stated that he was 22 years of age, born in Sharon, Vt., where he lived for some years, coming to Canada in 1911 and playing hockey with the Garry juniors in the City League at Winnipeg. In 1912-13 he said he was in New York and New Haven, and in the summer of 1913 went to Cavan township near Peterborough, where he has worked and lived ever since with R. James. He denied having ever played professional hockey anywhere, or that he had ever assumed or gone under the name of Tetrault. He played in five championship games for Peterborough this winter, and this, he said, was the first hockey he had played since 1911. A witness present said he thought he had been introduced to Moinse under the name of Tetrault in the Queen's Hotel, Montreal, last winter. This Moinse emphatically denied. The case will be further investigated.

The charge against Robert L. Hills, of Port Hope, was reopened at the request of the Lindsay Club, and the Port Hope club admitted upon investigation they had found that Wilfred Hills, an older brother, had played under the name and birth certificate of his brother, Robert L. Hills; in fact, had done so for the past three years. He was known as "Finnegan" in the town. The peculiar part of it is that Wilfred himself is still under age, and there was no apparent reason for the deception. He will not be 20 years of age until next September. The committee decided to expel Wilfred Hills and suspend Robert L. Hills and the Port Hope club. The game billed for Kingston Monday night with K. C. I. has been cancelled.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

A QUIET SPOT.

DID you ever think of looking,
When in search of calm, secure,
In a boiler shop, dear brother,
Where the strokes are swift and sure,
Where the heavy iron sledges,
Making music as they fall,
Drown the gabble and the chatter
Of the man who knows it all?

There the rapping of the hammer
Is against the iron plates,
Not against some wayward neighbor
Who has trouble with his dates;
There they pound the shapeless metal
Into iron they mold the ore,
But they do not keep a-tapping
On the man who lives next door.

Though your nerves may shrink in terror
From the bedlam of the place
As it gallops forth its noises
At an ear destroying pace,
You may have the satisfaction
That the man who follows here
To inform you on the tariff
Cannot dent the atmosphere.

While the place is not ideal
For the man whose nerves are strung,
Yet the shop has this advantage—
Nothing doing for the tongue.
Though the noise is as a battle
When two armies meet in strife,
It may lure the chap whose hobby
Is to lead a quiet life.

Useful Accomplishment.

So Pathetic.

"What funeral?"

"Hadn't you heard about it?"

"No."

OFFICERS WERE ENTERTAINED

One of the most charming and delightfully informal gatherings of the season was held last evening at the well appointed home of Mr. R. B. Rogers, 147 Hunter Street east. Mr. Rogers entertained 60 officers and friends, the military spirit and patriotism prevading the entire evening which was spent in music, and cards.

Lieut. Rogers contributed vocal solos as did Mr. Harry Winch, Mr John Crane and Mr. Charles Dean.

Col. Miller also contributed enjoyable recitations and a popular military character impersonation.

Judge Huycke at the close, in a beautiful and choicely worded address, paid high tribute to the Rogers family for their loyalty in contributing two sons for the defence and protection of the Empire. He reviewed the military history of the Rogers family and considered it a credit to the city, the country and the Empire to have such a family in our midst.

Among the officers present were: Lieut. Col. Johnston, Captain Spencer, Major Medd, Colonel Miller, Lieut. Johnston, Lieut. Harry Rogers and Major McLaughlin.

During the evening letters were read from Major Dennistoun and Major Bennett now at Salisbury.

THE PLEASURES OF READING

Travel and Description.

It may be a matter of opinion as to whether books of travel are to be classed amongst the lighter works of literature or otherwise. A great many will be inclined to affirm that they belong to a weightier class and should be placed with history, to which they undoubtedly play a concomitant part. But there are very many who would demur to this for there is nothing that appeals so much to the average reader as tales of daring do, such as are to be found in the accounts of explorers, missionaries or soldiers of fortune, or in narratives descriptive of such scenes as lie well in the path of the ordinary tourist.

The present war has doubtless brought to the minds of many thousands, visits that they have been in the habit of paying periodically to the cathedrals and art galleries of Europe, and their hearts will be filled with poignant regret that since their last visit many priceless works perished for ever. For those who have seen these glories and for those who have not, the merest monetary outlay can transport them whither they please, whether it be to the countries of Europe, the snowclad mountains of Thibet, the romantic land of the Aztecs, or to those vast Arctic and Antarctic regions, to explore whose hidden mysteries so many gallant heroes have laid down their lives. The library however offers this entertainment absolutely free of charge. The whole world is represented amongst the books of travel that it contains.

There was a time, when tales of travel were looked upon with misgiving owing to the fact that impostors had so often gulled the public that they were really afraid to believe anything that they read. Mungo Park, one of the earlier African travellers was a sufferer on this account as was Paul Du Chaillu, the noted French explorer. Many of the statements that they made were received with a smile of incredulity but later explorations testified to their truth. We are living in a time now when nobody can pose as an impostor for facilities for travel have so vastly improved that it is comparatively easy to make a trip which fifty years ago would have been scoffed at as impossible, and it is safe to say that it is in the highest degree improbable that that anybody can lay claim to having planted foot on any part of the habitable globe where someone else has not been before him.

In the days of our fathers it was easy enough for a man to be an imposter for most people were untravelled and unread. As I write two names occur to my mind of men who in the art of imposition were unrivalled. They were George Psalmanazar and Louis de Rougemont. The former made his appearance in London in 1703. His real name is still a mystery. All that is known is that he came to England at the invitation of the Bishop of London to whom he had been recommended by a chaplain of a Scotch regiment stationed at Sluys, Holland. At that time he was nineteen years of age. He pretended to have been born on the island of Formosa, off the coast of China. All London was interested in him. He was young and good-looking and it was something to see an individual who said he was once a cannibal converted into a seemingly sincere proselyte of the Christian faith. In order to meet the demand for his life story he wrote a book entitled "An Historical and Geographical Description of Formosa, etc." It was an absolute fabrication from beginning to end. One or two specimens of his writing will suffice. "Cannibalism," he says, "is not habitual but the inhabitants eat the bodies of prisoners of war and of malefactors legally executed. The flesh of the latter is our greatest dainty and is four times dearer than other rare and delicious food." "The Formosans are accustomed to beat live serpents with rods until they be very angry and when they are in this furious passion all the venom that was in the body ascends to the head, which being then cut off, there remains no more poison in the body, which may therefore be safely eaten."

The book was a success. The first edition was rapidly sold and a second one called for. But the public awakened at length to the imposture and Psalmanazar fell from favour and almost disappeared from public view. In 1716 at the age of thirty-two he experienced a wonderful change of heart and became a real model of domestic virtue. Dr. Johnson mentions him as a man for whom he had the greatest respect and esteem. Louis de Rougemont, the second name, sprang into prominence through a series of wonderful descriptions of travel which he contributed to the "wide, wide world" magazine some few years ago. He was successful for a very brief period, but has now absolutely passed from the public ken.

In the next article an attempt will be made to enlighten the reader as to the exact nature of the works contained in the travel section of the library.

SHIPMENT OF 1915 FORD CARS

Received Today by the Local Agent Jos. J. Duffus

Jos. J. Duffus, local agent for Ford cars, unloaded today a shipment of the new 1915 model T touring car and these may be seen at his garage and show rooms on Simcoe Street. The 1915 model besides possessing all the requisites which go to make up a reliable car is equipped with a cowl dash, has a new style wind shield and lamps and is electric lighted. While the Ford is a good buy at any time, the low prices this year are particularly attractive. The prices are; touring cars, $590, two pasenger runabout, $540.

Ford automobiles and Ford parts are strictly made in Canada. The Ford Motor Car Company of Canada Limited, has produced over 25,000 made in Canada cars. Every part is distinctly a home product, and in the Ford Company, Canada can boast of having the largest automobile factory in the British Empire. What has made this possible? The number of cars the Ford Company turns out each year. This year the company had built a $300,000 addition to its factory at Ford, Ontario, to take care of the ever increasing demand, for a car the cost of which is cut to a minimum and one which everybody can afford to drive.

City Council Must Appoint Attorney

His Honor Judge Huycke stated this morning that before any steps could be taken in the inquiry into the alleged irregularities, in the business transactions of the Board of Education, it will be necessary for the city council to appoint a prosecuting attorney to place the evidence before him. Judge Huycke has written to the council to that effect.

THREE LECTURES BY DR. GRANT

Before Local Branch of Royal Astronomical Society

The local branch of the Royal Astronomical Society has arranged for a series of lectures to be given in the Normal School by Dr. Chant of Toronto University, the first of which will be given on Friday night, February 12th.

The course of lectures is intended to be an introduction to observational astronomy. It deals with the motion of the heavenly bodies and includes three lectures, the subjects of which are:

1. The motions of the earth and the moon
2. The motions of the planets.
3. The motions of the comets, meteors, and the stars

The paths which these various bodies trace out in the sky will be described, and suggestions as to the times and manner of observing them will be given.

The lectures will be illustrated by astronomical models and lantern slides. If possible, the rotation of the earth on its axis will be ocularly demonstrated by means of a swinging pendulum.

Especial care will also be given to explain how the handbook issued by the Society can be used. The various portions of the book will be explained in detail.

Each lecture will be complete in itself, but the three are required to cover the whole field.

An invitation is cordially extended to the public to attend, and all who are interested in astronomy should make a special effort to attend.

THE WORKS AND LIFE OF JOHN HENRY NEWMAN

Subject of Address Before Ladies' Literary Society by Mr. Corkery

The Ladies' Literary Society of St Peter's T. A. S. enjoyed a decided treat in the lecture given last evening by Mr. John Corkery, Jr., on "The Works and Life of John Henry Newman," one of the most interesting and notable figures of the last century. His life, long and varied as it was, forms a picturesque background to his works, and the speaker did full justice to it, showing close and careful study of his subject. "John Henry Newman, cardinal, philosopher, man of letters, leader of the Tractarian movement, and convert to the Catholic Church," was born in 1801. It is interesting to note that many believe him to be of Jewish descent, a contention, however, that has never been proven. In his early school days he had a leaning toward the bar, which was abandoned for the church, and was for two years curate at St. Clement's, Oxford, and later on vicar of St. Mary's. In 1832, owing to a quarrel with one of the Oxford professors, he resigned his offices and went for a long voyage through the Mediterranean. It was at this time that he composed his first series of poems, the most notable being "The Pillar of the Cloud," better known as "Lead, Kindly Light." He returned to England in 1833, and on the Sunday after his return the Oxford movement was begun, when Keble preached his famous sermon on "National Apostacy." Newman now began to issue his "Tracts of the Times," promulgating his theory of the "Via Media." He made disciples on every hand, and in the year 1839 stood without a peer at the head of the movement. On the publishing of his famous tract No. 90, however, in 1841, a furious agitation broke out at Oxford, the heads of the various houses censuring Newman and denouncing him as a traitor. His tracts then ceased, he gave up his vicarate at St. Mary's, and retired into lay communion. In 1845 he was received into the Church of Rome, a year later arrived in Rome, was ordained priest, returning to England to found the Community of St. Philip Neri. His famous "Apologia pro Vita Sua" portrays with great candour and sincerity this period of his life.

In regard to his works, the "Apologia" is the best example of his prose, and established for all time Newman's fame as a writer of classical English prose, while "The Dream of Gerontius" gave him the same superiority as a writer of lyric poetry. This masterpiece, doomed by its author to the wastebasket, was rescued by a friend, who was thereby the means of preserving to the world "one of the most unique and original" poems of the nineteenth century. It has been described as a metrical meditation on death, and it was the oratorio based on this masterpiece and first performed in Westminster Cathedral, London, that made Dr. Elgar famous as a musical composer. The speaker gave several extracts from this poem, illustrating the changes in the movement as the soul progresses to its final destination. "In its exalted purity and its beauty of expression, 'The Dream of Gerontius' stands first among the few great poems that depict the life after death." Death came to its author at the ripe age of ninety years, and inscribed on his tomb is the appropriate epitaph, "From shadows and symbols into the truth."

Miss Nora Coughlin presided in the chair, and before the lecture Master Joseph Clancy gave a vocal selection.

BIBLICAL SUBJECTS.

Rev. R. G. Peever intends to deal with two very important Biblical subjects tomorrow. In the morning he will speak on the Lord's Supper, inquiring into the question of whether the Protestant conception of it is right or wrong. At the evening service he will deal with the Garden of Eden. Where it is and What it is.

ARE BRINGING THE HIPPODROME OF NEW YORK HERE

Realistic Spectacle Comes in Its Entirety to the Grand Opera House

Friday Saturday Feb. 12th and 13th Matinee and Night

The interest roused by the announcement that the Grand Opera House will put on next week a seven reel film reproduction of "America," the New York Hippodrome's sensational scenic spectacles, is indicative of the local desire to see the best there is in the amusement line.

It is hard to speak in praise of "America" without the use of circus adjectives. The immensity of conception, the beauty of the stage settings, the unceasing procession of thrilling incidents, and, above all, the marvellous faithfulness of the reproduction beggar description.

The New York Hippodrome is the largest theatre in the world. It has the finest facilities in the shape of technical equipment. Its spectacles are devised and staged by past masters in the art of thrilling the soul of man.

"America" is at the Grand Opera House Friday and Saturday, Feb. 12 and 13. That the original purpose of the producers to have as many people as possible see the spectacle may be realized, the prices were set at 15c, 15c and 25c. There will be two performances daily, at 2.30 and 8.30.

USED UNITED STATES FLAG TO EVADE GERMAN SUBMARINES

British Foreign Office Issues Statement Justifying Ruse Under International Law---Had to Protect Lives of Neutral Passengers, Says Lusitania's Captain.

COMMENT BY NEW YORK PRESS

If Germany Torpedoes American Ships She Will Do so to Her Own Bitter Cost Says the Tribune.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 8. — Morning papers comment at length on the Lusitania flying the American flag and on the import of the German blockade announcement as revealed in the detailed statement. The Times says: "The Berlin Government now frankly recognizes the unsympathetic attitude of neutral nations. The knowledge that Germany is morally isolated without support, condemned by what is called the supreme court of civilization, must be disheartening. This knowledge will tend to engender disaffection. There are many signs that all is not going well within the empire."

The World, referring to the Lusitania case, asks if Berlin has forgotten that the Emden, Dresden and Karlsruhe gained most notable successes by flying a neutral flag. Germany's blockade proclamation is a wanton denial of neutral rights. Neutrals at whom it is aimed should unite at once in remonstrances too impressive to be ignored."

The Tribune says that American ships will clear for British and Irish ports as usual, and if Germany torpedoes them by accident or otherwise, she will do so to her own bitter cost.

LONDON, Feb. 8. — The British steamer Lusitania of the Cunard Line, which sailed from New York, Jan. 30, and arrived at Liverpool on Saturday afternoon, flew the American flag from the time she passed Queenstown until she entered the Mersey. This is vouched for by American passengers who crossed on her.

The Lusitania received a wireless message from the Baltic of the White Star Line that two submarines had been sighted from that vessel.

The captain of the Lusitania, in reply to a question of one of the passengers, declared he had the right to fly the flag of a neutral country for the protection of neutral passengers and mails which his ship was carrying.

The following statement was issued by the Foreign Office last night:

"The use of a neutral flag, is, within certain limitations, well established in practice as a ruse de guerre. The only effect in the case of a merchantman of wearing a flag other than her national flag is to compel the enemy to follow the ordinary obligations of naval warfare and satisfy himself as to the nationality of the vessel and the character of her cargo by examination before capturing her and taking her into a prize court for adjudication.

"The British Government has always considered the use of the British colors for foreign vessels legitimate for the purpose of escaping capture. Such practice not only involves no breach of international law, but is specifically recognized by the law of this country in the Merchant Shipping Act of 1894.

"In instructions to British consuls in 1914 it is stated: 'A ship is liable to capture if a British character is improperly assumed, except for the purpose of escaping capture.'

"As we have in practice not objected to foreign merchant vessels using the British merchant flag as a ruse for the purpose of evading capture at sea at the hands of a belligerent, so we should maintain that in the converse case a British merchant vessel committed no breach of international law in assuming neutral colors for a similar purpose, if she thought fit.

"By the rules of international law, the customs of war and the dictates of humanity, it is obligatory upon a belligerent to ascertain the character of a merchant vessel and cargo before capture. Germany has no right to disregard this obligation.

"To destroy a ship, non-combatant crew and cargo, as Germany announced her intention of doing, is nothing less than an act of piracy on the high seas."

It is held in official circles that the Lusitania's action was wholly justifiable, contravening no international law, and assumes importance only because of Germany's announced intention of being perfectly ruthless in operations against British shipping. It is not believed Washington will consider it necessary on general principles to make a protest regarding the Lusitania or the British policy regarding flags, but it is recognized that Washington may be appreciative in this matter because of German intentions to torpedo, if possible. British merchantmen. If actuated by such apprehension, Washington protests to England, this Government is likely to consider that Washington should approach Germany and demand abandonment of the announced plan.

One of Britain's strongest points is that the German prize law of 1909 specially states German warships may follow such tactics. So in British opinion does all international law, and it is agreed that if warships may use neutral ensigns for purposes of capture or escape or drawing the enemy into action, there can be no complaint about merchant ships doing likewise for purely protective purposes. As yet the Foreign Office has heard nothing from Washington.

MR. SPENCE SEES HIS SOLICITOR

In Regard to Statement in Trades and Labor Report

When a reporter visited Sanitary Inspector Spence this morning he found him very indignant over the allegation that "the dictator of the city's back yards," had a yard that was dirty, as stated in the report of the Trades and Labor Council. Mr. Spence said it was a malicious and untrue statement as his grounds are kept scrupulously clean. He visited his solicitor in regard to the matter and has left it in his hands as to whether to take action or not. Mr. Spence cannot understand why such untruthful statements should be made.

COMBATING FRAZIL ICE

Superintendent of Waterworks Department Reports on His Observations at Power Plants Between Ottawa and Montreal

Superintendent R. L. Dobbin of the waterworks department made the following report to the Utilities Commission Saturday evening, on his recent visit to Montreal and Ottawa to ascertain the methods used in the power houses in that vicinity to overcome frazil ice:—

The Peterborough Utilities Commission,

Gentlemen,—In accordance with your instructions, on my recent trip to Montreal and Ottawa I endeavored to see as much as possible of the power houses in the vicinity, and to ascertain their methods for combating frazil ice and like conditions.

While at Montreal the plants visited were the Chambly and Lachine plants of the Montreal Light Heat and Power Company, the new Cedar Rapids power house on the St. Lawrence, and the pumping plant of the Montreal Water and Power Company.

Chambly Power House.

This is situated on the Richelieu River and 20,000 horse power is developed under a head of 34 feet. It consists of a dam extending across the river, with a short fore-bay leading to the wheels. Considerable trouble is experienced here from frazil, as there is a long stretch of rapids above the site.

Several years ago steam pipes were installed in the wheels and they were used for some time, but finally abandoned, except for thawing out the wheels after they were plugged with the ice. The man in charge has been connected with the plant for several years, during which the steam pipes were used., and he gives as his opinion that the device was of no real use. He stated that he had seen units that did not have the steam applied, start before others to which it had been applied.

At present no protective device is used on the racks or in the wheels. Diagonal channels are cut in the ice of the forebay, from the shore at the power house end of the dam to the sluice-way. The frazil rises in these channels and is drawn with plows to the sluice-way where it is carried by

IMPORTANT WINS IN CARPATHIANS

Twenty-five Hundred Austrians Taken After Resistance at Three Points Was Broken

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 8. — Today's official communication says that hard fighting continues in the Carpathians with successes of considerable importance for the Russians. The pursuit of the Austrians after their resistance had been broken at three fortified positions is said to have resulted in the capture of twenty-five hundred prisoners. Additional prisoners were made at other points, and Austrian attacks were repulsed at other positions.

AUSTRIANS DRIVEN BACK FROM FRONTIER.

PARIS, Feb. 8. — A despatch from Nish to the Journal says several days ago Austrian troops violated the Roumanian frontier and fired on frontier guards who disputed their crossing the frontier.

Reinforcements were brought up and the Austrians were driven back over the line, leaving a number of wounded.

LIGHTING OF THE STREETS

Manager of Utilities Has not Yet Made His Report

At the meeting of the Utilities Commission on Saturday evening a letter was read from City Clerk Armstrong enclosing an extract from a report of the Fire, Water and Light Committee adopted by the City Council at its last meeting. The extract was as follows:—

"That the attention of the Peterborough Utilities Commission be called to the fact that the Council has been having very few lights put on the street during the past few years, and that additional street lighting is needed, and that the Commission be requested to inform the Council as soon as possible what system of street lighting they would recommend and what it would cost."

The letter was received and will not be taken up till Manager Fisk submits his report on the proposed new street lighting system.

The matter of permitting the assessor to use the vault in the second storey of the Utilities Commission office was laid over.

The waterworks superintendent was instructed to purchase service brasswork from Can. Brass Co. of Galt, and the cast iron pipe from the Gartshore-Thompson Co.

More Meters.

A letter was read from the Hydro-Electric Commission of Hespeler stating that 60 meters have been shipped to the local commission.

BRICKYARD IS CAPTURED

Important Advance Near La Bassee by British

GERMAN POSITIONS ARE BOMBARDED

May be Prelude to Advance at the Aisne

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The capture of a brickyard held by the Germans near La Bassee by British troops in a brilliant charge and the gaining of more ground in the Champagne district by French forces by the display of much bravery are the features of the operations on the western front this week end. The brickyard was situated between the canal at La Bassee and the Bethune road, and was about two-thirds of a mile east of Cuinchy. From it the Germans were able to keep up a galling fire on the British lines and it was the scene of much sniping This success makes the way easier for further advances.

North of Beausejour in the Champagne district the Germans made an attack on the French with about 500 men. This was repulsed. The French troops gained ground in this area, to the north of Messiges.

The district north of Soissons has also been heavily bombarded by the French great guns and if the opportunity is favorable another advance may be attempted in this region, as soon as the floods in the River Aisne sufficiently subside.

Several minor attacks of the Germons near Nieuport were all repulsed. The Germans admit that the French and British troops have got south of the canal at La Bassee and have occupied a trench. The Germans are launching attacks to try to regain the lost ground.

Between Arras and Rheims artillery has kept up its roar without ceasing. In this exchange the French guns have the advantage. Between the Argonne and the Vosges a fog has hampered artillery work and the battle has taken a rest.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1915

A LETTER THAT TELLS ITS OWN STORY.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER, which was sent to Mr. J. H. Burnham, and which has been forwarded to the Review, is a life story of men who came to Canada from the British potteries districts when the tariff "protected" labour in Canada. The Laurier reduction has not yet been corrected, and as a consequence pottery labour is in danger of extinction. One example is worth many theories. The pottery trade of St. John's has gone back to Britain, but the employees have not money enough to get back. They say that labour conditions in their trade were immeasurably superior in Canada until the reduced tariff left them at the mercy of cheaper labour.

The pottery industry in Canada is one that should be encouraged. Canada possesses some excellent resources for this industry that should be developed. There are splendid deposits of potter's clay, feldspar and other materials that can be utilized in the pottery and allied industries. Already a large factory is nearing completion in Kingston that will use feldspar in the manufacture of several kinds of tile, such as are used for fancy flooring, walls, fire grates, etc. Feldspar, or one of its constituents, kaolin, is essential to fine pottery, and the rich beds of this mineral should be utilized—the raw material should be manufactured into finished products in Canada. That has been the cry in regard to nickel. With very rich mines of nickel ore in Canada, we have allowed it to be refined in the United States. Certainly the Dominion Government should give an attentive ear to the principle underlying the complaint in the following letter—that Canada should utilize her own raw material, and protect her own industries and labour.

St. John's, P. Q.

John H. Burnham, Esq.,
M. P. for Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir:

I am taking the liberty of appealing to your sense of justice. You may, perhaps, remember having accompanied a deputation of sanitary potters from St. John, P. Q., on February of last year, to the Hon. Minister of Finance, when we endeavoured to have the tariff raised on sanitary earthenware. Of course, you know we were not successful; we have had a terrible experience since that time, having worked very little in the last year, and nothing at all for the last four months, the factory being closed down. We are making a last desperate effort to secure some consideration for our trade, and intend sending a small deputation to Ottawa at the earliest possible date to interview the Hon. Minister of Finance.

And, remembering your great kindness and the generous assistance which you gave to us on that occasion, and which, I assure you we sincerely appreciated, we now take the, perhaps unwarranted, liberty of asking you to arrange for a conference with the Hon. Minister of Finance, and any or all of the other cabinet ministers whom you think would be interested or could in any way influence our cause.

And also for any others of your Government or political friends who could be induced to help us out of our present difficulties.

I know this is rather late in the day to attempt to change the tariff. But from the influence which you seemed to have on our last visit, I feel assured you will be able to do so, and, if you can arrange it, we will be greatly indebted to you.

I am interesting the local member, Mr. Jos. Demers, M. P., telling him what we have done, and asking him to co-operate with, and if possible to assist you, in this matter.

We intend drawing up a statement of our case, and, when finished, we will forward a copy to you, so that you will have the outline of the whole matter before you. I do not know if you preserved the statement I sent you after our last conference. If you did so, it might be useful in recalling to your memory the outlines of the case as we see it.

Trusting you will be able to assist us at this time, I remain, on behalf of the Canadian Sanitary Potters,

Yours most respectfully,
GEO. SMITH.

PARLIAMENT DOWN TO BUSINESS.

THE DOMINION PARLIAMENT is settling down to a busy session, judging by the questions put to ministers and by the, at present, small number of proposed bills. Four bills have been proposed, one of which is by W. F. Maclean and entitled "An Act to regulate the exportation of nickel." Sir Robert Borden moved the following resolutions, to be considered in committee of the whole today:

1. That it is expedient to provide that a sum not exceeding one hundred million dollars ($100,000,000) be granted to His Majesty towards defraying any expenses that may be incurred by or under the authority of the Governor-in-Council during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1916, for:

(a) The defence and security of Canada;

(b) The conduct of naval or military operations in or beyond Canada;

(c) Promoting the continuance of trade, industry, and business communications, whether by means of insurance or indemnity against war risk or otherwise; and

(d) The carrying out of any measures deemed necessary or advisable by the Governor-in-Council in consequence of the existence of a state of war.

2. That the Governor-in-Council be empowered to raise by way of loan, temporary or otherwise, such sums of money as are required for the purpose of making any payment authorized by any Act founded on these resolutions.

3. That the principal raised by way of loan under this Act and under the War Appropriation Act, 1914, and the interest thereon shall be chargeable on the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Canada is losing no time in taking the necessary steps to prosecute vigorously her share in the defence of the Empire.

AUSTRALIA'S CHALLENGE TO CANADA.

ONE OF THE BEST edited and appearing newspapers from the Western Provinces, the Brandon Daily Sun, has an editorial on Australia's challenge to Canada. The Sun says:

> "Despite the fact that the total population of Australia is about three million less than the total population of Canada, Australia has announced its intention of sending man for man with Canada, to fight for the British Empire.
>
> "If Australia intends the attitude it has adopted in this respect to be a challenge to Canada, it is a challenge that has come at the right moment, in the right way, and along the right line. Canada will welcome it as it would welcome no other challenge. Canada has contributed, or is contributing, one hundred thousand men, but, in proportion to her population, she can still do better, and will do better, more especially when her sister colony, Australia, shows itself so ready to throw down the gauntlet to her."

At the rate of recruiting set by South Scotland, Canada should raise a force of 175,000, and at the rate of the agricultural parts of Britain, about 75,000. Canada is arranging to equip a force of 100,000 men from an available military population of about 1,200,000 men between the ages of 20 and 39, inclusive. This army will be augmented as fast as the need warrants, and the equipment can be produced. Canada is determined to take the lead, and will set a pace for Australia that will give that country a struggle to approach. The rivalry shows what the sentiment of the Empire is and how strong a bond it is in Imperial unity.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

DR. A. S. VOGT, head of the Mendelssohn Choir in Toronto, whose annual series of concerts are now taking place in the Queen City, is one of the best known musicians in Canada. He was born at Washington, Oxford County, Ont., in 1861, educated at Elmira, and studied music in Canada, the United States and in Germany. He founded the Mendelssohn Choir in 1894 and has remained its conductor ever since. Under his direction it has become the greatest singing organization in the country and one of the best-trained musical bodies in the world. Doctor Vogt has written extensively on musical subjects. He is now head of the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

WE seldom draw attention to poetry, but the sonnet of Duncan Campbell Scott, of Ottawa, which appears below, is one of merit. As a rule, Canadian sonnets and other forms of verse are not of a high order. They exhibit fine description, but lack depth and feeling and power. Mr. Scott's lines have got beyond this, and the fact gives promise of a higher class of Canadian verse.

Be Strong, O Warring Soul.

(Duncan Campbell Scott.)

Be strong, O warring soul! For very sooth
Kings are but wraiths, republics fade like rain,
Peoples are reaped and garnered as the grain,
And that alone prevails which is the truth;
Be strong when all the days of life bear ruth
And fury, and are hot with toil and strain;
Hold thy large faith and quell thy mighty pain;
Dream the great dream that buoys thine age with youth.
Thou art an eagle mewed in a sea-stopped cave;
He, poised in darkness, with victorious wings,
Keeps night between the granite and the sea,
Until the tide has drawn the warder-wave;
Then from the portal where the ripple rings,
He bursts into the boundless morning—free!

The French Question.

(Orillia Packet.)

In a letter to the Kingston Standard, Armand Lavergne says Bishop Fallon is a hypocrite and a degenerate Irishman. Perhaps. But if Bishop Fallon is a degenerate, the breed of which he comes must have been phenomenal. Furthermore, Lavergne, Bourassa & Co. will find that there are "hypocrites" and "degenerates" enough here to protect Ontario schools against the assaults of French Canada and maintain the rights of English-speaking Ontario. The Frenchifying propaganda has gone its length, and any Government weak and foolish enough to yield to the clamour of those who are not satisfied with having everything in Quebec entirely their own way, but wish to dictate to and control this province as well, would not last six months. Let Bourassa and Lavergne go to France, since they are so wedded to it, and help to maintain the French language and protect the liberties of their compatriots there. Their amazing effrontery has been tolerated here about as long as the people of Ontario are in the mood to suffer it.

Why Does He Worry?

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, assured in his own conscience that he let loose the dogs of war to save Belgium by tearing her to pieces, needs to find no old papers in the archives of Brussels to bolster his position. Fire, blood and the sword are what the Belgians need. Why should the good doctor be appalled at the results of his treatment and try to give England the credit for what he must feel are encouraging spasms as Kultur sinks in? Blood and iron admit no wavering. If the slaughter of the Belgians was a righteous thing on August 1st, when it was started, the death toll since that date ought to fill the chancellor's great heart with peace. Why try to pass the glory to Sir Edward Grey?

Corot's Big Heart

Corot, the great French landscape artist, was a man of the temperament traditionally associated with genius—irritable, impetuous, careless, generous and lovable. M. Albert Dubuisson, whose father was the great painter's friend, has published some interesting reminiscences of him in the Studio, in which he tells of a day he spent with the artist in his studio, when a knock at the door—the last straw after several really annoying interruptions—caused Corot to fling the door open abruptly with flushed face and fire in his eye.

"What is it now? Come in! Who are you? What do you come and disturb me for?" he demanded angrily. The caller much disconcerted, stammered his explanation:

"I came, M. Corot—I—it's about an accident. A workman engaged on the the building has had a fall. His condition is very grave. They have just taken him off to the hospital. We know the poor chap. He's a workman who leaves a wife and four children. We are getting up a subscription among the lodgers in the building for the family. I thought you would perhaps like to join us."

Corot's expressive countenance showed clearly his quick regret for his roughness to the messenger and his deepening sympathy for the injured man. He made prompt amends.

"The poor fellow!" he exclaimed. "The unfortunate family—a wife and four children! We must do everything that is possible to help them. Now how can I be of use to you—I who only know how to amuse myself with painting trees and streams? They must be assured food and shelter, and they'll need money. Here! You see that little bureau? Do you mind going to the first drawer? Good! Now take out what you think necessary, and I beg you not to use too much discretion. My back is turned, and I won't look. You can't think how glad I am to be allowed to share in your kind efforts on their behalf."

Obeying these directions, the visitor opened the drawer and paused thunderstruck, for it was full of gold and bills, tossed in helter skelter as the artist had received them. With some embarrassment, while Corot worked away busily at his easel, the visitor helped himself to as large a sum as his conscience permitted him to take, murmured his thanks and departed. Corot never inquired what he had taken or looked to see, although, indeed, he would not have known if he had.

A Hidden Pocket

A man who bought a new suit of clothes the other day at one of the establishments that sells a large quantity of ready made clothing discovered that the trousers of the suit contained an extra pocket, which aroused his curiosity. It was small, about the size of a watch pocket, and opened on the inside of the right hand trousers pocket, making it invisible as far as outward appearance went. At the top of the little pocket there was stiff material, which kept it closed, so that on putting one's hand in the large pocket the little one would not be found unless its presence was known.

"Something new, isn't it?" the customer asked the salesman.

"Yes; that's come into style since the war created a shortage of loose change," was the reply. "A person making a hurried search through the pockets for pin money may be lucky, but all when the owner of the suit uses this pocket—unless she hears some thing jingle. Best plan is to wrap your change up in a dollar bill."

The customer paid for the suit and left orders for the clothes to be delivered to him at a bachelor apartment house uptown.—New York Times.

"And what are your favorite dreams?" asked the bosom friend.

Buds in Reserve.

When a large branch of a tree is cut off small branches will frequently shoot out round the stump. These branches are from reserve buds, of which all trees have a great number at every portion of their surface. Under ordinary circumstances these never come to maturity, but when the tree is wounded or cut off or loses some of its branches the reserve buds at once come into play and renew the foliage.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

Matt left not only without a job but with the consciousness of an active ill will behind him. He was disquieted, too, to learn that in spite of his reiterated denials he was regarded as a rich man, and, if not actually a Kanaka king, had the reputation of owning vast and far away estates in the south Pacific. Mr. Wackles had been shocked—really shocked—and bitterly offended, too, at the truth. He would have parted easily with $1,000 to a swindler, but for the honest man in dire need of work he had nothing save a curt good day.

In Anderson's office Matt experienced a similar social tumble and a similar rejection. The engineer was at first incredulous and then downright rude, for he also had a shattered illusion. As Matt left, flushed with anger and in Anderson's eyes a convicted cheat, he perceived that he had a better chance with strangers than with those he deemed his friends. The telephone superintendent, to whom he applied next, had no acquaintance with him, and in consequence was quite civil. Courtesy was about all he had to offer, for the company was "full up" and had "men to burn." With this forceful colloquialism Matt was speeded on his way again to try for a spot where the fires of commerce burned less brightly.

Of course he could have gone to Daggancourt, but at that his pride drew the line. The old mulatto, considering himself deeply ill used, had shrunk into his shell and adopted a pose of frozen reproach. He had even ceased to greet Matt any longer, pretending to look the other way when they met or assuming an abstracted expression in which there was not the slightest glint of recognition.

CHAPTER XI.

Discharged.

HE sought out Mr. Doty instead—little, flattered, easy Mr. Doty, who certainly must have concealed angels' wings under his threadbare coat. Mr. Doty was sympathetic; Mr. Doty understood. In Matt's case nothing could be simpler; the sea for the sailor, of course, and they would go right off to his good friend, Captain Jim Bain, who owned half the coasting craft out of——Oh, but Matt wished to stay in Manaswan! Oh, the old story—I see, I see—a young lady, and all the rest of it! Well, well, well! Let Mr. Doty think, let Mr. Doty think!

Half an hour afterward Matt was formally engaged as physical instructor to the Young Men's Christian association at a salary of $60 a month. Unlike its sisters elsewhere, the Manaswan Y. M. C. A. was poorly supported, either by the moneyed people of the town or the horde of illiterate foreigners whom it was intended to uplift.

Mr. Cummins, the superintendent, a very low voiced young man with eye glasses, laid less stress on Matt's capabilities as a physical instructor than whether he would be prepared to "help out." That had been the trouble with the previous instructors—they wouldn't "help out." Would Matt help out cheerfully? Matt promptly replied that he would, and smiling broadly to prove it, inquired for a more precise definition of helping out.

This, it seemed, included washing the gymnasium windows, scrubbing the gymnasium floor, drying the bathing suits, cleansing the swimming tank, checking the towels, doing whatever painting or varnishing was required in the building, oiling and cleaning a dozen typewriter machines, and volunteering—cheerfully—for any further services that might be needed.

Matt's answers were so satisfactory that he soon found himself on the roof, in a suit of borrowed overalls, assisting a deaf and dumb Swede in reshingling it. In this work and others he passed the day, and in the evening he taught in the gymnasium.

By 10 the gymnasium was clear, and he was free to return home, the tiredest man in Manaswan, and the happiest. He had got a job; he had already won praise; he foresaw promotion and Chris! He sat down and scratched off a glad little note; the good news was too big to keep; Chris should learn by the morning's mail that he had been unexpectedly—gloriously—successful.

At breakfast there was one from her which he tore open and read with a sickening, deadly disappointment. It ran:

> Dearest—It did not seem right not to tell papa, and now all that is left of me is a poor, limp little coward in the blackest disgrace. It was worse than his being cross—I could have stood that—but he took it dreadfully, more than I can ever bring myself to tell you. I have promised not to see you for three whole months and not to write to you again except this, and I promised for you, too, to do the same. Please, please don't blame me too much or reproach me. I had no choice—really I had not—and even the three months was a tremendous concession. He insisted I would forget you in three months, and it seemed wiser to take it as a sort of challenge, specially when he said I would be grateful to him all the days of my life. I must just show him that three months won't make the least, tiny difference—and then say, papa, I can't help it, but I love him more than ever. My darling, I will, I will, I will. And do not doubt it or my heart will break. He has a right to know that it is serious, hasn't he? That's what he said over and over again till I gave way.
>
> I am determined not to wait a minute longer than that, papa or no papa, and what you must do is to work hard and be able to support us when the time comes. I have to take your answer for granted, as I solemnly promised you would not write to me. Please don't, my darling, for otherwise you will add to my disgrace and make papa think I have no influence with you.
>
> We're going to Washington today, so that I may be "distracted." I shall be that in all truth, but not in papa's sense, and with a heart like lead at leaving you. Don't blame me too much, for I love him too, you know, better than anything in the world except you. Try not to feel too badly, and remember I shall be thinking of you every minute of the time. I dread to stop, as I have said everything so badly, but it is not the you I love if you do not understand. You will, won't you? And love me better than ever, and don't forget that I will come. CHRIS.

Matt reread the letter many times and his first sensation of utter abandonment imperceptibly altered to a more sanguine view. They were both saved at least the shame of a clandestine affair, with its unavoidable and mortifying discovery. Better to tell the general than to let him find out. Chris had been right there—bravely right. Three months would give Matt time to solidify his position in the Y. M. C. A. and apply leverage to that $60 a month. The world that loved a lover surely included Mr. Cummins. Besides, a helping out, cheerful instructor would soon be worth that extra $15.

The days that followed in the Y. M. C. A. were like the first, and by degrees the world contracted till it consisted of nothing but the Y. M. C. A. at one end and Mrs. Sattane's at the other, with a mile of streets between. Yet Matt was not unhappy. You need leisure to be unhappy, and he was sustained, moreover, by a determination to succeed. That he was doing so was indubitable, and Mr. Cummins was friendliness itself.

Altogether, the new instructor had good reason to be satisfied and might look forward to a raise in salary as something he had well earned. He would not overreach himself, however, by asking for it prematurely. He was too wary for that and was playing for too big a stake. With only three weeks gone from the three months he felt he had no time to spare.

One morning Mr. Cummins called him into the office and, fidgeting with some papers in his hand, regarded Matt with considerable embarrassment.

"I'm afraid I have bad news for you," he said in his very low voice. "I have been told to let you go."

"Discharge me?" exclaimed Matt, unable to believe his ears. "You don't mean that I am—fired?"

Mr. Cummins nodded, with an expression almost as woebegone as Matt's. "It's none of my doing, Broughton," he explained. "You are the best man I have ever had in that department, and it came like a thunderclap to me. It's worse than unjust, and I said so flat out. But orders are orders, and I am only the paid superintendent under the board."

"But what do they complain of?"

Mr. Cummins hesitated.

"The funny thing is that I don't know," he replied at last. "I couldn't get a reason out of one of them. But somehow they are prejudiced against you—have instructed me to dismiss you at once. Your only means of getting back at them is to demand a full month's salary, and if I were you I would do it and sue them if they refuse."

Matt's lip curled. "Give me what I have earned," he said. "To take more would be like robbing the poor box. If I'm out, I'm out, and that's the end of it."

"A very Christian way to take it, Broughton—a very Christian and praiseworthy way to take it. Get your things, and Mr. Phelps will settle with you at the desk."

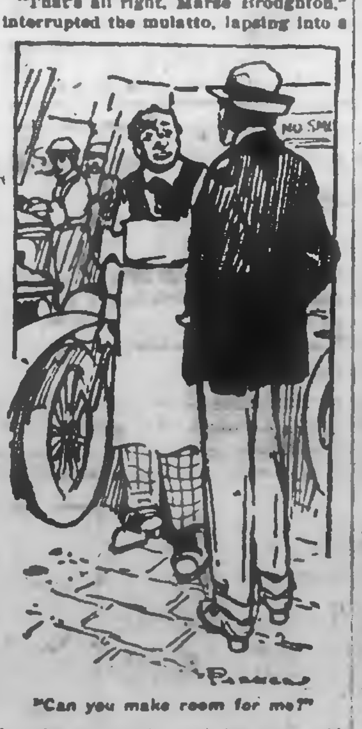
Matt left the building with a check for $47 and within his breast a heavy and anxious heart. The world was before him again and that $75 was farther away than ever.

Forlorn and discouraged, Matt sought out the only man in Manaswan that he could rely on. He needed more than a job; he needed a friend, and where else was he more likely to find one than in Victor's garage?

Daggancourt was working over a car, and it was not until he had been nudged by a helper that he straightened himself and recognized Matt. He tried to look unconcerned, but there was a telltale quiver of the cheek and a startled, constrained air about him which showed his agitation. He grasped Matt's extended hand in both his own and bent his gray old head to hide his emotion.

"We've both been fools, Victor," said Matt. "I was ashamed to tell you that they had stolen my money—yes, got clean away with it in San Francisco—and then you took it all wrong and froze up like a silly old iceberg. I wasn't very considerate, I'll admit, and I'm sorry, and"—

"That's all right, Marse Broughton," interrupted the mulatto, lapsing into a broader accent than was his wont. "A gentleman can't say more than he's sorry, and God knows you have made me mighty glad and thankful. I didn't understand, that's all—I didn't understand."



"Can you make room for me?"

"I'm pretty hard pushed, Victor. Can you find me anything here?"

"Find you anything here, sir?"

"Yes, a job. It needn't be anything much to begin with. Let me wash cars—anything."

"Is it as bad as that, Marse Broughton?"

Daggancourt was shocked, and slowly took in Matt's shabby appearance and his tanned, careworn face. "Well, if that doesn't break me all up to hear you say that."

"Can you make room for me?"

The mulatto reflected.

"It isn't much of a business," he said, indicating the garage. "It don't pay like mules—but if you care to come in as a partner, you can have half of what there is."

"But I haven't a cent, Victor. I didn't mean anything like that. I want a job—$2 a day, perhaps."

"I didn't expect any money, Marse' Broughton. You misjudge me when you say that. They call me a cranky old n'gger, and it may be I am, but I am most awful cranky in liking you—and if you are willing, sure I am."

The generosity of the offer overcame Matt, but he could not bring himself to take advantage of it. The garage, small as it was, represented the savings of years; and to appropriate half and give nothing but his unskilled services in return was simply impossible. It was finally arranged, however, that he was to be engaged at $75 a month as "demonstrator" of the Jonesmobile, with a percentage on all sales he might make.

Victor had recently acquired the agency for this vehicle. Matt's instructions began at once, and very delightful and inspiring it was, too, as he hung over Daggancourt, elucidating mysteries, and asking a pupil's innumerable questions. Occasionally cars ran in that required gasoline or water, or a small adjustment, or a tire changed—and then Matt bestirred himself to be useful, if only it were to pump till he was crimson, or hand tools to Mack and Loney, Daggancourt's workmen.

CHAPTER XII.

A Mysterious Enemy.

WITH his $75 assured, an interesting occupation before him and a partnership whenever he chose to take it, he felt that all his troubles were over and that his foot at last was on the ladder of independence. He was in a glow of contentment and good will.

It was sad, indeed, when it came to an end. One evening after supper Daggancourt took Matt to one side and with profound depression said that it was "all up."

"It came like a bombshell," he quavered. "You know, I started the business on nothing four years ago and borrowed $2,500 of Farley, the money lender. Now today he comes up to me and says, old Farelly does, out of a clear sky and without the least warning, just as he was writing the receipt in my office with a fountain pen, 'I have to call in that $2,500, Victor, and will ask you to make an immediate settlement.' I said: 'Marse Farelly, that isn't fair. As God sees us, that isn't fair, and I could no more do it than I could fly.' Then he flubbles with his fountain pen and sticks it back most careful in his vest pocket and says, 'Then you'll have to get out.'"

"And didn't he make any explanation?"

Matt's attention was disturbed by a thought that grew and grew more insistent as the mulatto poured out the tale of Farelly's amazing perfidy. He remembered his singular dismissal from the Y. M. C. A. and, incredible as it might seem, asked himself whether there was not some connection between it and this unexpected catastrophe and whether behind both there was not somehow or other a mysterious connection with Mr. Kay.

"He didn't give me as much as a pinhole to crawl through," Daggancourt continued explosively, "not a week's grace—nothing."

"I believe I can get you out of this," said Matt. "It may be crazy, but let's try it. Here, I'll write it on the back of an envelope."

Victor was astounded; his face, as withered as old leather, screwed itself up into a thousand wrinkles. "Try what?" he demanded.

"You sit down and copy this off and have it in his letter box inside of an hour:

> "Dear Mr. Farelly—Looking back on our interview, I fear I was not in a state best to explain the prosperous condition of the garage or how really unwise it would be in your own interests to terminate my connection with it. The fact was that I was very much upset by another matter—a row I had had with my demonstrator shortly before you came in. This fellow Broughton acted abominably, and I had to threaten him with a constable before he would go, and afterward he came back again and tried to clean out the shop with a piece of lead pipe. Excuse me for bothering you with all this, but I am sure that if you will let me bring you the books and show you how well the garage is going you will reconsider your wish to call in the note. Our agency prospects are very bright, and the sale of two Jonesmobiles in eighteen days speaks for itself. I feel positive I can satisfy you in regard to everything if you will only be so very kind as to let me come and go over the figures. Respectfully yours,
>
> "VICTOR DAGGANCOURT."

"And I'm to write him that?" asked the mulatto. "Sakes alive, Marse Broughton, what in the name of goodness do you want me to do that for?"

"Because I think I know what's the matter with Mr. Farelly. I may be wrong, but I believe the whole scheme is simply to get me out of my job. That's why I put in the lead pipe and all that—and mind you, stick to it, Victor, for all you're worth."

"But why should Farelly do that? Excuse me, Marse Broughton, but you are all off. I might as well send him a picture post card of the Masonic building as this here letter."

"Victor, it's like this: I have got hold of a little piece of a big secret—something extraordinary, inexplicable, involving the best friend I have in the world, and I am on my honor to him to keep my mouth shut. If it wasn't for that promise I'd tell you everything. You get that letter off to Farelly as quick as you can."

Jean Webster's Book to Improve the Lot of "Orphant Annie."

MISS JEAN WEBSTER.

A book with a purpose is Miss Jean Webster's charming story, "Daddy Longlegs." Since it was published it has gone into many editions. The tale has been put on the stage in a play that is one of the successes of the season. Daddy Longlegs may do as much for the lonely little orphan child of the public institution as Oliver Twist did for English workhouse children.

The book has aroused public interest in the lot of the lonely and homeless children of the asylums, and many well to do people, inspired by the example of the Daddy Longlegs of the story, have come forward to adopt or bear the burden of expense of educating one or more orphans. It is said a wealthy New York bachelor has thus adopted forty children. The New York State Charities Aid society found so many requests for orphans for adoption coming in after the publication of the book that they appointed a special committee to look after the applications. Miss Vida Mary Clark, a warm hearted woman with experience in children's work, was appointed to take charge of the work.

Miss Webster, the author of the book, is a Vassar graduate, and college girls have been particularly taken with the Daddy Longlegs idea. In fact, playing fairy godmother to an orphan child has assumed the proportions of a fad, and, thanks to Miss Webster, the lot of little "Orphant Annie" is likely to be made a happy one.

Miss Webster is a grandniece of Mark Twain and has the sense of humor which seems to be a family gift. She has always been interested in philanthropic work and has written a number of books, most of them dealing with college girl life. She has lived in Italy for a number of years, but now resides in New York city.

"I'm going to make a speech that will make my friends sit up."

"You're on the wrong track," replied the experienced campaigner. "See if you can't make one that will cause the other fellows to lie down."—Washington Star.

ISOLATED ISLANDS.

Lonely Tristan da Cunha Gets Outside News Once In Two Years.

Though scientific progress has made it possible to do a double journey between England and America in a fortnight, there remain many islands with which it takes years to communicate.

Off the Scottish coast are the groups of islands known as the Hebrides, Orkneys and Shetlands. Of these the most isolated island is St. Kilda, some three miles long and two miles broad. The inhabitants lead lives of great loneliness, for it takes a month to get to the next island, and the sea often makes any communication with St. Kilda impossible for months.

The group of eight Phoenix islands in the Pacific has a total population of only 158, while another little bit of the British empire is Fanning island. This is a landing place for the Pacific submarine cable, and usually there are about 100 people in the place.

The loneliest of all parts of British territory is the island of Tristan da Cunha, in the south Atlantic, which is also the smallest inhabited island in the empire. It is 1,800 miles from land, has a population of seventy-four Scottish Americans, and the inhabitants get news of the outer world usually once every two years.—London Stray Stories.

Tetanus Germs In Earth.

LILLE, France, Feb. 8. — (Via London.)—The German army surgeons have held a conference here relative to tetanus which has become very prevalent among the German wounded. Papers were read to show that the earth in this region is infected with the tetanus germ, like upper Alsace, and that even the slightest contact of wounds with the earth is dangerous.

COMBATING FRAZIL ICE

the current over the dam and down the stream. As many as two hundred and fifty teams are used at this work at different times during the winter.

Lachine Power House.

This is situated on the St. Lawrence above Montreal, and there is a long forebay leading to the wheels, with frequent sluice-ways to draw off the ice. In this plant there are about forty wheels coupled up five on a shaft, and they have never been all shut down at once. The racks are not covered in any way, and they do not use steam in the wheels.

At this power house when the ice starts to run badly, they take out the racks in front of some of the sets of wheels and so are able to pass through large quantities of the frazil. This of course is dangerous as some obstruction might be drawn into the wheel and damage it severely. However as they have so many wheels they think it worth while to take the chance, and have had surprisingly few wheels damaged

They have also stretched booms across the forebay at the sluice-ways so as to deflect the floating ice into the main channel of the river. These booms also catch the frazil and give it a chance to freeze on the surface, thus forming a protective coating.

The superintendent in charge of the Chambly and Lachine power houses says that the best help in getting rid of the frazil, is the fact that the main flow of the river on which they are situated is practically untouched. The wheels take only a small portion of the flow of the river, and as the headgates of the forebays are parallel with the current, the ice is drawn on down the stream.

Cedar Rapids.

This is situated on the St. Lawrence, where eventually, 150,000 h.p. will be developed. At present they are developing only 90,000 h.p.

The installation is a similar one to that of the Lachine power house, and consists of a long forebay leading to the wheels, and which has sluiceways to run off the floating ice. The upstream end of the forebay is quite wide, and as the velocity is very low at this point it soon freezes over and prevents the formation of frazil. The racks are closed in part of the power house itself but are not heated in any other way. The front wall of the power house is about 20 feet in front of the racks and extends down into the water so as to intercept floating ice and debris.

This plant has been running for a few months only, and as yet have had no troubles from frazil. They have no special appliances for fighting it but rely on the rush of the main river past their headgates to carry the ice down the stream.

Montreal Water and Power Company.

This firm supplies Westmount and part of Montreal with water. They do all their pumping with electric and steam turbine driven pumps. They are installing a mechanical filtration plant, and the visit was profitable although not bearing on the ice question.

At Ottawa the plants visited were the E. B. Eddy Company, J. R. Booth Company, Ottawa and Hull Electric Company, Ottawa Electric Company, Ottawa Electric Railway Company, Ottawa Waterworks, and Hull Water works.

E. B. Eddy Company.

At this plant they have gone to considerable expense and have roofed over the forebay for quite a distance in front of the wheels. Waste steam from the dryers is turned in under this in large quantities, and this passes through the racks on the way to the openings in front of the forebay.

No steam is used in the wheels the claim being made that the steam under the roof of the forebay warms up the water so that no ice will clog either the wheels or the racks.

Ottawa and Hull Electric Company.

This plant immediately adjoins that of the Eddy Company. They have five units, three of which are old wheels with the Murphy system adapted to them, and the other two were built with the Murphy system as a part of the design of the wheel. In the new power house which they are building adjacent to their present one, all four units will have the Murphy system installed, being specially built for it, with the wickets cored out for the passage of the steam. Mr. Wm. Kennedy, Jr., is the consulting hydraulic engineer for this plant as well as their former one.

The racks here are not protected in any way, and for raking the ice off electrical power rakes are used. These appear to be very efficient.

There was a good opportunity of observing the different methods of ice prevention at these two plants on the morning of January 22nd, when each had trouble with frazil.

At the Ottawa and Hull Electric Company's plant they had two men using the power rakes and they were able to keep the racks clear. They did not have to use the steam in the wheels, as the latter did not plug up at all.

At the Eddy Company's plant they had trouble at just the same time, their racks starting to freeze up. To get at the racks they had to lift up the trapdoors that cover the openings over them, and when they did so the hot steam rushed through in such quantities that the men could not work with any efficiency. There had been no by-pass provided in the steam pipe leading to the forebay, so that the steam could not be turned aside.

The load sheets at the Ottawa and Hull Electric Company's plant indicated that they did not have to take off any of their load during the trouble, but I was informed that the Eddy Company had to shut down part of their pulp mill, which is the larger portion of their load.

J. R. Booth Company.

This plant has a covered forebay, much longer than that of the Eddy Company. Their racks are covered, but they do not use steam under the cover. They have very little trouble with frazil.

Ottawa Electric Company, and Ottawa Electric Railway Company.

These two plants are under the supervision of Mr. W. H. Baldwin, who has been in charge of them for over twenty-five years. It was at these plants that Mr. Murphy did his experimenting, and Mr. Baldwin assisted him in most of his experiments.

The latter plant has the Murphy system installed in the wheels while the former is without it. As far as I could learn there was not much difference in the amount of trouble each had. As they were side by side the conditions are identical.

Mr. Baldwin says that they never use steam in the wheels until they get frozen up, when it assists in freeing them. He pins his faith to power driven racks to keep his racks clear. These are similar in design to those of the Ottawa and Hull Electric Company's.

These companies have installed three steam turbine driven generators, and they are independent of the waterpower.

Ottawa Waterworks.

This plant has no protection for its racks and do not use steam in the wheels. They take the water for the wheels and pumps from a covered aqueduct about a half-mile long, fed from a large bay in the bank of the Ottawa above the Chaudiere Falls, so that they do not have much trouble from frazil.

Hull Waterworks.

At this plant the Murphy system is installed in the wheels, but the man in charge said they didn't use it very much. The forebay is deep and quiet and soon freezes over, and as they draw the water from the river above the falls they escape the frazil that forms there. The racks are not protected in any way

While in Ottawa I had a talk with Mr. Murphy about his system, and he gave me some particulars about it, which are practically the same as in his address to the McGill Engineering Society, of which you have a copy. He was quite sure that the installation of his devices would absolutely prevent any shut downs from frazil.

When visiting the various plants I endeavored in every case to talk with the man in actual charge of the wheels, and to get his opinion of the various devices used to combat the troubles.

The men in charge of the plants where the Murphy system was installed were of the opinion that it was useless when any large amount of the frazil was running, and that it was only of use after the wheels were clogged up, in removing the ice that had collected. These men said that the most efficient device was the large power rake, as with this they were able to keep the racks clear, and cut up the frazil so that it would pass through the wheels.

There is not sufficient flow in the Otonabee to adopt the plan used on the St. Lawrence and other large rivers, where the various power houses use only a small proportion of the stream, and where the frazil is carried past the intake by the main flow.

On account of its expense we cannot adopt the plan of the E. B. Eddy Company, nor are we absolutely sure in view of the facts reported above that it is entirely efficient. The Eddy plant has been running only about a year and one cannot judge intelligently of the results of any scheme without at least five years of observations.

In view of the experiences of these men with whom I have talked I am of the opinion that to get absolute continuity of power under all circumstances it will be necessary to install some kind of auxiliary steam or other power driven pumps.

Yours respectfully,
R. L. DOBBIN,
Waterworks Superintendent.

STOLEN FURS ARE FOUND

Detectives Traced Them to Pawn Shops

WINNIPEG, Feb. 8. — The discovery of a large assortment of valuable furs in Minneapolis, valued at about $10,000, stolen at various times and in unexplained ways, from Winnipeg fur dealers, is expected to lead to important developments. It is believed here the furs were stolen and smuggled across the border as part of a scheme of operations of a gang of international crooks, who have been working at various points on the boundary line. Through the work of a private detective agency the furs were traced to pawn shops in New York, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and other cities, but the greater portion of the loot has been recovered in Minneapolis.

DETAILS OF STRUGGLE IN POLAND ARE MEAGRE

Russians Have Strengthened Their Positions on the West Bank of the Bzura and Have Captured Several Trenches at Borjimov—Big Battle is Now Developing in East Prussia—Monarchs at Front.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—With the German and Russian Emperors as eye witnesses, the armies of Russia and Germany are still contending for the positions which protect the Polish capital of Warsaw from invaders. The Russian Emperor has been at Russian headquarters for several days and the German report announces that the German Emperor has joined his generals and has actually visited some of the troops in the trenches.

Nothing has been disclosed as to the progress of battle which when the last reports were received, was raging with unabated fury. The Russians, according to Saturday's official statement, had strengthened their positions on the western bank of the Bzura river, which they had crossed near its mouth, and captured another German vantage point. They also captured a long line of German trenches near Borjimow, which has been the centre of most desperate fighting.

In East Prussia another big battle is developing, the Germans having sent reinforcements apparently from their Bzura front to that region. In the Carpathians, while their right is advancing, the Russians are only able to report that their left has checked the Austro-German offensive. In this area they captured 2,000 prisoners.

A despatch from Petrograd says: "The Russians are now fighting along all their battlefronts in Europe to the extent of 700 miles. The Germans are taking full advantage of the numerable strategic railways to move large bodies of troops rapidly from place to place. The Russians are unprovided with much rapid means of communication, and must be ready at all points, for the Germans are hammering at every link of the line along this 700 miles. It is believed here that the main battle is preparing in the Carpathians, and fighting elsewhere is on. Part of the German plan is rather in the nature of a demonstration than a real attack. The weak link in the Russian defence has still to be found. Over the greater part of the front, the Russians continue to accept these attacks with equanimity, devoting themselves to the task of killing as large a number of the enemy as possible, this being a necessary condition of successful future operations against the enemy so perfectly prepared for war as are the Germans. Already the Germans are proving less formidable than hitherto. Their artillery is showing signs of over-use. Heavy shells in particular very often fail to explode. The best regiments now number several score of half trained men per company, who are beyond the best fighting ages, and the second line of troops is still more inferior.

"I hear the Russians have in use a new form of shield which proves invaluable when circumstances admit its being employed. It is light, hard steel, strong enough to stop rifle and maxim bullets. It covers six men abreast, runs on wheels and is pierced for rifle fire. It is superior to the German shield. German armored motors are also outclassed by those in use by the Russians. The German moving forts weigh ten tons and have a fatal defect in the Polish roads in their present condition, whereas the Russians motor weighs only two tons. The inventiveness of the Russians is shown also in wire entanglements. All carry instruments to cut wire, but the Russians now make entanglements in which poles twenty feet long are combined with wire to make the barrier impregnable unless the enemy is provided with an axe as well as wire cutters. These and many other ready-witted devices party account for the admirable Russian defence."

LOST EIGHT DESTROYERS

German Naval Losses Greater Than Officials Admit

LONDON, Feb. 8. — A Chronicle correspondent near the German frontier sends the following despatch:

"I learn that besides the published German naval losses there are eight destroyers and two submarines written off in the official lists. Two of the destroyers were lost in the channel on Sept. 4, three on the Dogger Bank, and another, the S-190, in Asiatic waters. One of the submarines sank off Westende and one near the Dogger Bank. Two others have been missing for over three weeks. The armed auxiliary cruiser Kronprinzessin Cecilie is also scratched off the official table.

"The statement made by German bluejackets captured after the Heligoland naval battle of Jan. 24, that the light cruiser Kolberg sank is confirmed, though not publicly admitted in German naval circles. The armored cruiser Friederich Karl sank after striking a German mine in the Baltic on Nov. 18. It is known that this vessel has gone to the bottom, but the manner of its loss has never been definitely announced."

The Red Cross authorities and the English are negotiating for the use of the hotels at the Swis winter resorts by convalescent British officers.

GARDEN OF EDEN

Rev. R. G. Peever Deals With First Chapter of Genesis

The Garden of Eden, where it is and what it teaches, was the theme of Rev. R. G. Peever's sermon last evening in George Street Church. Students and historians, he said, were uncertain of its location but were of the opinion that it lay in either the valley of the Euphrates or the valley of the Nile, but geographically or historically no man knew.

Rev. Mr. Peever said the first chapter of Genesis was a story presentation of the great fundamentals of the universe of man and sin. They were intended simply to convey moral truths and moral revelation.

"Go back to the first chapter of Genesis and you have the tragedy of life and go into your own life and you have the same tragedy today. God and man and the devil are the three persons concerned in the tragedy of life. The Garden of Eden was within every one and the tragedy of life was being enacted daily.

At both services the pastor announced that the fortieth anniversary of George Street Church would be held next Sunday and Monday.

STATEMENT OF FINANCES READ

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien was present at the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday and read the financial statement of that parish. When the church was opened some five years ago the total debt amounted to some $80,000 and the debt at the present time is in the neighborhood of $14,000. His Lordship paid great tribute to his former parishioners, remarking on their earnest and hearty co-operation with their capable pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, in all his undertakings.

OSHKIGMONG

Oshkigmong, Feb. 8. — The first annual tea and concert under the auspices of the Chemong Brass Band was a great success. A large number who came to participate were unable to obtain admittance owing to the big crowd which had already filled the concert room. Those who could not secure entrance to the concert, repaired to one of the compartments of the hall and indulged themselves in dancing while the concert was going on above. The program which was lengthy was well executed and the chair was efficiently filled by Mr. Fred McKee, reeve of Smith. Among those who took part in the program was Mr. Armstrong of Oak Orchard. The entertainment was well patronized by the people from far and near. Among the places represented were Lindsay, Lakefield, Bridgenorth, Buckhorn and Peterborough, Emily, Smith, Harvey and Ennismore townships, Hiawatha and Alderville.

The hockey match between Chemong and Buckhorn resulted in a tie.

Last Sunday Messrs. George Stenson and Robert Sutherland of Peterborough were here and preached in the afternoon and evening.

HOW BRITISH CLEAR TRENCHES OF THE ENEMY

Eye-witness Tells of Trench Warfare on Western Front

HAND GRENADES USED

LONDON, Feb. 8.—A graphic description of the trench warfares which has prevailed on the western front for many weeks, is given by the British "eye-witness" in his description of German attacks on British lines and British counter-attacks which were made last Monday. He says:

"The Germans again attacked south of La Bassee canal, but not in such strength as on previous occasions. Fighting began in the early hours of the morning with an assault on a small trench close to the canal. This was successful, two local counter-attacks carried out by us failing to regain the ground lost.

"When daylight came, however, our artillery opened such an accurate fire on the enemy, that their position became untenable. A stronger counter-attack then was delivered and our men, rushing forward, not only drove the Germans from the trench they had captured, but seized another post on the enemy's side of it on an embankment of the canal. There were a succession of German posts on this embankment, and we had established ourselves in one of them.

"Our supports then came up and passing through our firing line holding the first of the enemy's posts, rushed on to the second driving out the garrison at the point of the bayonet. Thence our men were enabled to take in the flank of one of the enemy's trenches to the south. Along this they fought their way, throwing hand grenades until they had dislodged the Germans on a considerable length. We thus established ourselves firmly in an advantageous position on the canal bank and in adjoining trenches. During this action we captured 14 prisoners, many wounded and two machine guns. Our losses were not severe but the enemy suffered heavily especially from our artillery fire."

Canadian Rear-Admiral Promoted.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8.—Rear-Admiral Kingsmill, of the Canadian navy, has been promoted to vice-admiral.

Vice-Admiral Charles Edmund Kingsmill was born at Guelph, Ont., July 7, 1855, and married a daughter of Walter Beardmore, Toronto. He served in the royal navy till 1908, when he accepted command of the marine service of Canada, and retired from the active list in order to retain the appointment. He resides in Ottawa. Admiral Kingsmill holds the Egyptian medal, bronze star, and is an officer of the French Legion of Honor.

Imprisoned In Ruins 25 Days.

ROME, Feb. 8.—Red Cross workers in the earthquake ruins at Paterno yesterday heard faint moans, and on delving into the debris excavated a man named Cairolo, who had been imprisoned there for 25 days. The man, who is 33 years old, had had nothing, but some water during this time. He was uninjured, and when taken to the nearest town was able to alight from the conveyance without assistance.

Ottawa, Feb. 8.—H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, Governor-in-General, will go to Winnipeg on the 15th to inspect the troops there. His Royal Highness will probably stay there a few days, but will not go farther West.

YOUNG GIRL WITH FLASK OF LIQUOR

(Port Hope Guide.)

A couple of nights ago a number of citizens were shocked at the actions of a young girl, who should have been at home instead of wandering the streets almost nightly with strangers. To make a long story short, it appears that the young feminine in question purchased a flask of liquor in the afternoon, visited a nickel show in the evening in company with a gentleman friend, took ill apparently as the result of indulging in the liquid refreshments, and finally became stubborn.

Friends endeavored to coax her to go home, but she refused, and finally had to be almost carried by a couple of friends. Her sad plight was shocking. Lindsay Warder. Seeing this young lady comes from Lindsay she might "protest" against the spanking.

A Submarine Episode

By F. A. MITCHEL

There was a time when warfare, its appurtenances, its novelties, indeed, everything pertaining to it, was public property. The Japanese changed all that, making everything secret. Since the Russo-Japanese fight the war correspondent has had a hard time of it, and many officers are pledged not to reveal what occurs in the line of their duty. When I was assigned to the command of a submarine I was obliged to make pledges that prevent my giving certain points connected with this story.

Before I was ordered to attempt to blow up an enemy's ship I was given time to get used to my submarine. This did not take long, though at first I confess sinking down under water made me creep a bit. When I had had a couple of weeks of it I was ordered on several attempts that were all failures. The difficulty in handling a submarine is that when beneath the surface you can't see anything and when above it, if you are near an enemy's ship, you are liable to get knocked out by a shot.

I was ordered one afternoon to go for a cruiser. The time I chose was between daylight and dark, my object being to steal upon her to within a few hundred yards, get my bearings, duck, lessen the distance between me and her and fire my torpedo.

The weather favored the attempt, it being a murky evening, with just enough light for me to see a big ship and not enough for her to see all of my boat there was above water—the periscope. I gave the order to lower the horizontal rudder, and we went down, intending to make a curve I had figured out, coming up near the cruiser amidships. Everything looked well for success, and, having completed the first half of the arc, I gave the order for a gradual elevation of the rudder.

What was my horror to find that my boat did not obey it! I knew at once that my attempt would be a failure, and I knew furthermore that I, my crew and the submarine were in danger of going to the bottom and staying there. Unfortunately when I gave the order to stop her, to keep from going any lower, the engineer lost his head and, turning the wrong handle, put on power instead of taking it off. This gave us so much momentum that before we could take any measures to right our direction we were scraping bottom.

There was nothing for it but to let the water out of the tanks in order to rise straight up to the surface. What I feared occurred. We were under so much pressure that the pump was not able to overcome it. This indicated another danger—if the pumps could not overcome the outside pressure we would not be able to lift the cap of the periscope, which in case we couldn't get the boat to the surface meant that we would not be able to escape through the conning tower.

I sprang to the hand pump. I didn't need to give an order to the crew, for they knew as well as I that this was our only hope, and a very thin hope, because it was hardly to be expected that we could do what a mechanical force could not do. Knowing that our lives depended upon our success, we worked with that superhuman power that is given to man when some great object is to be achieved.

All in vain we worked till we found that our efforts were growing less; then one after another in quick succession abandoned the effort.

Not a man of us but saw certain death ahead. We could not make the rudder work, and neither of the pumps was sufficiently powerful to expel the water from the tanks. The most fearful part of it was that we must die a lingering death.

Our chief thought was of those we would leave behind us, and, thinking that the boat might eventually be recovered, some of the men set about writing letters to leave in her, bidding loved ones goodby and telling them of our last moments in the flesh. I, knowing that it would be some time before death would come to us, thought only of a possible means of escape. The only hope was that when it became evident that we had sunk and could not rise an effort would be made to save us. But how could wreckers work within a few hundred feet of an enemy's guns?

Suddenly a thought struck me. Desiring to have as much depth room as possible, I had consulted the almanac and found that the floodtide corresponded with the hour of approaching darkness. We had gone under at high tide, the difference between flood and ebb being sixteen feet. In other words, we had sixteen feet more of water pressure on us than we would have at the ebb. I electrified the crew by telling them the situation. Here was a hope. If our engine could empty the tanks at low tide we would be saved.

That was a long six hours. In four hours we made a trial, but without success. In five hours we tried again. There seemed to be occasional rises of, say, a foot or two. In another half hour we tried it again and could feel ourselves rising, but very slowly. However, as the pressure above lessened we went up more rapidly till we reached the surface.

Shall I ever forget that first sight of the upper world?

Two days later I tried again and blew up the cruiser and 400 men.

THE COMING OF THE KING

Rev. R. Pogue Quotes From Sermon by Rev. R. J. Campbell

FATHER TYRELL'S BOOK

In the course of his sermon yesterday morning in St. Paul's Church on the Second Coming of Christ, the Rev. R. Pogue said as follows:

"The celebrated Dutch theologian, Van Oosterzee, in his celebrated Christian Dogmatics, where he treats of the doctrine of the Second Coming of Christ, makes this remark: 'The term, millennial kingdom, has in many an ear so unpleasant a sound that, even from the believing standpoint, some courage is required to range oneself among the defenders of Chiliasm.' He wrote his treatise in the year 1870. If it required courage to range oneself among the defenders of the pre-millennial coming of Christ, then much more is courage required today. And that for two reasons. First, the doctrine has come into disrepute among intelligent Christians because of the vagaries of interpretation which have been associated with it. It is not that it has not had able and scholarly defenders in every age of the Church. But the frequent attempt to set dates has brought the truth into discredit and has resulted in the antagonism of some and the indifference of many, to the whole subject. Then, secondly, the new view which is taken of the whole subject of prophecy by the modern school of interpretation renders a measure of courage necessary to defend the doctrine of the imminency of Christ's second advent. That view holds that there is no such thing as predictive prophecy. The religion of Israel was largely, if not altogether, an evolution. They attained to the knowledge of God which they possessed because they had, as one says, 'a genius for religion.' We are told the advance of science and modern scholarship make it impossible to teach a doctrine which would involve such an intrusion of the supernatural in human affairs as that which is implied in the Second Coming of Christ. If I have not accepted these views it is not because I have not considered them or given them due weight, but because I have felt their utter inadequacy to account for the facts of history, the facts of my own religious experience, and the religious experience of the Church during the last 1,800 years, as well as the inadequacy of those views to account for the supernatural phenomena with which the Old and New Testament abound.

One of the interesting signs of the times is the number of men, whose theological views in the past rendered their position in the Christian Church a doubtful one, who are now giving the old view of prophecy their sympathetic study. Men are being driven back upon God, and the supernatural by the very stress of the times in which we live; and the theories and speculations which seemed to satisfy them at other times are found to be entirely inadequate now. One of these, the Rev. R. J. Campbell of London, England, in a sermon which he recently preached, has this to say on the Second Coming of Christ. "It is impossible to dissociate the teaching from the personality; Christ is the Gospel and the Gospel is Christ; and we can no more separate between the significance of His first advent and the promise of the second, than between His personality and the spiritual life of the Christian Church as a whole. As the Dean of St. Paul's said last Sunday morning, it is absolutely impossible to believe that a self-deluded visionary could communicate to the world the greatest spiritual impulse it has ever received, or that He could be wrong about His future advent and right about His standing with God. The very reason why Christianity still preserves its sway over the human heart, in spite of the long interval that has elapsed since the visible presence of Jesus was withdrawn and man began to look for His reappearing, is that it has brought us into such relations with God as no other spiritual revelation has ever effected. There is a life and power in it that is its own best evidence, an impouring from above. It is itself a Divine invasion, a heavenly advent. And, let is not be forgotten, if that advent is a demonstration of the spirit and of power, it must complete itself as my text indicates. We are bidden to watch unceasingly for that consummation of the ages when the barriers between seen and unseen, between earth and heaven, shall be thrown down and Christ shall put all things under His feet.

Father Tyrrell's Book.

In the last book the late Father Tyrrell ever wrote he emphasises this attitude of Jesus as all-important to the right understanding of Christianity. He maintains that to try to interpret Jesus as a good man, a lofty, spiritual Teacher who believed that in time the world would be won to His views is sheer futility; no such Jesus has ever existed, and the more closely modern historical criticism gets to the real Jesus, the less does He resemble a Being whose chief interest was in a moral message to mankind. His chief interest was quite of another sort; it was in the transcendental world, the world of eternal perfection, from which He believed He came and to which He belonged; He declared that that world would invade this some day, catastrophically, explosively, terrifically, under His own leadership, and reconstitute everything. He did not expect earth to be made more and more like heaven; He expected Heaven to pour in like a lustrous tide and sweep all evil away before it. People may or may not like this prospect, they may wish, as some of the experts undoubtedly do wish, that the real Jesus of long ago had been another kind of person. But these are the facts, and we cannot alter them. That is what He was, and here is what He said.

"The Second Coming of Christ therefore means, the actual, visible and glorious return to our earth of Him who, 1900 years ago, lived among us but who was rejected by us. That same Jesus, once the despised and rejected of men, shall yet be the loved, honoured and crowned of men—of all men. For when He comes He comes to reign, and reign in righteousness. It is in the highest degree worthy of God that the earth which so long crowned with thorns its lawful King should once again behold Him in His beauty and glory. This doctrine does not imply the failure of Christianity. It is the completion of it. Then will take place the conversion of the Jews who will look upon their King with great sorrow because of their former rejection of Him. Then too will take place the conversion of the heathen in masses, when whole nations will be born in a day. Then the saving work of Christ will be realized to the full and the Kingdom of God will no longer be a name but a glorious reality. In that Kingdom evil shall be unknown and nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain. It is for that Kingdom we pray when we say, "Thy Kingdom come." And as that Kingdom can only come with the coming of the King, our constant prayer should be, "Even so come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

SENSE ABOUT FOOD.

Facts Worth Knowing.

It is a serious question sometimes to know just what to eat when a person's stomach is out of order and most foods cause trouble.

Grape-Nuts food can be taken at any time with the certainty that it will digest. Actual experience of people is valuable to anyone interested.

A woman writes: "I had suffered with indigestion for about four years, ever since an attack of typhoid fever, and at times could eat nothing but the very lightest food, and then suffer so with my stomach I would wish I never had to eat anything.

"I was urged to try Grape-Nuts and since using it I do not have to starve myself any more, but I can eat it at any time and feel nourished and satisfied, dyspepsia is a thing of the past, and I am now strong and well.

"My husband also had an experience with Grape-Nuts. He was very weak and sickly one spring, and could not attend to his work. He was put under the doctor's care but medicine did not seem to do him any good until he began to leave off ordinary food and use Grape-Nuts. It was surprising to see the change in him. He grew better right off, and naturally he has none but words of praise for Grape-Nuts.

"Our boy thinks he cannot eat a meal without Grape-Nuts, and he learns so fast at school that his teacher comments on it. I am satisfied that it is because of the great nourishing elements in Grape-Nuts."

This mother is right. Grape-Nuts food is a certain and remarkable rebuilder of body, nerves and brain.

"There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter. A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

REPAID THE FAVOR

Grant Did Not Forget the Man Who Did Him a Good Turn.

"General Grant's most pronounced characteristic, perhaps, was his reward of the friends who had stood by him in his early days," said Colonel S. A. Holmes of St. Louis. "While Grant was doing the best he could after he had quit the army and was down and out he wanted to get the job of county surveyor of St. Louis county. This job was in the keeping of the three county judges, and Grant could get only one of them to vote for him, so he didn't get the place.

"After the war, when Grant was serving his first term as president, a delegation of Missourians visited the White House to urge the appointment of a St. Louis man for collector of internal revenue, the most lucrative position in the state. Grant listened to the arguments and looked over the petition presented. Then he scratched his head and remarked:

"'Isn't there an old fellow out there of the name of Long, who used to be a judge of the county court?'

"Nobody in the delegation could recall Long, but Grant told them to go back and find out. Some time later he was told that Judge Long was still living in the county, but was not conspicuous.

"'Get up a petition for him,' advised the president, 'and I will appoint him internal revenue collector.'

"The friends of Long lost no time in presenting the requested petition, and the old judge was appointed.

"Grant had never forgotten the favor done him when he was less prosperous."—Washington Post.

MIXED FARMING

Canada Awakening to Value of Varied Crop Cultivation.

The Dominion of Canada has long been known by the world in general as a country of immense timber areas, inexhaustible mineral wealth and the most extensive and best stocked commercial waters in the world.

It is also becoming extensively advertised as one of the foremost wheat producing countries, the 231,717,000 bushels in 1913 from only 11,015,000 of her hundreds of millions of acres, hinting broadly of what her future will be.

But there is a reputation more desirable to her than any of these can give, a reputation which she is seeking conscientiously to foster, which she has every right to and which will found her prosperity on a more enduring basis. That is her splendid suitability for mixed or general farming.

Mixed farming has always been the rule in the eastern provinces where the topographical formation of the land invites variety of crop but it has not been common on the flat western prairie until comparatively recent years. Now, however the farmers are becoming aware through the continuous scarcity of necessities and the consequent high prices they command, that there are other roads to prosperity besides that through the wheat field.

Last year Canada imported 7,989,269 pounds of butter, most of it from as far away as New Zealand, and for the first time in 60 years failed to ship butter to England, a condition due to the home consumption, which is estimated to be increasing at the rate of $3,000,000 worth a year, being greatly in excess of the increase of supply. Also eggs have begun to be shipped to Canada from New Zealand.

These facts should be sufficient to fix the colonists' attention upon general and dairy farming either in the western provinces, where he can obtain a free grant of land, or in the east, where either unbroken or cultivated farms are sold at absurdly low figures as compared with those of older countries.

Where cows are kept for butter, as everyone knows, pigs are highly profitable. But, as a matter of fact, men who have gone in for hog raising have made large profits even without the aid of skim milk.

Our Outfit of Metals.

The United States mines nearly 40 per cent of the world's output of coal and produced 65 per cent of the petroleum in 1913. Of the more essential metals 40 per cent of the world's output of iron ore is raised from American mines, and the smelters of the United States furnish the world with 55 per cent of its copper and at least 30 per cent of its lead and zinc.

Population of Europe.

The population of Europe in 1772 was 142,000,000; in 1872, 290,000,000; in 1912, 454,600,000. Estimated population for 1952, 705,000,000. Russia in Europe is having the largest percentage of increase, rising from 74,100,000 in 1872 to 141,300,000 in 1912.—New York American.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Convulsions.

Convulsions always indicate an unstable condition of the nervous system. We do not look for stability of the nervous system in babies, and we most certainly cannot expect to find it in babies who have got rickets. Such children, besides suffering from convulsions, show by their restlessness, their fits of screaming, their poor sleep, their swollen abdomens, their general muscular debility, that they are insufficiently or improperly nourished. No baby today ought to have rickets. The condition is well understood, and its treatment is so simple that no parents ought to be unable to avail themselves of it. At one time teething was blamed for most infantile convulsions, but now most physicians doubt that teething alone can bring on these attacks without some other predisposing cause. In a few unfortunate cases a child who has the convulsive tendency may have it fastened upon him for life by bad domestic training—either by the over-severity or the overindulgence of the parents. If convulsions persist a physician will find out the cause and advise the treatment. It is always a good plan to place the child in a warm bath when the spasm appears.

Grand Trunk Brakeman Killed.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Feb. 8.—W. Saundercook, a Brockville Grand Trunk brakeman, was killed Saturday night at Coteau. The train upon which he was working was pulling away from the junction when Saundercook was missed, and a search revealed the mangled remains alongside the track. It is supposed that he fell from the top of a car. He was an old employe of the company and has made his home here for many years. He is survived by Mrs. Saundercook and two children.

Must Have Some Evidence.

"I tell you, Jack," said the enthusiast in the Berliner Illustrirte Zeitung, "I have a new car that is wonderful. It runs so smoothly that you can't feel it. It makes no noise at all, and there is no smell of gasoline. And speed! Why, it goes so fast that you can't see it!"

"Indeed!" replied his friend. "You can't feel it, hear it, smell it or see it. How under the sun do you know you've got a car, then?"

Faith may move mountains, but it won't dig ditches.

STORIES OF G. B.

He Has an Immense Capacity For Detail in Every Branch.

The stories that are told about George Bury, the new general manager of the Canadian Pacific, would fill many columns—stories that illustrate his alertness, his humor, his personal knowledge of the working force of the C. P. R. in all ranks and divisions, his uncanny knowledge of detail, which—and this one of the really remarkable things about the man—does not in the least clog the swift and accurate workings of his wonderfully efficient executive ability.

They say "G. B.," as he is called, sees and knows everything all along the line. As one C. P. R. man put it: "G. B. has a wireless receiving station under his hat." The result is that it has become an accepted fact that it is unwise to attempt to put anything over him.

He is an excellent judge of men, and has various ways of dealing with his subordinates in accordance with their individual characteristics. There is one official, for example—a good, efficient man, but in need of a little jacking up. G. B. liked him and took a friendly, effective way of doing the jacking up. In saying good-bye to him on a trip of inspection, G. B. slapped him on the back and said: "Well, Jim," only that is not his name, "you're mighty glad to see me going, and to have this inspection over, aren't you?" Jim, of course, protested that he was nothing of the sort.

"Come, now, Jim," said G. B., "when you heard last week I was coming along, didn't you send out a wire to all the section bosses telling them to get busy and throw around a little gravel and do whatever else they could to make a good showing?" It was evident from Jim's countenance, as G. B. saw instantly, that this was a bull's eye. "Now, Jim," he said, "you know better than to do things like that. You know that's no way to maintain discipline and efficiency." The lecture then and there administered was bitter, pointed and yet kindly. It went home.

Another story of the same sort which illustrates G. B.'s attention to detail and his youthful high spirits has to do with the door of a grain car, a patented affair, which he saw lying by the side of the track. He told the official whose duty it was to attend to it to have it picked up. Passing the same place later, he saw the grain door still lying by the side of the track, and still later on seeing it for the third time, he stopped the train and had it lifted aboard. Coming to the office of the man who should have attended to it, G. B. ordered that it be carried in and laid on his desk, the official in question being then out on the line. It was necessary to take out a window to get the grain door in. There was no need for G. B. to leave any message with it as it reposed on the desk.

In 1904 when he went to Winnipeg as general superintendent of the western lines of the C. P. R., it was to find himself up against the snow blockade of January and February of that year, the like of which was never known before or after, since the beginning of railroading in the west. He was out in the southwestern part of Manitoba, working hard on the job of trying to restore operating conditions, and arrived one afternoon on an engine at Souris dog-tired. He went into the station and found a gang of snow shovelers who should have been out at work, loafing around the stove.

G. B. edged in among them and pretty soon the foreman remarked that all hands had better get out and give an imitation of a gang of men hard at work shoveling snow, as the blankety-blank new superintendent might be along from Winnipeg and would fire them all if he found them loafing around the stove.

G. B. spoke up and announced that the blankety-blank individual from Winnipeg referred to by the foreman was in their midst and that they were fired all right.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

FIRST GAME FOR DISTRICT HONORS

With the honors of this junior O. H. A. at stake, and urged by hundreds of fans steeped in traditional rivalry, the Peterborough juniors and the Lindsay Midgets meet tonight in the local rink in the first of the home-and-home games to decide the winner of this district. A little over a week ago, when the teams clashed, with nothing other than the glory of victory at stake, the locals won by 6 to 2, although only after one of the speediest games witnessed here this season. Tonight when the septettes clash again the game should be even faster.

The Petes will be out to win by as many as possible so as to be sure of having a lead sufficient to carry them by on Wednesday evening in Scugogville. The game will be called at eight-thirty.

The lineups will be as follows:

Peterborough—		Lindsay

SOUTHENDERS WON FROM BRINTON'S SEVEN

A very fast but clean game of hockey was played between 6 and 7 Saturday evening when the Brinton Carpet Factory team clashed against the South End Seven, the South End Seven winning by a score of 5 to 3. The stars for the winning team were Neary, Sullivan, and Kenneally, and for the Brintons, Arthur Rose and S. Anderson. Lawrence Rose refereed the game to the satisfaction of both teams. The line-up was as follows.

South End Seven—Goal, Murray; r. def., F. Neary; l. def., M. Rody; centre, J. Condon; r. wing, C. Sullivan; l. wing, Leo Kenneally.

Brinton Carpet Factory—Goal, T. Holyman; r. def., J. McMartin; l. def., R. Rose; centre, A. Rose; r. wing, W. O'Connol; l. wing, S. Anderson.

BACK TO THE SIMPLE LIFE

Carlers are Proceeding With Schedule Games

The curlers are back to the simple life, and the schedule games are in progress once again. The next big attraction is the visit of the Detroit curlers, who will be represented by two rinks, on Friday, February 12th.

Several rinks will invade Oshawa next week and take part in the bonspiel in that town. The Oshawa dates conflicted with those of the local bonspiel here, so the local club decided to change the dates to March 2, 3 and 4. This change will allow of the schedule games continuing without the interruption that would otherwise occur.

COMMENT

As You Like it

ONCE AGAIN will St. Michael's and Victorias battle for the championship of the Senior O.H.A. and the John Ross Robertson cup, emblematic of the highest honors in amateur hockey. The Irish suffered defeat at the hands of the Heff-Meek organizations for the past two years but are confident they can win this season.

THIS CALLS for a smile. "Well with Peterborough out of the running I guess Berlin ought to win the Intermediate championship." It was uttered in Spence's barber shop Saturday evening and latest reports say he may recover.

LIVINGSTONE was not very long in the N.H.A. before the men connected with President Quinn's organization were scrapping. It was a lucky day for the O.H.A. when "Eddie" purchased the Ontarios.

FRIDAY the fans were so disgusted that the majority refused to talk hockey. When the news arrived Saturday that the Juniors got a life the dopesters again commenced working overtime.

THE WINNERS of the Lindsay-Peterborough games will play off with Kingston Collegiate Institute. Port Hope and K.C.I. played a tie 3-3 in Port Hope last week.

THE LATEST DOPE on the possibilities of "Ack" Hunter turning pro says that the local captain will not sign with the Shamrocks because of parental objections.

"BUSINESS AS USUAL" might go in Canada even if the allies do get an odd reverse but how many hockey fans felt in that mood after 11 o'clock Thursday night?

PICTON PIRATES were not considered very seriously when the curtain lifted but they made things quite interesting before the district was decided.

CURLEY BLOUNT has a lot of acquaintances in Peterborough who are pleased to learn he will be with Youngstown this summer.

THE GINGER shown by the Juniors in Saturday night's workout almost assures us that the Petes will be playing Kingston.

WE ARE ANXIOUSLY awaiting to see the productions of some of the All-Star bugs.

ARRANGE GAME WITH VICTORIAS

"Ack" Hunter the local defence player is in Toronto and informed Secretary Harry Morgan of the local club that he is endeavoring to make arrangements to have the Toronto Victorias play here on Friday night.

Contrary to many rumors the local club has not protested the game won by Picton last Thursday evening.

When a man gets the idea into his head that he is abused the only remedy is to really abuse him.

Kaiser Goes To Eastern Front.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—An official announcement received here Saturday from Berlin says that Emperor William, after completing his inspection of the German naval base at Wilhelmshaven, has gone to the eastern war zone by way of Czenstochowa, Russian Poland. A telegram sent by the Emperor to the troops which participated in the attack on Hertz and Cracow is given in a Berlin despatch as follows:

"Warm congratulations for your fine success, which is to be ascribed to wisdom of the commanding officers as well as to the great bravery of the troops, whose month-long activity in trench warfare could in no wise diminish their attacking power."

SECOND CLASS WON FROM PART SECOND

In a very close game of hockey played on the Sacred Heart Rink on Saturday afternoon, Second Class and Part Second of the Sacred Heart School met. Second Class won by 6 goals to 2. Chris. McCarney refereed.

THIS SHOULD TAX ACCOMMODATION AT THE HOSPITALS

On Friday evening last Fire Chief Howard had several of the most active men of Charlotte Street Methodist Church at his residence on Bolivar Street, drilling them in the culinary art and he had every man singing before he left. None were down hearted. The program which the chief provided for the evening proved him to be a master of entertainers. He gave an opening address, the main theme of which was safety first and no lady fingers permitted in the preparation of a sumptuous banquet and bill of fare which is to be supplied by the men in the lecture room of the church on Feb. 16th. Everything must be made by man, which is sufficient to guarantee a feast for the gods.

There will be no charge for admission but the guards at the door will levy a toll of 25 cents from all to ensure good behavior, and the physicians, city ambulance corps, and Chief Howard's pulmotor will be in readiness in case of emergency, and those who are at all nervous about attending are extended the chief's assurance that Chief of Police Thompson or one of his trusty bluecoats will be present to preserve order, and prevent any undue disturbance as an occasion like this has never been given in the city before and the men are not just sure how the ladies will act when they have nothing to do but eat, drink and be merry.

DODGE BROS. NEW CAR ON EXHIBITION

Hundreds Visit Salesrooms of E. R. Wilson to Inspect Car of Mystery

The first Dodge Brothers' motorcar in Peterborough was placed on view by the local dealer, Mr. E. R. Wilson, at his new salesrooms, Hunter street west, on Saturday afternoon. The "Mystery" car was in this way introduced to the motor-loving public of Peterborough, and the large numer who visited the salesrooms clearly demonstrated the great interest that had been taken in the veiled production of this car. No advance notice or description was made, so that the kind of car Dodge Brothers were producing was a veritable mystery. That is why it has been known as "The Mystery Car." Probably never before in the history of the automobile has the advent of a new motor car been awaited with interest equal to that shown by thousands of automobilists in all sections of the country.

A Review man visited Mr. Wilson's salesrooms Saturday and was surprised at the number of interested visitors who came to inspect the car. Well might they come and wonder at it, for the new car is one of the finest automobile creations that has ever been offered to the public. Even casual observers were struck with its beautiful appearance, and the fine estimation this occasioned was not diminished when a closer inspection of details such as working parts, was made. The "Car of Mystery" was a source of pleasure to all who gave it an inspection. Judging by the universal comments of the critical visitors and rival dealers in the city, the new car is all and more than the public had expected from the builders.

"In bringing out their new motor car, Dodge Brothers wisely determined not to court an advance appeal," says Mr. E. R. Wilson, the local dealer. "No whit of information was to be divulged until Dodge Brothers' idea of a motor car stood complete in every detail. That the automobile dealers of the country reposed an immense confidence in the big Detroit company is shown by the fact that over 14,000 dealers wrote in for the privilege of selling the car, before any details of price or specifications had been released from the factory. In Peterborough, as elsewhere, we have taken orders from customers merely on the confident belief that Dodge Brothers would establish a new standard of value in the automobile industry."

Dodge Brothers' new automobile is a real car in every particular. Freakish design has been carefully avoided, and the beautiful stream-line body is combined with a powerful 30-35 horsepower motor, to make an ideal car for five pasengers. It is a big roomy car in every sense of the word having a wheel-base of 110 inches and wheels 32 by 3½ inches. The motor is cast en bloc and has a bore of 3⅞ inches and a 4½-inch stroke. Electric lighting and starting apparatus is included, and the equipment in every way suggests the car of $2,500 rather than one of $1,050, the price which Dodge Brothers have made. Real leather upholstery and the latest type of self-lubricating springs makes the car one of the easiest riding machines that has ever been marketed. Among the unusual features on the car is the speedometer drive, which is connected directly to the transmission, and is therefore practically trouble proof. The arrangement of the transmission gears is also a novel one, no gears except the third being in operation when the car is driven on direct drive.

Dodge Brothers have just finished the erection of two immense new buildings, 1,000 feet and 800 feet long respectively, to add to the already large facilities of their Detroit plant. They are now equipped to turn out 200 cars a day of this beautiful design.

Facts About the War

Secretary A. N. Allison of the Board of Trade has received a number of bulletins entitled 'Facts About the War" from the Paris Chamber of Commerce. TURKS ARE RETREATING

Vanguard is in Full Rout and Prisoners Pour Into British Camp

CAIRO, Feb. 8. — In the engagement at El Kantara, on the Suez Canal, the Turks made their first attack before dawn. Owing to the inundations made by the British, the enemy was forced to advance on a narrow front over very soft ground, where some of them were stuck waist deep in the mud. The attack had failed before dawn came.

At daybreak another attack was pushed from the southeast. From all accounts the enemy never had a chance of succeeding.

The Syrian troops came bravely on, but the British fire was too much for them. A shell from one of the warships wiped out a party of officers. A low ridge where the Turks were attempting to entrench was swept by artillery. The advance of the Indian troops completed the work of the guns, and by three o'clock in the afternoon all was over.

The next day the British, pushing out from the canal, found the hostile column had retreated, and had even abandoned a position several miles to the east, which had been strongly entrenched as a point d'appui.

Since then prisoners with rifles and other trophies have been streaming in. The prisoners, some of whom expected to be delivered up to torture, were delighted to find themselves well treated and well fed.

The impression that the enemy's advanced guard is in full retreat from the vicinity of the canal is confirmed by the latest available information.

Turkish Report.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 8.—(Via Amsterdam to London.)—The official statement issued yesterday by the Government says:

"Our vanguards arrived in the region east of the Suez Canal and drove back the British outposts against the canal. Battles took place around Ismailia and El Kantara, and are still proceeding."

A RUSSIAN HEROINE.

Kiev Schoolgirl Decorated for Heroism on Firing Line.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 8. — Natalie Tycbnini, a high school girl of Kiev, has received the decoration of the Order of St. George for distinguished service at the front. Under a heavy fire at Opatow, in the campaign against the Austrians, the girl carried ammunition to the trenches and attended wounded men. She was wounded twice.

The girl arrived at the front with a detachment of volunteers dressed as a man. After being wounded she was left lying on the field when the Russians retired, and was attended by Austrian Red Cross workers.

When the Russians retook Opatow she was discovered in a hospital there and sent back to Kiev.

Purchase Offer Rejected.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The owners of the cargo of the American steamer Wilhelmina, on the way from New York to Hamburg, with food supplies for Germany, have intimated to the commission for the relief of Belgium, that its offer for the purchase of the cargo will not be considered.

The commission for the relief of Belgium desired to acquire the cargo of the Wilhelmina, owing to a shortage in the food supplies for the suffering Belgians. A friend of the commission placed at its disposal a sufficient sum of money to buy the cargo, with the object of diverting it to Rotterdam. The offer provided for a fair profit for the Wilhelmina's owners and charterers.

Masked Bandits Rob Train.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 8—The Palm Beach Limited train of the Florida East Coast Railroad bound from Jacksonville to Miami was boarded by four masked men at Stuart, Fla., early last night and male passengers on the observation platform robbed of money and jewelry.

Revolvers were turned on the brakeman, and he was ordered to pull the bell cord to stop the train. When it slowed down the bandits jumped to the ground and escaped. Posses are searching for the men.

Forts Are Bombarded.

LONDON, Feb. 8. — Four torpedo boats of the allies have bombarded some of the Turkish forts in the Dardanelles, according to an Athens despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. One hundred and seventy-four shells were discharged, and two ammunition depots were set on fire.

Something Entirely New in Eyeglass Mountings

No more poor lenses and very few weak eyes, if you use the NEW TAIT NO-SCREW MOUNT. These mounts are attached to the lenses without the use of screws or rivets and thereby do away with the need of drilling a hole in the lenses which of course weakens the lenses.

Also the mounts never work loose like the old style. These mounts are manufactured at the Tait Optical Co.'s Hamilton factory and are sold here exclusively by Tait Optical Co. See sample in window.

A GUARANTEE FOR "SCHOOL DAYS"

To the theatre-going public of Peterborough and vicinity:

I take pleasure in announcing the coming of "School Days" (Gus Edwards' play on the days of childhood), to the Grand Opera House on Thursday night, for one night only, February 11th.

No doubt the majority of our patrons have heard of this excellent comedy which enjoys the proud distinction of breaking all records for success in all the principal cities that it has played during the past two seasons, and where a return engagement has been played, to be enjoyed better than on its former visit.

I have no hesitancy in saying that, judging from the universal criticism of all the papers in each and every town that the present company has been in, that it is without a doubt one of the best and strongest companies that will be or has been in Peterborough this season.

The company has cast again this season many of the original people who were with the New York production, notable among them being Lawrence Fein, Bob Wagner, Harry Downing, Walter Brown, Myrtle Boland, the Misses Wilson, Ward and De Varney, to say nothing of the prettiest and daintiest beauty chorus that has left New York this season.

Seats on sale Tuesday morning at 9 a.m. for this excellent attraction, and a large advance sale is anticipated. Prices: $1.00, 75c and 50c. Gallery, 25c. Box seats $1.00.

REHEARSING RETREAT.

German Troops in Belgium Practice For Time of Need.

ROTTERDAM, Feb. 8.—According to The Tyd, the Germans have carried out on a big scale a rehearsal of their retreat from Salzaete and other places in Belgium near the Dutch frontier.

Church bells were rung, and no one was allowed near the frontier. Then followed the test of how quickly everything could be got in order for a possible retreat. Within half an hour everything was ready. The soldiers had their kits packed, horses, carts and other vehicles temporarily requisitioned were standing in the market square, and two companies of soldiers actually marched away in the direction of Ghent.

The Tyd also publishes a message from its West Flanders correspondent, stating that the Germans have partially evacuated some of their positions among the sand dunes.

London, Feb. 9.—Since the commencement of the war sixty British trading vessels and forty-eight neutrals have been sunk at sea by torpedoes or German mines.

YPRES, FURNESS AND SOISSONS BOMBARDED

AGENTS OF THE KAISER HAVE HAD QUARTERS ON LOWER BROADWAY

German Secret Agents Took Passage on the Lusitania Seeking Information on Britan's Naval and Military Preparations

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 9. — The Herald says the safe arrival of the Lusitania at Liverpool was a relief to the German colony here, for she had on board eight German secret agents charged with the hazardous work of ascertaining some important facts about Britain's naval and military preparations. These men went openly as British subjects, and all expect to return without any trouble from the British authorities. The Herald says the Kaiser's agents here have headquarters in a certain office building on Lower Broadway, with wires connecting with every point in the States and Canada, and even West Indian, South American and Far East agents report here.

The British intelligence office here has been greatly annoyed that German agents in Halifax had been able to deliver information concerning the movements of troops more expeditiously than British agents.

USE OF GERMAN WIRELESS SYSTEM NOT PERMITTED.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 9. — German postal authorities have announced that the German wireless system may no longer be used for transmission of private messages, even for private messages intended for warships and other vessels at sea.

WILL SEND NOTE TO GREAT BRITAIN.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—It was stated today on the highest authority that the Administration's view of the hoisting of the American flag on the Lusitania is that the use of other flags by a nation at war is such a customary practice that no formal protest can be made, but that it will be proper to send to Great Britain a note pointing out the dangers to neutral shipping which may follow if such practice is continued.

HOME GUARD

The class of instruction to enable officers and non-commissioned officers to qualify for their respective positions was organized at the armouries last evening and will continue each Monday evening at 8 o'clock sharp

Regt. Sergt. Major C. Peters was in charge and has been appointed instructor. Last night he gave the class two hours good drill as a squad with intervals and this will be followed each night with advanced drill, lectures and catechism by the instructors and other officers.

A large number was present, sixty officers in all, and marked attention was given to the work. This will be a splendid opportunity for the members of this class to get thoroughly posted under Sergt. Major Peters as probably no instructor in the Dominion has passed as many officers through his hands.

Arrangements have been completed for a supply of instruction books also for a properly heated room in the armouries for lecture purposes.

CHARITY BOARD

At the meeting of the Central Charity Board last evening Mr. H. Rush was re-elected chairman, S. R. Armstrong, secretary, and H. Stabler, treasurer. The members present were Messrs. H. Rush, F. W. Miller, H. Stabler, J. McClelland, H. Carveth, N. Bibby, C. L. Huffman, A. J. Johnston and Mayor Buller.

It was decided to have Messrs. McClelland and Bibby examine a car of wood and purchase same at $4.00 per cord if found satisfactory.

MAY REMAIN HERE.

The popular supposition among the officers of the local quota of the 39th Battalion is that they will remain here for the rest of the winter, and as soon as the warm days of spring arrive be ordered "under canvas" at either Niagara-on-the-Lake or Kingston.

Col. W. W. Belden, a former New York millionaire, was senteneed to the workhouse.

BELGIAN ARTILLERY DESTROYS FARM FROM WHICH GERMAN DEFENDERS FLEE

Fighting Continues Around Bagattele Without any Change in Positions --- Artillery Engagements in Lorraine and the Vosges

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 9.—At a point between the Oise and the Aisne, French artillery men have been successful in bringing down a German aeroplane. The machine, which was in flames, landed within German lines. This announcement was given out officially in Paris this afternoon.

PARIS, Feb. 9. (Afternoon Official Statement)—"In Belgium yesterday there were intermittent artillery exchanges, and Ypres and Furness were bombarded. Belgian artillery destroyed a farm, the defenders of which fled. On the road between Bethune and La Bassee we yesterday re-occupied a mill where the enemy had succeeded in installing himself.

"Soissons was bombardd with projectiles, the purpose of which was to set the city on fire:

"On all the Aisne front and in Champagne our artillery effectively engaged batteries of Germans.

"In the Argonne the fight which has developed around Bagatelle continued yesterday in one of the most dense parts of the forest and consequently became quite confused. Each side, generally speaking, was successful in maintaining its lines. The men engaged in this fight on February 7th did not exceed three or four battalions on each side. During yesterday only one French battalion was engaged.

"In Lorraine and in the Vosges, yesterday saw artillery engagements."

STOP RECRUITING FOR THE MOUNTED RIFLES

With 143 in the ranks the local quota for the Canadian Mounted Rifles is now complete, and recruiting has ceased. Word from headquarters acquainted the local officers with the fact that as there would be a surplus from other centres, the recruiting here would cease. It was formerly made known that the number expected from this vicinity was 150, and the officers were experiencing very little difficulty in securing that number. No definite word has been received about the departure of the unit for Ottawa, but it is expected that the men will leave some time on Thursday.

The pay cheque is expected this afternoon, and the men will in all probability be paid tomorrow. They will be advanced ten dollars of their next pay, so as to assist them in paying board bills, etc., before leaving.

The Ways and Means Committee of the Russian Duma has unanimously recommended that the Government declare a monopoly on tea, tobacco, oil, matches and insurance of all kinds.

NO AMOUNT FIXED

British Cabinet Seeks Unlimited Spending Powers

LONDON, Feb. 9. — For the first time in two hundred years the British Government yesterday invited the House of Commons to give it a blank check for army purposes.

This is virtually the effect of the new precedent set up by the introduction of the army estimates without details and without the aggregates of the expenditures, and when Parliament has voted the sum of £5,000 sterling under each of the fifteen groups of expenditures it will have voted supplies without limit for an army of 3,000,000 men, to be accounted for when the war is over.

H. J. Tennant, Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, paid a warm tribute to the territorial troops, whose value and efficiency, he declared, had been proved by recent events to be unquestioned. The British design of aeroplane, the Secretary contended, has been found superior to that used by any other country. The speaker said also that as a result of the excellent sanitary services cases of enteric fever were rare, and that evidence was accumulating that inoculation ought to be made compulsory.

The naval estimates, issued last evening, asks Parliament to vote for an additional force of 32,000 officers and men.

This would bring up the total personnel for the present year to 250,000 men.

BUY TOGETHER

Allies Will Make Joint Purchases of War Supplies

LONDON, Feb 9. — The Times, commenting on the official bulletin relating to the conclusions of the allies' financial conference, says:

"We think that a close reading of the announcement will suggest that no general international loan is contemplated. The joint loan to be issued in the name of the allied powers, is to cover, it will be seen, advances made or to be made to other powers.

"The news that the financial measures necessary to re-establish the parity of exchange between Russia and the other allies, so far as this is possible, have already been adopted, is particularly welcome. Russian commerce has suffered greatly owing to the closing of the Dardanelles at a time when her northern ports are frozen."

MUNICIPAL OFFICERS ARE APPOINTED

Rules to Govern Snow or Wire Fences to be Issued

Members of the municipal council of the township of Smith met in the County Council chamber on Monday, February 1st, at ten o'clock. All the members were present, with Reeve McKee in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Three applications were received for the position of assessor for 1915:

Bruce Fitzgerald, salary $13.

R. N. Scott, salary $125 and postage.

C. O. Northey, salary $100 and postage.

Bylaw No. 733 was passed making the following appointments:

Jas. A. Young and R. J. Edmison, auditors, at a salary of $10 each.

Mr. C. O. Northey assessor, at a salary of $100 and postage.

Mr. John Chittick, collector, at a salary of $115 and postage.

R. N. Scott, relief officer, with usual fees.

Bylaw No. 734 appointed the local board of health as follows: Reeve Fred McKee, Deputy Reeve Jobe, Dr. J. A. Morgan, and the Clerk to act as secretary.

Mr. J. J. Bickell addressed the council and said that it was his intention to erect a wire fence along his property on the River Road providing it came under Bylaw No. 730. The council assured him that they considered such a fence to be of great advantage to the road and approved of his building it.

Moved by Deputy Reeve Jobe, seconded by Councillor Northey, that section 2 of Bylaw No. 730 be changed to read 20 cents per rod instead of 15 cents.—Carried.

Moved by Councillor Nichols, seconded by Councillor oNrthey, that the following rules governing snow or wire fences be issued to the fence-viewers of the township:

1. All fences must be in proper place.
2. Fences must be of some advantagt to the adjacent highways in preventing snow from drifting.
3. Fence must be of No. 9 wire, 4 feet 6 inches high, and built in a substantial workmanlike manner.
4. The sum of 20 cents per rod be paid.
5. An order signed by an appointed fence-viewer on the township treasurer is sufficient authority for the treasurer to pay the same. —Carried.

Moved by Councillor Nichols, seconded by Councilor Northey, that the communication of Mr J. H. Garbutt, re relief to one Alex. Austin, a resident of the township, be received, and that the sum of $5 be granted. —Carried.

Ex-Warden R. N. Scott addressed the council in the interest of the Sawyer-Massey Co. He pointed out that the present grader had exceeded its usefulness and should only be used as an auxiliary. He showed several cuts of graders, and the matter was left over for future consideration.

Messrs. Scott and Garbutt, president and secretary of the Smith patriotic Society, addressed the council, and gave a report of the amount of funds collected. It was decided to leave the matter of distribution to the local council.

Mr. J. J. Milburn addressed the council re his road division, and pointed out that the road, although in fair condition, was too narrow for safety. He suggested that stone could be drawn during winter and a portion of it considerably widened at a very little cost. Reeve McKee spoke favorably of the suggestion, and would give it his consideration.

Moved by Councillor Northey, seconded by Councillor Moore, that the communication of Mr. F. M. DelaFosse, the city librarian, be received and laid over for future consideration. —Carried.

Moved by Deputy Reeve Jobe, seconded by Councillor Moore, that the treasurer be instructed to pay the following accounts:

POLICE ARREST TWO SUSPECTS

Liquor Store at Lindsay Was Burglarized

LINDSAY, Feb. 9. — Two arrests have been made by the police in connection with the burglary at John O'Reilly's liquor store on the night of February 3rd.

The two men "jugged" are Harry Yorke, alias Harry Raymond, and Robert Simpson. Raymond is an old Lindsay citizen, while Simpson, who comes from Campbellford, claims Belleville as his home.

The two men were brought before Magistrate Jackson at 2.30 yesterday afternoon.

Raymond elected to be tried by the first court of competent jurisdiction to meet in the county of Victoria, while Simpson elected to be tried by Magistrate Jackson and signified his intention to plead guilty. Both were remanded till Friday next, February 12th, at 2 o'clock, for a preliminary examination.

Following is a list of the stuff stolen:

Eleven bottles of Irish and Scotch whiskey, 2 botles port wine, 1 box cigars, 1 dozen small sample bottles of whiskey, 1 dozen flasks Old Rye, 1 flask White Wheat whiskey, 1 suit of boy's clothes left in the store by parties from Kinmount, $1 in five-cent pieces, 50 cents in coppers, 1 pack of playing cards, 2 bundles of keys, 1 knife, 8 shin-plasters, a large number of corkscrews.

There is a persistent rumor on the street that the death of Jerry Clearly was hastened by liquor, accompanied by assault. The matter is being investigated by Chief Short and Dr. Jeffers.

CONVICTION AGAINST THE PROPRIETOR OF PALACE HOTEL QUASHED BY JUDGE HUYCKE

His Honor Judge Huycke today gave an order quashing the conviction against Fred Blastorah, proprietor of the Palace Hotel. The latter was convicted in police court by Magistrate Dumble of permitting a "lister," Howerd Innis, to loiter in and around the hotel bar and was ordered to pay a fine of $10 and costs or $19.35 altogether. On instructions his solicitor appealed the case and the hearing of this appeal took place in the Judges' Chambers this morning. There was a lengthy array of witnesses for the Crown but on the evidence His Honor Judge Huycke acquitted Mr. Blastorah. The Crown endeavored to prove that the notice of appeal was not correctly given but the objections were overruled, the Judge stating that he found everything in order.

MRS. NERLICH IS ACCUSED

Wife of Toronto Man Faces Charges of Treason

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—As the result of speedy action before the grand jury in the criminal assizes yesterday, Emil Nerlich faces a new charge of conspiring with his wife, Hedwig Nerlich, to commit treasonable acts in connection with the attempt to leave Canada of Arthur Zirzow, a German reservist. Nerlich himself, already indicted on a straight charge of treason and admitted to bail, was rearrested at once, and the police also took Mrs. Nerlich into custody at her home, 16 Dunbar road.

As soon as the new indictment, which charged the couple with spying, by giving information to assist the enemy and also by trading with the enemy, were returned, E. A. DuVernet, K.C., the crown prosecutor, requested that bench warrants be issued for both of those named, and the detectives acted on them at once.

Chief Justice Mulock, before whom the prisoners were arraigned, granted them bail in the sum of $150,000.

MR. R. L. DOBBIN'S REPORT.

THE REPORT of Mr. R. L. Dobbin, superintendent of waterworks of Peterborough, and which was published in yesterday's Review, is an interesting contribution to the fund of information which the Utilities Commission has gathered in reference to local power and water conditions. While the report is not prejudiced, yet it appears to have expanded on those places where the frazil difficulty has not been met, and contracted on those places that have made an honest attempt to overcome the problem without an independent auxiliary power. That Mr. Dobbin was thoroughly convinced, before he went to Ottawa and Montreal, of the conclusion arrived at in his report is hardly to be doubted. Nevertheless, the report is valuable, and should be of much assistance to the Commissioners, as it deals at first hand with conditions as they actually exist in a number of electric power plants. A further point is that, while Mr. Dobbin's conclusion is not entirely that of the Review, yet his report substantially confirms many of the arguments and illustrations already published in these columns.

What the Review endeavoured to point out in discussing the problem was this: (1) That several competent authorities on electric power development have maintained that the difficulties arising from frazil and anchor ice have been overcome without the use of an auxiliary power. (2) That a number of preventive or remedial measures could be taken to provide continuity of power in local power plants. (3) That, according to the statement of one alderman, and of others who ought to know local conditions, the troubles here arising from frazil and anchor ice have always been of very short duration, seldom longer than half a day, and that the shut-down last December was caused by the worst attack in a number of years. Thus, any heavy expenditure for overcoming ice problems alone, such as an auxiliary power plant, means that it will be used sometimes only half a day in a year. If such a plant is necessary to supplement the capacity of the waterworks, the situation is much altered. (4) That during the low water season last summer there was no mention of an auxiliary power plant—not until ice troubles caused a serious shut-down was it mooted. Still, if an auxiliary power plant is needed for the waterworks, it should be provided, but there should be a real need. Besides this, power users are also entitled to some consideration. The manner in which the Commissioners have investigated this problem has been, we believe, scientific and in the public interest. (5) That the question should be considered on the principles involved.

Now, as to Mr. Dobbin's report, he says that the Eddy Company's plan is not reliable, in view of what took place, and, as it has been in operation for only about a year, and that five years are necessary to establish its reliability. While the test of experience is to be desired, it does not appear necessary or reasonable to suffer five or more years with antiquated methods, if a solution has been worked out on scientific principles. Mr. Dobbin says steam is used there. The general manager wrote the Review that warm air was used. This is, however, a small matter, but we have a blue print plan of the Eddy system, with side view in addition, that well illustrates the Eddy method of dealing with this problem, and, if the Commissioners desire to see it, we will cheerfully submit it to them.

Mr. Dobbin's report conceals, perhaps not intentionally, the principle behind the Eddy plan, in describing other plants. Thus, of the Ottawa waterworks the report says: "This plant has no protection for its racks....They take the water for the wheels and pumps from a covered aqueduct about a half a mile long." A covering for the aqueduct IS a protection for the rack and wheels. The Review pointed out that, usually, one one-thousandth of a degree caused frazil to form, and that any method which would cause an equal change in temperature in an upward direction would cure the trouble. A covering over the forebay protects the water from wind and outside air and prevents the formation of frazil ice there. In dealing with the Cedar Rapids power house the same concealment is evident in the report where "The racks are enclosed in part of the power house itself," but "they have no special appliances for fighting" frazil. By "special appliances," however, may be meant mechanical devices like motor-driven rakes. As for location, frazil forms more readily in a rapids, but Lake des Chenes in Ottawa has been at times one mass of frazil, due to wind. The use of steam in the wheels is only one method or part of a method of meeting the difficulty, but it has evidently been adopted for the same reason that coverings were provided for forebays, namely, the change in temperature. If the water can be subjected to the very slight change in temperature mentioned above, frazil will not form and no trouble will be caused thereby. That is the principle involved in protecting racks and forebays. The use of heat in racks and wheels is partly for this purpose, but more for the object of preventing the ice sticking to the metal bars or metal parts of the wheels.

Mr. Dobbin's report shows that Mr. Murphy's plan of steam injection in water-wheels has been used in a number of plants, but that this will not eradicate all troubles because they do not all originate in the wheels. Mr. Dobbin concludes that an auxiliary power is necessary for the pumps of the waterworks system of this city. That will have to be decided by the Commissioners, and at this point it appears that some such course will have to be adopted eventually, but, at the same time, some insurance ought to be provided users of electric power by adopting remedial measures to keep power plants in operation during a period of frazil and anchor ice formation.

THE WORLD-SPIRIT.

THE DIFFERENCE between Barbarism and Civilization is said to be the power and the will to look at things in the spirit of broadness. The sectionalist spirit is only the individual spirit in disguise. We must think of principles. Great writers, especially in the United States, which has long since passed us in this respect, affirm that the selfish man, the man who is so full of business that his chief thought in this world is for himself, can have no place in a great world. He has no world-spirit. World-spirit is public spirit, desire to merge the individual self in the great cause of Humanity. Doubtless this is the true test of a man. The general public is beginning to find it out. Still, selfishness has a very strong hold. We no sooner become prosperous than we lose thrift, and bad times find us in a bad way. This state of things produces "the brutal scramble." The chivalrous souls are few and far between.

CONSERVING MINERAL RESOURCES.

PRESIDENT WILSON, in a letter addressed to the American Mining Congress, has this to say of conservation of mineral resources:

> "There is one problem connected with the mining industry in which the federal government is vitally interested, and that is proper conservation and proper use of the mineral resources of the nation. I realize that you, too, are interested in this problem, and I wish merely to call it to your attention because of its fundamental importance to the present and future prosperity of the nation. I am happy to say that the profligacy of the past in the use of these resources is not being continued on so large a scale. There is, however, great opportunity for further reform along these lines."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE CONSERVATORY Orchestra have reason to feel gratified at the success of their annual concert given last night. While the outside talent was distinctly high-class, we think the orchestra and local artists are deserving of praise. Their selections were well rendered and well received by a large attentive audience. Mr. Gliddon's work as conductor bodes well for the development of a taste for the better class of music in Peterborough.

THE RE-ELECTION of Mr. Harry Rush to the Charity Board will no doubt be generally approved by the citizens of this city. Mr. Rush has devoted much time to a service that has no monetary reward, and deserves commendation for his efforts.

When He Has Time to Think.

(Toronto Star.)

When the German, with his business-like mind, gets time to think, he is bound to see that there is something in British civilization that the German has overlooked—something that has nothing at all to do with force, and yet is more powerful than force. It inspires the Fiji Islander and the Boer, with the scar on his face still red, and the Hindu, and the Gurkha, and the Pathan, the New Zealander, the Australian and the Canadian, all to take up arms voluntarily and of their own accord to saddle themselves and their children with debts that it will take long to pay, in order that they may help keep alive in the world that British civilization with which they have had enough acquaintance to know what it is and what the world would be without it.

The German has not time to think about all this at present, but he will have time later on, and he will find in it much to repay study.

Chinese Sentiment.

(London Times.)

The Chinese press in Pekin has for years past been anti-British in sentiment, and professional agitators have made use of the opium traffic, the Tibetan question, and the alliance with Japan to increase this tendency. Few opportunities are lost of impugning British good faith, and delight has been expressed by responsible writers at the imagined decadence of Great Britain. It is impossible to doubt that this campaign has been assisted by German money. Ever since the outbreak of the war the press of Pekin has almost without exception given prominence to German official reports and to translations of articles satirizing the new army, or recording disagreement between the allies and the unpopularity of the war in England.

On the Safe Side.

(Tatler.)

Zealous Sentry—Afraid I can't let you go by without the password, sir.

Irate Officer—But, confound you! I tell you I have forgotten it. You know me well enough. I'm Major Jones.

Sentry—Can't help it, sir; must have the password.

Voice from the Guard-Tent—Oh, don't stand arguing all night, Bill; shoot 'im.

Played Out.

(London Opinion.)

"Why are you moping there, Dick?"

"I've no one to play with."

"Well, go and fetch Freddie next door."

"Oh, I played with him yesterday, and I don't suppose he's well enough to come out yet."

She Got One.

(New York World.)

"I thought you said you wouldn't permit your wife to wear one of those new bathing suits?"

"Oh, I said it, all right; but the fact is, my wife overheard me say it."

Tramping and Digging.

(Boston Globe.)

The British troops in France have taken to singing, "Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching," but it seems as if "Dig, dig, dig, the boys are digging," would be more appropriate.

In Their Charge.

(Exchange.)

"Ever been in the army?"

"Sure! I was in charge of a squad of men one time."

"On special duty?"

"Yes, they were taking me to the guard house."

CLASSES IN CHILE

To understand social conditions in Chile it must be remembered that the country is one of classes. Chile has always had its aristocrats, its middle class and its common people. The last does the work of the country, and it is generally known by the term Inquilino. The aristocrats are the descendants of the Spaniards and more especially of the patriots among them, that had to do with freeing Chile from the yoke of Spain. These men are the controlling influence of the country. They have the fat offices and own nearly all of the property. Some have stock in the nitrate and other mines and not a few are engaged in the various industries. Many of them are rich farmers, and it is from them that come the heads of universities and the chief doctors and lawyers. The most of the aristocrats are men of fine education. They are the progressive element of the country. They are proud of Chile and are intensely patriotic. They are not afraid to fight for their rights, and they will not submit to injustice either as individuals or as a nation.

The middle classes are merchants and small land holders. Among them are many pure whites, and many who have more or less Indian blood mixed with that which comes down from the Spanish.

The lower class are known as the Inquilinos or, erroneously, as rotas. The word roto is one of contempt. It conveys the idea of a drunken, good-for-nothing loafer, allied to that of a quarrelsome, bad character. This is not the nature of the Inquilino, the Chilean peasant. He is a good, hard-working, honest man as a rule and anything but a loafer. He is a descendant of the peasant class of north of Spain and of the Araucanian Indians. He is intelligent and quick to learn anything that requires headiness and craft. He can do all kinds of work and makes an excellent mechanic, farmer or orchardist. He is a born horseman and is skilled in the handling of stock. He is hardy and vigorous and noted for his endurance and patience. At the same time he is brave, very quick-tempered and will fight upon slight provocation. He seems to care nothing for life and very little for pain.

Still Observe Druid Festival.

The old midsummer fire festival of druidical origin is still celebrated on the continent, but there is probably only one spot in Great Britain where it is still observed, and that is Tarbolton, in Ayrshire. For days before the festival the village lads collect materials for the great bonfire. The fuel is built upon an altar of turf, and a match is applied at sunset, after which the folk solemnly march around the blaze, and the daring youngsters vie with one another in dashing through the flames.—London Tit-Bits.

Dangerous Occupation.

"Does my practicing make you nervous?" asked the man who is learning to play the cornet.

"It did when I first heard the neighbors discussing it," replied the sympathetic person. "But now I'm getting so I don't care what happens to you."

Military Messages

Of famous military messages there are scores, beginning with the never to be forgotten "Veni, vidi, vici" of Caesar and that equally famous dispatch of Commodore Perry, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," but both were beaten for brevity by General Sir Robert Boyd, who while governor of Gibraltar, being in need of beef for his troops, wrote to the agent in England this laconic dispatch "Browne, beef, Boyd." Browne sent the stores with the reply, "Boyd, beef, Browne."

And this in turn recalls the story of Peter de Dreux, the celebrated fighting bishop of Beauvais, who, being taken in arms by Richard Coeur de Lion, was imprisoned and fettered. Pope Celestine III. remonstrated in behalf of the prelate, and in reply the king sent the bishop's helmet and armor to Rome with this neat dispatch taken from Genesis xxxvii, 32: "Know now whether it be thy son's coat or no." The pope declined further intercession and replied that the coat the king had sent did not belong to a son of the church but of the camp, and the prisoner, therefore, was at Richard's mercy.—Detroit Free Press.

IN ACCORD WITH NICKEL POLICY

Britain Approves Action by Dominion Government

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—Before the debate on the address commenced in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon W. F. Maclean (S. York) moved for leave to introduce a bill to regulate the export of nickel. He said the bill was designed to prohibit export of nickel matte during the present war, as undoubtedly Canadian nickel was reaching the enemy through the United States.

Sir Robert Borden objected that the bill had not been preceded by a resolution, but waived his objection for the moment in order to make a statement on the subject.

"So far as the general subject of the bill is concerned it has received the very careful and prolonged consideration of the Government," he said. "The arrangements which have been made with regard to the exportation of nickel have received the unqualified and absolute approval of the British authorities and especially of the committee which has been formed in Great Britain for the purpose of dealing with the exportation of any materials or supplies which might be of use to the enemy."

In reply to a question from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Premier promised to table all correspondence on the subject.

A sure sign of an early spring was recorded at Hoboken, N.J., when a police lieutenant reported seeing a "flock" of Jersey mosquitoes.

There's a Fine

For selling butter not properly put up and correctly branded.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

Imitation Parchment paper (which some sell) is no better than common tissue as soon as it becomes damp; and cheap inks stain the butter, making it unsaleable. We use only PURE PARCHMENT printed with SPECIAL INDELIBLE INK.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

"It ain't a bit of use, sir. Really and truly, Marse Broughton, it ain't a bit of use."

"Do it to oblige me, anyhow."

"All right, Marse Broughton; though wouldn't you cut out some of the humble pie?"

"Not a bite of it! You write it just the way it is and then leave it at his house tonight."

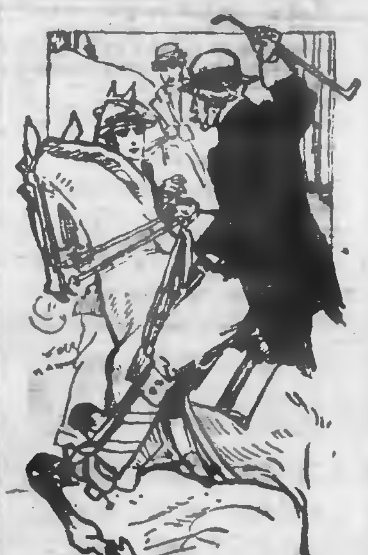
The next morning Matt treated himself to the luxury of getting up late—so late, indeed, that Daggancourt had already gone, leaving no message. But he returned soon with the tidings that the latter had been miraculously successful. Yes, old Farelly, after a pretense of examining the books, had professed himself entirely satisfied; the notes were not to be called in; everything was to go on as before; the garage was saved!

"What clinched it was when I said I'd have to find another boarding place," added Daggancourt, with a puckered grin; "said I was afraid to stop where you was, may the Lord forgive me. For God's sake, get away from here, Marse Broughton, or worse may come of it. Get away quick, and here's $150 I drew at the bank."

Matt pushed the money back. "No, no, Victor," he exclaimed; "I'm going to stick it out. I am going to stay in Manaswan if it rains wildcats!"

After losing two more positions through the machinations of his mysterious foes Matt succeeded in getting a job on the water front. But what he had not reckoned on was the overmastering, crushing fatigue that made it impossible to keep it. A man unaccustomed to severe and prolonged manual labor has little chance on the docks. Matt, working one day and often recuperating for two, exerted every nerve to find less killing employment. Sullivan, the boss stevedore, told him the Mountain View quarry was to be opened up with forty Hungarians and that he had recommended Matt for gang foreman of the place. "You're to drive out on Sunday morning and talk it over," said Sullivan.

The place was a lonely one, and Matt, scenting trouble, took Daggancourt, an auto, two mechanics and a shotgun for each. The quarry was deserted, but they found a highwayman's mask on the ground and hurried away as fast as the auto tow wagon could go. The plot, whatever it was, had failed when the unknown conspirators saw Matt and his armed companions. Miles away Matt and his friends stopped for luncheon. Soon Chris, riding beside her father, came past. Matt found himself holding her bridle, talking and listening with breathless animation. She had not been able to stay away longer. She loved him and would say it before the world, promise or no promise. It had been unbearable, and she was twenty-three and her own mistress, and, oh, had he succeeded in what they had planned? No, he had not. It was a bitter confession, but he had not. They had got him out of one thing after another; had forced him to his knees. He had been persecuted and hunted till he was well nigh crazy. Over all was another voice stridently crying: "Let go my daughter's horse, sir! Do you hear, sir? Let go my daughter's horse!" a voice vibrating with passion and yet immeasurably distant and as unconsidered as the drone of a wasp.



Suddenly There Was a Flash of a Whip.

Suddenly there were a flash of a whip and a stinging blow cut across Matt's face. Another flash, a scream, and he had wrenched the whip from a wrinkled old hand and was about to lash out with it himself on that convulsive and raging figure. To his dying day he was thankful he threw it from him instead, dizzily refraining as he realized it was Chris' father and that he must not strike an old man.

Then the two horses took fright and bolted, hurling Matt to the ground, from which he looked after them on one elbow, oblivious of everything but Chris' safety. But she was as good a rider as her father and as spirited as her own thoroughbred. She was keeping her seat in that headlong gallop and, leaning back like a little jockey, was jerking manfully at the curb. But nothing could have checked those horses. They were uncontrollable in their terror. Straining neck and neck, they diminished and disappeared, leaving Matt sick with fear.

Christine was not injured, and that evening a plain, middle aged woman came to the boarding house and gave him this note:

My Darling—I am sending you this by my Swiss maid, Flexner, whom don't trust too much. She will tell you what I have planned, for I am so used up, so distracted, that I cannot write it, though I have tried twice. I am at the end of my courage and everything, and if we don't snatch at our happiness now we shall lose it forever. It was wicked of him to strike you. Wicked, wicked, wicked! Let Flexner do all the talking till you understand. Don't think she is devoted. It's because I promised her 2,000 dols. and that is a fortune in her country, where I suppose she will settle down and yodel for the rest of her days. She is very sharp, so be cautious. Oh, if I could only talk to you myself! But I love you, and she will show you how much. Adieu. CHRIS.

P. S.—When I shall have paid the $100 she insists on in advance I shall have $82 left.

Matt pondered a moment and then inquired, "You are Flexner?"

"Yes, sir."

"Will you please give me your message?"

"My young lady wishes to do a very foolish thing," said Flexner, with a disapproving pursing of her mouth. "She wants you to run away with her tomorrow morning. You are to get a carriage, or, better, an automobile and pick her up tomorrow morning at 4 o'clock at the Fair Oaks' entrance. Previously I shall have packed a small portmanteau and placed it outside the house, and all next day I will inform her father that she is ill and cannot be disturbed. By this means you reach Middleborough without trouble and get married, and then take the train to New York. From New York you will travel to San Francisco, and there you stay, no matter how poor, how starving, till the opportunity arrives to go to that place where you have a friend—a very rich, queer man—whom once you served and who will take you back in employment."

"John Mort," said Matt to himself.

"She says it must be now or not at all, for she cannot be so brave twice. She says desperate people have to take desperate chances. She asks you to answer yes or no."

Matt made a hasty calculation. He had almost a hundred dollars. This, with Chris' $82, would easily get them to California, with something to spare. He told Flexner that his answer was "Yes" and put into the word a warmth that he hoped she would carry to her mistress. She was to say that he had $97 and would carry out his instructions implicity; was also to say that she was the pluckiest girl in the world. At half past 3 Matt and Daggancourt were at the gates of Fair Oaks.

There was a sound of voices, of feet running, of muffled exclamations in the dark. A slight figure murmured pantingly, "Oh, Matt, is it you?" and clung to him. In an instant they were speeding through the deep defile again, engulfed in the night.

Matt's recollection of his elopement was both strangely blurred and strangely vivid. He was tired to exhaustion, and so was Chris. Nothing could keep them long awake, not even the ecstasy of being together. Yet that dawn was the most imperishable memory of his life as he looked down at her, nestled beside him, with the heavy lashes fringing her cheeks. She opened her sleepy eyes and nestled closer—and closer still when he whispered it was their wedding day.

They say responsibility gravitates to the shoulders fit to bear it. In this case the shoulders were Daggancourt's, and his was the directing spirit. He had charged himself with the whole business and had thought out a plan of campaign in which the others were merely to do what they were bid. They did so meekly, bewildered and happy at this fresh instance of the first being last and the last first.

The ring was bought, the license obtained, and a benignant fossil recited the marriage ceremony in a stuffy parlor. Victor slipped a ten dollar note in his not unwilling hand, and the couple left the stuffy parlor—married.

At Claremont they caught the New York express, and Daggancourt, who had taken the tickets, hurried them through a Pullman to the compartment he had reserved.

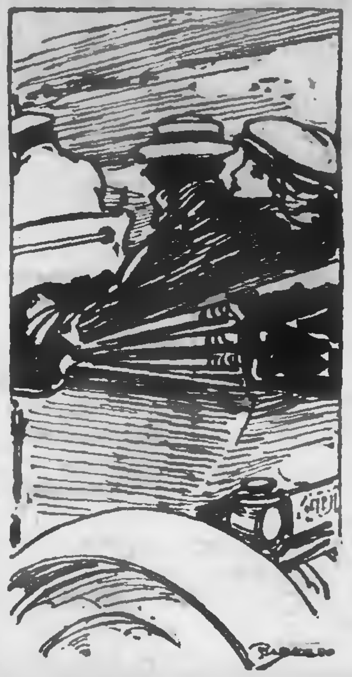
"How do we stand, Victor?" Matt asked. "Two for the license, ten for Mr. What-dye-call-him, and, oh, yes—the ring—that's five more, seventeen—and the auto, I insist upon paying for that—and the tickets. For heaven's sake, be quick about it or they'll start the train!"

"Marse Broughton, you aren't as well fixed as you ought to be," said Daggancourt, "and—and so I think we'll just let it stand over if you don't mind."

"Stand over? I should say not! Here, take thirty-five and call it square!"

"It can never be that between you and me, sir," returned Victor, with a droop of the lower lip that made him look the embodiment of guilt. "I'm powerful fond of you, Marse Broughton, and—and it would be a great favor if you would just accept it—temporary. Like you might from a white man," he added stammeringly, "only temporary, till you sort of get settled, and"—

"I'll take it," Matt said brokenly, "and I won't pretend it isn't a gift, either. God knows, I need it, Victor, and I—I thank you."



She Opened Her Eyes and Nestled Closer.

They waved farewell, as it were, to all their past life as well as to that shabby figure receding behind them. The new one seemed to date from the moment they found themselves alone together for the first time since dawn; as they looked at each other—that haggard, unshaven man, that pale girl, thus unflinchingly taking their fate into their own hands.

CHAPTER XIII.

A Friend Drops From Heaven.

CHRIS, who was sitting on the bed in a cheap rooming house in San Francisco, looked up and said with a strange earnestness: "Matt, I want to tell you something."

"Why, what is it?" he asked carelessly.

"We were followed all the way up from the ferry."

"Followed?"

"Yes, a man followed us; I'm positive of it." She rose, and going to the window, looked out.

"Oh, Matt, there he is now!" she cried. "Come quick."

But Matt was too late; the man had disappeared in the direction of a saloon.

Matt had intended to go to Snood & Hargreaves and, demanding an explanation of their outrageous conduct, force them to a settlement. His position was unassailable. If they could show him no ring—and he knew they did not have it—he could threaten them with the police and press them to the wall. But the unwisdom of such a course grew more and more apparent. It would be tantamount to announcing his arrival to Mr. Kay, with unforeseeable dangers and consequences.

Snood & Hargreaves were put by as a last resort, only to be braved in the extremity of misfortune. Instead, Matt would make the round of the business houses with which he had formerly dealt on John Mort's behalf and borrow sufficient money, if he could, for a steerage passage in the mail steamer to Samoa.

Chris accompanied him. It was a blustering, windy day, bleak and cheerless, and it seemed to become bleaker and more cheerless still as Matt was denied at one office after another. He was the victim of bygone zeal, of bygone loyalty and honesty. However lightly he had spent his own money, he had always been a hard bargainer where John Mort's was concerned. How remorselessly that "5 per cent for cash" now rose in judgment against him—that "I can do better at Turner's," or whatever it was—to bring down the price.

By 4 o'clock he had to confess himself beaten. Except for a ship chandler at the foot of Market street, the list of possible lenders was exhausted. But he had never put much business in this man's way, whose last name he had some trouble in remembering. Yes, Coleman, that was it—Joe Coleman, a jolly old Englishman as round as a tub.

Coleman greeted him heartily—so heartily that Matt was ashamed of the surprise he was about to spring.

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd, 1913.

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. One day my eye caught a billboard of "Fruit-a-tives" and I said to myself "if Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it is good enough for me". I bought some. After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself wonderfully improved. In a short time longer, I cured myself entirely. My case was no light one, either, Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear that it would get around my heart and kill me. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy for Indigestion".

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

Points for Mothers

Helping the Shy Girl.

The common tendency of the girl in the formative period is toward shyness. Almost every girl whose body is growing beyond her control is so fearful of attracting attention in public that she wishes to remain as inconspicuous as possible, and any sudden remark addressed to her is apt to cover her with confusion.

It is interesting to note how many forms shyness takes. The most easily recognized is, of course, that which causes the girl to blush, stammer and be at an utter loss for words when addressed by any stranger.

Another form, which is just as common but seldom recognized, seems to oblige the girl to talk incessantly in a high pitched unnatural voice until the cause for embarrassment has been removed. This form is far more unfortunate than the former, for the girl is usually misjudged as extremely forward and boisterous, whereas her intense confusion is really the fault.

This form of shyness is almost always a consequence of ridicule. One girl, who at twenty-three is just beginning to recover from this habit of highly excited, ceaseless chatter when embarrassed, told an intimate friend recently that for years she actually suffered when she met strangers simply because her family used to make such fun of her shyness when she was fourteen.

Wakeful Babies.

Teething babies are frequently restless and fractious and often more so toward bedtime. Nothing is better to counteract this state of affairs than a good bath. Let the water be deep enough to reach the baby's waist; the temperature 104. A board should be placed across one end of the bath with a few toys arranged on it. Let the little one sit down with a small blanket around his shoulders to prevent a chill. He should remain in the water for five minutes. Then take him out in a warmed blanket, quickly dry him and prop him in his cosy nest before the soothing effects of warmth and water have passed off. The little rogue should then sleep all night.

Disinfecting the Nursery.

After measles or any contagious ailment the nursery or bedroom should always be disinfected. Formalin tablets can be used for disinfecting purposes. The number employed is ruled by the size of the room. Special lamps can be bought which are made for the purpose. Put in the tablets, place the lamp in a pail, then light it and shut up the room. Prepare the room to be disinfected by opening drawers and cupboards, stuffing up crevices and firmly closing doors, windows and fireplaces. Shut the room in this way for twelve hours; then thoroughly clean it, and you need have no further fear.

Towels For Baby.

Soft crash towels for the baby's use have a crochet lace edge on the ends to match the delicate stripes in the border, and a cross stitch floral wreath surrounds the word "Baby" done in pastel colors. The wash cloths have the crochet edge and a stork cross stitched at the corners.

Artificial Butter.

Margarine, the first artificial butter, was made at Poissy, in France, in 1880, for the first time. It was made from the fat of the kidneys and loins of cattle. Tallow, lard and olive and cottonseed oil are also used in the manufacture of various butterines. Coconut butter is largely used in northern Europe.

Killing Cooking Odors.

No odor of cooking should greet the guest in a private home or even an apartment which claims to be of the exclusive class. A simple and agreeable deodorizer may be made of a handful of cloves, allowed to scorch with bits of orange peel on a tin plate in the oven, says the Kansas City Star. This mixture imparts a fragrance not unlike that of carnations, and, scattered about the rooms, it will completely destroy the odor of cooking vegetables or roasting meats. In the country the wise housewife may gather sweet clover, and the sprigs, dried out, will impart a fresh and delicious fragrance to the house linens all next winter. Lavender, that standby of oldtime housekeepers, may be purchased in little bags at trifling cost and makes a delightful fragrance for the linen closet.—Exchange.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

Coral is a favorite shade in gowns for evening.

Dance frocks for young girls are both short and trained.

A lovely evening gown is of green crystal net over white satin.

Narrow, clinging lines of the middle ages are most in favor for evening gowns.

Many evening gowns have no sleeves, narrow jeweled shoulder straps being the substitute.

Some evening models have apron drapery in the front, and an odd thing about it is that the apron section falls longer than the foundation. The apron is of metallic lace.

The pointed decolletage is a thing of the past. The square cut neck line is in high favor and it is severely plain, being seldom softened with trimming of any description.

A great many beads and sequins are used on evening dresses, especially on white satin and net. Black nets with blue sequins and all shades of red over cream laces are used.

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 12 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Plover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

PUBLIC TO HAVE DETAILS OF WAR EXPENDITURES

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in Debate on Reply to Speech From the Throne, Raises Question of Faulty Boots For First Contingent—British Colonial Secretary Gives High Praise to Canadian Troops.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—The address in the reply to the speech from the throne was adopted by the House last night after an interesting debate, in which a number of leading members on both sides participated.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier expressed his desire to avoid party bickerings and to give a generous support to the policy of the Government. At the same time, he declared that the people, through their representatives, had a right to enquire how the large appropriations were being expended. Errors of judgment were, in his opinion, unavoidable, but the charge has been freely made that the boots supplied to the first contingent were entirely unsuitable, and that the health and lives of our soldiers had hereby been endangered.

The Minister of Militia had stated that the man who furnished some of these boots should be shot. Surely it was the duty of the Minister to locate and punish the guilty persons. It was claimed, indeed, that the fault was not found in the material or workmanship, but in the specifications furnished by the Militia Department. In any event there should be a searching investigation.

Sir Robert Borden said, in reply, that the Opposition were clearly entitled to inquire what had become of all the moneys voted for the public service. The Government would welcome the fullest inquiry into any expenditures in connection with the war. If the specifications for the boots were wrong the blame lay at the door of the former Minister of Militia. However, it was not clear what type of boots should be adopted.

The British army service boots was open to serious objections. As far as the Prime Minister knew, the illness at Salisbury Plain camp had been due to the extraordinary weather which would have invalided many of the troops no matter what kind of boots they had on.

The Prime Minister gave an interesting review of the war, and in this connection read a despatch from the Colonial Secretary.

The Colonial Secretary said: "Nearly four months have now passed since the first Canadian contingent arrived in the United Kingdom. It was recognized on its arrival that Canada had sent a fine body of men, constituting a most valuable addition to the crown's fighting forces. Training has been continued in the time that has since elapsed, and is now practically completed, under unprecedented conditions of climate, which have involved discomfort in spite of every effort on the part of his Majesty's Government to alleviate the hardships, which have been borne by the contingent with a cheerful resolve that augurs well for their endurance of the arduous conditions of actual active service.

"The contingent was inspected by his Majesty the King on Thursday last, and his Majesty was much gratified at the marked general improvement since he last inspected them, and at the spirit of eagerness and loyal enthusiasm which fills all ranks. The contingent will shortly join their Canadian comrades of the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry at the front. These are acquitting themselves in a manner worthy of the great Dominion to which they belong, and some of them have already given their lives for the great cause for which the Empire is now fighting."

The address was moved by Mr. Weichel (Con., N. Waterloo), who made an excellent speech, and was seconded by Mr. Achim (Con., Labelle). Speeches were also delivered by Dr Clark (Lib., Red Deer), W. F. Maclean (Con., S. York), and E. M. MacDonald (Lib., Pictou, N.S.).

SOCIETY MAN SLAIN BY HIS SERVANT

Charles Albert Massey Shot Down as He Was About to Enter His Home.

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—Charles Albert Massey, 34 years old, 169 Walmer road, a son of the late Charles Albert Massey, whose family established the firm of Massey-Harris and erected the Massey Music Hall, was deliberately murdered as he turned from the sidewalk to enter his home about 6.15 o'clock last night. Carrie Davies, an 18-year-old domestic employed in the Massey home, fired two shots from the verandah at her employer, one of them going wild and the second striking him in the chest close to the heart. Mr. Massey died almost immediately. The girl is held on a charge of murder.

According to the story told by the police, a newsboy named Ernest Murphy, address unknown, came to the door and asked for Mr. Massey so that he could collect money due him. The Davies girl told the boy her employer was not in. When he was leaving the verandah the boy saw Massey coming from Dupont street and waited for him. He got his money, and when he had walked a short distance up the street he heard a shot fired. He turned around and another shot was fired and Massey dropped on the sidewalk. The girl was said to be on the verandah then.

Dr. Mitchell, 140 Walmer road, was also coming from Dupont street to his home, when the shooting took place. He was soon at Massey's side, but could do nothing for him. The police were called and on their arrival surrounded the house. Sergt. Brown entered and in the cellar he found Albert Massey, aged 14, a son. After passing through the rooms of the ground floor he started to ascend the stairs. Miss Davies called him to come up. He called back, commanding her to come down. They met at the top of the stairs. She had the revolver in her hands with which she did the shooting, but did not attempt to use it.

Miss Davies had been employed by Massey for the past two years.

According to police and neighbors, Mrs. Massey left Toronto yesterday morning for Hartford, Conn. The dead man way a prominent figure in the younger society set in Toronto.

Every Woman a Nurse.

Every woman, or at least almost every woman, has, at one time or another of her life, charge of the personal health of somebody, whether child or invalid—in other words, every woman is a nurse. Every day sanitary knowledge or the knowledge of nursing, or, in other words, of how to put the constitution in such a state as that it will have no disease or that it can recover from disease, takes a higher place. It is recognized as the knowledge which every one ought to have—distinct from medical knowledge, which only a profession can have.

If, then, every woman must at some time or other in her life become a nurse—namely, have charge of somebody's health—how immense and how valuable would be the product of her united experience if every woman would think how to nurse.—Florence Nightingale.

Values in Exhaust Steam.

A common error among plant owners is to ascribe undue economy to the heat that may be carried in water resulting from the condensation of steam. They conversely greatly underestimate the heat carried in exhaust steam. As a matter of fact, the heat in a pound of water at 212 degrees is only 180 British thermal units reckoned above the freezing point, whereas in a pound of steam at the same temperature the heat units number 1,150. Hence if this steam is condensed in a radiator it gives out 970 heat units, and the drip will contain 180 heat units.—Engineering Magazine.

THE DEATH OF LORD LONDONDERRY

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The Marquis of Londonderry died yesterday of pneumonia.

The marquis was one of the foremost leaders of the Ulster movement, and was one of the most successful members of the British Bar. He was one of the great noblemen of the United Kingdom, being a Knight of the Garter and an aide-de-camp to the King.

LORD LONDONDERRY.

Lord Londonderry traced his descent from Sir Piers Tempest, who fought at Agincourt, through a family distinguished in English history and had himself led an active political life.

Born in Ulster, 62 years ago, he was a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, which he represented in Parliament. His first preferment under the Government came in 1892, when he was made Solicitor-General for Ireland, and in the last Unionist Ministry he served as Solicitor-General of England from 1900 to 1906. In his younger years he was a member of Parliament for County Down from 1878 to 1884, and Viceroy of Ireland from 1886 to 1889. He held several offices in the Balfour Ministry. He was one of the largest landowners in Britain, holding 50,000 acres.

Only Told the Truth.

When he was a student at Heidelberg John Sharp Williams was regarded as having the most robust imagination in the student body. That truth is stranger than fiction, however, was proved one day at his boarding place, when the future United States senator chanced to describe the kind of potatoes he had been raised on in his native Mississippi. They were so unlike potatoes as the German people knew them that the whole proposition was beyond belief. Yet John Sharp had done nothing but describe the ordinary sweet potato of every day commerce. —New York Sun.

Feed of the Barn Owl.

The barn owl is one of the most beneficial of the birds of prey, since it feeds almost exclusively on small mammals that injure farm produce, nursery and orchard stock. It eats pocket gophers, field mice, common rats, house mice, harvest mice, kangaroo rats and cotton rats. It occasionally captures a few birds and insects. This species of owl should be protected throughout its entire range.

WAS SENTENCED TO GERMAN GAOL

Australian Arrives in London After Five Months in Prison

An Australian farmer, who has arrived in London from Germany, tells an interesting story of the past six months, so far as it concerns his personal history. He says: During May last year I was making a pleasure trip through Germany. I was going to Marburg from Berlin, and had engaged a seat in the train by placing my luggage upon it. While I was smoking a cigar in the corridor, a German removed my luggage and took my place. He refused to give it up and I lost my temper and struck him.

In the fight that ensued the German fell through the door on to the platform and was injured severely. I was imprisoned for two months before I was brought to trial in Berlin before a bench of five judges. Though my counsel pleaded that the German's fall from the train was the result of an accident, the prosecutor's version that I threw him out of the train was accepted, and I was sentenced to five months' imprisonment.

Heard of War in Jail.

I was first sent to Sieburg Prison, near Cologne. Here I stayed for seven weeks and heard of the declaration of war while I was there. I was set to work at making buttons, the first I made being for the British market.

After the outbreak of war I was sent away to the prison at Cassel, a gaol which has the reputation of bein "easy." Here I had to make lead soldiers for the English market. About 15,000 soldiers of all kinds are made daily in the Cassel gaol. The food was very bad and I was kept working from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

As soon as I realized that Great Britain was at war with Germany I determined that I must hide my nationality. The only evidence the authorities had of this was that my prison docket was marked "English," because that was my native tongue, but they had no papers of mine. I therefore said I was an American, and this secured better treatment for me than I should have received if it had been known that I was British.

Convicts for Front.

After a time I was given easy work and came into contact with other prisoners. The German authorities were recruiting soldiers from the prisons. All prisoners under forty were sent for and asked if they wanted to serve. Those who volunteered were let off the rest of their sentence. Those who had already done their military service were sent straight to the front; those who had not yet served were despatched to training camps.

Two of the prisoners who used to help me with the food were despatched to the army. One was a clerk from a big shop who was serving a sentence of three years for embezzling. He had eight months of his sentence to run when he went off, and another prisoner had a year and two months to do when he was released. Only the ordinary prisoners, not the penal servitude convicts, who occupied a separate wing of the prison, were allowed to volunteer for the army. Some of the released prisoners sent back to the gaol officials picture postcards from the front.

Smile of the Allies.

I made friends in prison with a Serbian who was serving a sentence for stabbing a man. He pretended that he was an Austrian. We used to laugh together at the fabulous tales of German victories always circulating through the gaol.

As I had made myself out to be an American, when my release came I persuaded the prison governor to give me a ticket to Frankfort so that I might call on the American Consul at Zurich, who had managed to send me word that he had money for me. From Frankfort, after much difficulties, I reached Zurich. Now I am back in London. I mean to have a fortnight's rest and then try to go to the front and get a little of my own back.

Both in face and frame the Australian shows traces of the suffering he endured in German prisons. His clothes hang quite loosely on him.

RETREAT CONFIRMED.

No Turkish Troops Are Within Twenty Miles of the Suez Canal.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—It is officially announced that the Turks who attacked the Suez Canal are in full retreat to the eastward. The statement was issued last night by the Official Press Bureau. It was based on a report from British Headquarters in Cairo, which said that the losses of the enemy were more than at first supposed. The Turkish dead are now estimated at more than 500, and prisoners taken number 652.

No Turkish forces are now within 20 miles of the canal, according to the statement.

Earlier despatches intimated that British aviators raided the Turkish artillery lines, destroying three of the batteries with bombs.

ESTIMATES ARE TABLED

Figures For Year Call For Outlay of $149,962,168.

Of Total Given in Main Federal Estimates For 1914, $105,870,093 is on Consolidated Fund Account and Remainder on Capital Account ---Public Debt Shows an Increase of Over $8,000,000.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—The estimates for the year were brought down in the Commons yesterday. The total sum to be provided for is $149,962,168, of which $105,870,093 is on consolidated fund account, and $44,092,075 on capital account. This is $17,789,320 less than was asked for last year, which shows economy on the part of the Government, for a large proportion of the various sums for public works are re-votes for works already in progress or arrangements for the progress of which has been entered into.

There is a noticeable diminution in the number of new works provided for.

The public debt, including sinking funds, takes up $23,648,506, as compared with less than $15,000,000 last year. There is a slight increase in civil government, which is placed at $7,024,253.

Public works is $22,351,830, compared with $33,390,656. Militia and defence is $5,780,100, as against $11,608,682. The war expenses are, of course, not included in this.

Subsidies to provinces are about the same—$11,451,673.

Railways and canals are $15,515,500, which is over a million less than last year.

Capital expenditure on railways and canals is $32,000,000, or $4,000,000 less. Public works capital expenditure is about $12,000,000, or $4,000,000 less.

There is a decrease of $2,000,000 in the amount required for annual drill for the militia, nearly $2,000,000 less for ordnance, arms, etc.; $292,500 less for cadet services; $860,000 less for clothing, and $580,000 less for stores.

Railway and canal votes include: I. C. R., $8,128,250, decrease $1,340,000; P. E. I. Railway, $1,938,935, increase $392,000; Hudson Bay Railway, $5,500,000; N. T. R., $500,000 for construction.

GERMANS BEGIN NEW OPERATION

Von Hindenburg Relaxes His Efforts to Smash the Slav Centre on the Bzura-Rawka Line and is Trying to Defeat the Carpathian Advance.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 9.—Another sudden change has taken place in the situation on this front. The enemy appears to have abandoned his efforts to break through on the Bzura-Rawka line and to be concentrating his main energy on an attempt to roll up the extreme left of the Russian position in Bukowina and the eastern ridge of the Galician Carpathians. The Germans have also hurried reinforcements into Eastern Prussia and assumed the offensive in the valley of the Sheshupa, thus far without success.

It is still an open question whether these movements have immediate connection with one another. In military circles the idea seems to predominate that the Germans have convinced themselves nothing is to be gained from further sacrifice of life on the insurmountable barrier to the west of Warsaw. It is even a question whether the Germans, after their colossal losses of the past few days, any longer possess a sufficient number of fresh unshaken units to make any serious assaults on the trenches of the Russians in that quarter. Possibly they are merely drawing their breath after their stupendous and costly exertions of the last week, and in spite of all failures and fruitless sacrifices will once more launch their masses at the Russian positions.

Looked at as a whole, the situation in the Carpathians seems eminently satisfactory. It is true the Russians have had to give way in Bukowina, but the movements there must be regarded merely as local incidents in a big general battle along the whole ridge, and the tendency of this is distinctly in favor of the Russians.

The situation of the Russians in Bukowina was bound to become uncomfortable as soon as the enemy concentrated an attack on that point, in consequence of the propinquity of the Roumanian frontier, which allows no room for manoeuvring, but if they are permanently successful farther to the west they will recover the lost ground as a matter of course.

Battling Foot By Foot.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—In that fosse-dotted cockpit of the fighting on the eastern end of the allies' line in France (the Argonne) a terrific battle has been raging for two days and continues with the result still in doubt. Gains of a foot are held precious, a yard put behind an advancing column is of sufficient importance to be made the subject of a report, and the side that can lunge forward through the continual hurricane of shell and rifle fire, past the line of waiting bayonets, has won a great victory, so furious and evenly balanced is the struggle.

Bagatelle, held by the French, is the scene of the big battle. German forces opened the attack early the mornings of Sunday. Drive after drive was made against the French lines without effect. At dusk the French lines were still holding.

The French War Office issued the following bulletin yesterday:

"On the night of Feb. 6-7 the enemy exploded three series of mines at La Boiselle in front of houses in the village which we occupied. Two companies and a half were then sent against our positions, but were not able to get beyond the excavations formed by the explosions.

"During the course of the afternoon of Feb. 7 a counterattack, executed by one of our companies, drove the enemy from the excavations, which we immediately organized. The Germans left 200 dead on the ground.

"To the north of Mesnil-les-Hurles, on the night of Feb. 7-8, we captured a wood where the enemy had been solidly established.

"In the Argonne, the action of the infantry engaged at Bagatelle was prolonged throughout the night of Feb. 7-8. The Germans, after having made some progress, were able to occupy at daybreak of the 8th only particular parts of our more advanced line, around which the struggle continued during the day.

"From the sea to the Oise, there was an artillery duel Feb. 7 of considerable violence in the vicinity of Guinchy, to the west of La Bassee.

"To the southwest of Carency we were successful in a surprise attack on a German trench which had been blown up by one of our mines. The defenders of this position were either killed or taken prisoners.

"On the Aisne front, and in Champagne Feb. 7 saw an intermittent bombardment. The accuracy of our artillery fire was evidenced at several places. To the west of Hill 191, north of Massiges, our batteries checked an attempted attack on the part of the enemy.

"In the Argonne, a German attack in the direction of Fontaine Madame was repulsed. At Bagatelle a violent infantry engagement was started by the Germans, and has been going on since the morning of Feb. 7. According to latest reports, all our positions were being maintained.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

Dr. Beland Cannot Get Away.

QUEBEC, Feb. 9.—News came yesterday by cablegram that Hon. Dr. H. S. Beland, M.P. for Beauce, is unable to leave Belgium, the German authorities refusing him passports.

That Dr. Beland well weighs the danger he incurs in Belgium is indicated by the fact that, in his cablegram, he asks his relatives in Beauce County to see that payment is made on a life accident insurance policy he holds in a local insurance company, be paid in due time, as he cannot see to it himself.

Huerta Last Ruler Recognized.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Neil Primrose, Parliamentary Under Secretary of the Foreign Office, replying to questions in the House of Commons, said the British Government had not recognized anybody as President of Mexico since the retirement of Gen. Victoriano Huerta.

He added, however, that the Government had brought to the attention of the U. S. several cases of damage and loss to British interests in Mexico which had occurred since the ex-President's departure from that country in July of last year.

Reeve McIntosh presented an application from Mr. William Stevens for relief officer. The application was received.

The applications for the assessorship were then taken up. Applicants were Bert Sanderson, assessor for the past two years, and T. M. Hunter. Mr. Forster moved that Bert Sanderson be re-appointed. The motion was not seconded. Moved by Mr. Robson and Mr. Bell that T. M. Hunter be appointed assessor.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Bell and Robson that the assessor's salary be $95.00. This is the same amount as paid last year.

The appointment of road commissioners was dealt with. Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Rye, that the six old road commissioners be re-appointed. The following amendment was moved by Messrs. Bell and Robson: "That Mr. Archie Patterson be appointed road commissioner for R. D. No. 6." Reeve McIntosh voted for the amendment, which carried.

Moved by Messrs. Bell and Robson that the attention of the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. be brought to the banks of snow along the sides of their tracks in North Monaghan.

Mr. Rye reported that the committee of the public library, Peterborough, had asked for an interview with him, and proposed that the township grant fifty cents towards each subscriber from the township, each subscriber to pay fifty cents per year. The present rate for all members outside the city limits is $2 per year. No action was taken.

Moved by Messrs. Forster and Rye that any one in the township who desires to contribute provisions or clothing for the relief of the poor, leave the same at Joseph H. Bell's residence, and H. B. Rye, acting relief officer, will distribute the same.

The next meeting will be held at the court house, Peterborough, on the second Monday in March at 2 p.m.

Man Reported Dead Is Alive.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 9.—Private Frank Oram, a British reservist, who left here for the front on the outbreak of hostilities, has been killed in action according to the British War Office, but Oram writes to his wife in this city denying the report and saying that he is "very much alive." He explains the discrepancy by saying that his identification disc got into the possession of a fellow soldier who later fell in the fighting.

HYMN OF HATE

Which Won Decoration of Red Eagle From the Kaiser

The Kaiser has conferred upon Ernest Lissauer, author of "The Hymn of Hate," the order of the Red Eagle of the Fourth Class, with the Royal Crown, according to a recent cable.

Lissauer's poem, a diatribe against England, printed in Jubend, attracted a great deal of comment, favorable and otherwise. An English version by Barbara Henderson follows:

French and Russian, they matter not,
A blow for a blow and a shot for a shot;
We love them not we hate them not,
We hold the Weichsel and Vosges-gate.
We have but one and only hate,
We love as one, we hate as one
We have one foe and one alone.

He is known to you all, he is known to you all.
He crouches behind the dark grey flood,
Full of envy, of rage, of craft, of gall,
Cut off by waves that are thicker than blood.
Come, let us stand at the judgment place,
An oath to swear to, face to face,
An oath of bronze no wind can shake,
An oath for our sons and their sons to take.
Come, hear the word, repeat the word,
Throughout the Fatherland make it heard.
We will never forego our hate,
We have all but a single hate,
We love as one, we hate as one,
We have one foe and one alone
ENGLAND!

In the captain's mess, in the banquet hall,
Sat feasting the officers, one and all,
Like a sabre-blow, like the swing of a sail,
One seized his glass held high to hail,
Sharp snapped like the stroke of a rudder's play,
Spoke three words only: "To the Day!"

Whose glass this fate?
They had all but a single hate.
Who has thus known?
They had one foe and one alone
ENGLAND!

Take you the folk of the Earth in pay,
With bars of gold your ramparts lay,
Redeck the ocean with a bow on bow,
Ye reckon well, but not well enough now.
French and Russian, they matter not,
A blow for a blow, a shot for a shot!
We fight the battle with bronze and steel,
And the time that is coming Peace will seal.
You will we hate with a lasting hate,
We will never forego our hate,
Hate by water and hate by land,
Hate of the head and hate of the hand,
Hate of the hammer and hate of the crown,
Hate of seventy millions, choking down.
We love as one, we hate as one,
We have one foe and one alone
ENGLAND!

BOWSER DIDN'T RESPOND

Because Mrs. Bowser Butted in With History

By M. QUAD

Mr. Bowser's face had a new look on it when he came home to dinner the other evening—a combination of hope, triumph and perplexity, and Mrs. Bowser was puzzled over it. He was ill at ease all through dinner, and it was a quarter of an hour after the meal had been concluded before he said:

"I might as well tell you now that I am going to the club tomorrow night. It will be an anniversary gathering and a banquet."

"Well, I hope you'll have a good time," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"Yes, I expect to. At the banquet they will have toasts, you know. They've got me down to respond to one."

"Why, I'm pleased at that. What is the toast?"

"It's 'Our Country.' I've been writing something today for a response, and I think I've got a rather neat thing. I don't expect to bring down the house, of course, but perhaps I'll stay up with the rest of 'em. I shall be a little nervous, I suppose, but I've got to go through with it just the same."

"I am sure you will do splendidly," said Mrs. Bowser in confident tones. "I want to hear it, and it will be well for you to see if you have it committed to memory. Just stand there as if you had risen from the banquet table and make the response."

"OUR COUNTRY" HE BEGAN.

Mr. Bowser drew himself up, cleared his throat, and, after caressing his ear a few seconds, he began:

"Our country! Little did Christopher Columbus imagine when he set sail from the shores of Spain in 1504 what would be the result"—

"Wait, dear," interrupted Mrs. Bowser. "You are first supposed to bow to the president of the club, aren't you?"

"Certainly, and I bowed. I also carried my hand to my heart as I bowed."

"But you didn't, dear. You raised your left hand to your right side."

"I deny it, but we'll let that go."

"And Columbus didn't set sail in the year 1504, but in 1492. You must have the date correct."

"What! You say it was in 1492?" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as the strawberry color rushed to his face.

"Of course it was!"

"I don't believe it, but I will look it up later on. Well, what I'm going to say is that a band of pilgrims came over here."

"That's right."

"And they landed in Boston."

"Not Boston, my dear, but at Plymouth Rock. It is so long since you read history that"—

"I say it was Boston!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he danced about. "Woman, when you set out to correct my dates you are going altogether too far, and I want no more of it! If they landed at Plymouth Rock how came they to throw the tea overboard in Boston harbor?"

"But it wasn't the pilgrims who threw the tea overboard," gently insisted Mrs. Bowser. "As I said, you are a little rusty on history. Don't you remember"—

"I remember that it was the pilgrims! Let any man on the face of the earth tell me it wasn't and I'll kick him out of his boots! Do you think I'd get up before my club and say it was the pilgrims if it wasn't! You'd better spend the night with your nose in a history!"

"Have you got the Declaration of Independence in your reply?" asked Mrs Bowser after awhile.

"Of course I have," he growled in reply. "That's what I depend upon for a bit, but I suppose you'll find some fault with it. I go on to say that a little band of patriots, headed by General Washington, gathered in Philadelphia and put their names to a document which created a new nation. You'll deny it, won't you?"

"But, you see, Washington didn't sign the Declaration."

"What! What! Dare you sit there and make such a bare faced statement as that? Any school child will tell you that Washington signed first of all."

"Just wait. I will get down a history of the United States and prove that you are wrong. You have got John Hancock and George Washington mixed up."

"Never, never, Mrs. Bowser! You needn't trouble yourself about getting down a history. I am history enough. What I don't know about the United States no history can teach me! As to mixing up George Washington and John Hancock, do you take me for an idiot? Woman, you are maliciously determined to pick a fuss with me, and I warn you to pause!"

"What else do you say about 'Our Country?'" asked Mrs. Bowser in her placid way.

"I speak about its patriotism," he replied after a time; "how we fought England and Germany and Mexico to the last ditch and gained our independence as a nation. Then I go on to say"—

"But you don't say that we fought Germany?" interrupted Mrs. Bowser.

"Of course I do. Why not? Perhaps you'll say I'm mixed up on that?"

"You surely are, Mr. Bowser. We never had a war with Germany. History will tell you"—

"History, history!" he shouted as he waved his arms about and looked around for something to kick at. "What do I care about history? When I say we had a war with Germany that settles it, don't it? I can now realize why husbands sometimes murder their wives in cold blood."

"When was this war?"

"In 1775, of course."

"But that was the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, and we were fighting England alone. If you are going to speak before your club you must have your facts and dates right or—or"—

"Or what?" he demanded as she hesitated. "Woman, I am put down on the program to respond to the toast of 'Our Country.' I spend a day looking up my facts. I get them down fine. I come home and ask you for your encouragement, and I am hit with a fence rail a dozen times over. It is envy, jealousy, malice. You want me to fail. It would break your heart to hear me succeed."

"Why, Mr. Bowser, how can you"—

"That will do, woman; that will do! You have accomplished your object. The club be hanged! Our country be hanged! I shall not respond. Instead of going to the banquet and winning applause I will go out on the street and rip and holler and lick three men!"

"But I said"—

"Yes, you said. You need say no more. I am going to the library to look over certain papers and arrange them for my lawyer, and should anybody call you can say that George Washington, John Hancock, our country and your victim of a husband are all tied up in a knot and can't be seen before tomorrow."

Linear Measure.

The Frenchman and the American had gone a considerable distance in animated discussion concerning the merits of their respective countries. Neither would make any concessions.

"Of course," finally said the Frenchman in desperation, "you will concede that there is only one Eiffel tower and that we have it."

"Certainly," agreed the American, "and I am mighty glad, for it has given us a means for measuring our skyscrapers. We now say in New York that a building is two eiffels high or three or four, as the case may be."—New York Post.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 8.—The wheat market was quiet generally, and prices kept very steady. Trading in futures was light. May wheat was traded in at from $1.58⅝ to $1.59⅝; July, from $1.59⅝ to $1.60½. Oats opened ¼c higher, and made a fractional gain, but weakened later. Trading was from 65⅞c to 68½c, but transactions were few. There was a fair demand for cash wheat of the higher grades, and quite a number of offerings were on the market.

May wheat ranged from $1.57 to $1.59⅝, July from $1.59¼ to $1.60½.

Wheat futures closed 1½c lower for both months, cash closed ⅞c to 1⅜c lower, oats ⅛c to ¼c lower, and flax ⅝c to 1c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 8.—Business in grain over the cable today was dull, the demand being very limited and the few firm bids that were in the market were out of line and is 9d per quarter below what exporters asked. The local market for coarse grains is firm with a steady trade passing in car lots, but the demand for round lots was limited. Buckwheat is very strong and prices have scored a sharp advance with sales of car lots at 97c per bushel ex-store. Flour is firm with a fair local business doing, but the export demand is slow. Millfeed is in good demand at firm prices.

Butter is strong. Cheese unchanged. Eggs steady.

Fine Sport Amid the Scenic Grandeur of the Newly-Opened Yellowhead Pass

Few districts can offer such opportunities to the sportsman as the wild country around the Yellowhead Pass, the rugged territory in the Rocky Mountains on the eastern border of British Columbia. This country has not been much frequented by the white hunter hitherto, owing to the difficulty of access. To gain the pass it was necessary to embark upon a pack train journey from Edmonton. Twelve miles a day of ten hours was reckoned fast travelling. This state of affairs, however, has now become a thing of the past, for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has been pushed through this pass, and the adjacent country is now accessible.

In the Yelolwhead Pass district caribou, deer, mountain goat and sheep afford plenty of exciting sport. They require careful stalking, for they frequent the rugged mountain slopes well up near the timber line. Perhaps the greatest excitement is provided by bears, grizzly and silver tip. The country is piled up with a maze of dead burned trees, uprooted and stacked criss-cross. These, combined with the dense undergrowth, render it an ideal haunt for big game. Often when climbing over a deadfall you may come unawares on a black or grizzly bear. The latter species is especially a tough customer to meet in an awkward corner. Tackling a full grown grizzly, especially when he is wounded, calls for a certain amount of nerve, particularly at close range. So far as fishing is concerned, there is also ample sport, the catch comprising for the most part rainbow and speckled trout, the Doly Varden trout, pike, salmon trout and in the neighborhood of Tate Jaune Cache, salmon, for these fish travel as far up the Fraser as this point to spawn on the sandbars. The country is freely intersected with creeks and mountain streams feeding the Athabaska, Miette, Moose and Fraser Rivers.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

FIRST OF HOME AND HOME GAMES WON BY MIDGETS

Lindsay Youngsters Have Two Goal Lead in District Race

SCORE WAS 5 TO 3

When Sterling wrote the lyric for "Last Night was the End of the World" he must have felt about the same as the hockey fans of Peterborough do today. The Peterborough Juniors were given a life when the Port Hope team felt the iron hand of the O.H.A. sub-committee but that life was short. Aye, so short and brought to such a sad end that it moves us almost to breaking into the Poetry League. What a subject for an In Memoriam! Yet if one did pour forth rhyme on such a topic he would surely be met at the office door the next morning by the convenor of the Committee to Suppress Objectionable Printed Matter. Everyone had been so hopeful. All were ready to lamp the Kingston septette and then — Lindsay Midgets drop into town and handed out a well earned 5-3 defeat to those seven idols of whom so much was expected. Gone are the hopes. Gone are the dreams. The prospects for the Juniors winning the honors of this group are little brighter than those of the Intermediates.

Nothing was at stake when the Peterborough Juniors defeated Lindsay a week or so ago by 6-2 and yet when they went out with all to win they fell down. Fell down are the proper words. On last night's showing they couldn't keep in the first division of an Epworth League. No speed, no back-checking, no team play they had everything but that which wins games. How about the brigade from the capital of Victoria County? They had everything with an over abundance of that indefinable stuff called class. They had it on the locals in every department. We take our hats off to Cap Simpson's men. They are a real hockey team.

Looking over the names of the Peterborough Juniors they appear strong but what a failure when they hit the ice? The boys have the ability and experience but they lacked the one essential — good coaching. Give a good coach the team which represented Peterborough on the ice last night and he would have them battling for the John Ross Robertson silverware in a month. That is what is required before Peterborough can land a championship or even district honors. We must have a man to coach the teams. If he is not to be found in the city we must import him. Lindsay and Picton winning groups must not occur again.

It was quite evident by their performance last night that the Petes were without the necessary stuff. Legros, in goal, was fair by times but several beat him which he should have picked off. Morrow and Long on defence were away below par. Each has 185 pounds of good solid weight but they might have been as small as Knapman. Their attempts at using their weight were laughable. Knapman also showed little of his usual brilliancy. Walter Jackson and Richardson were the pick of the outfit but they couldn't win the game without assistance. Time after time with the puck around the Lindsay nets no one was found waiting in centre ice. Very seldom did the forwards combine and an individual forward line will never win games.

Lindsay must not be too highly rated because as a matter of fact the opposition they received last night was very weak. Nevertheless the team from Scugogville is average and should at least reach the semi-finals. O'Loughlin their goal custodian blocks and clears well, Flavelle and Haugh on the defence check closely and rush fast, while speed is no name for the forward line. C. Carew, McElroy, Sandercock and A. Carew are all good. Sandercock is more or less of a rough house artist and that naturally lessens the value he is to the team. Last night he served six penalties.

The crowd was quite small for such an important game but those who were present were none too well pleased. About one hundred and fifty accompanied the Lindsay crew on the excursion and they alone were happy. Referee McCreath of Toronto was the object of a few knocks but the excuse for defeat must be placed somewhere.

The Petes scored first after a minute of play but Lindsay notched three before the first period ended. The second period the teams battled hard but Lindsay found opportunity to score twice while the locals failed to register. In the last frame Peterborough secured two making it five-three. Lindsay were minus their captain most of the last stanza, Sandercock going to the penalty box four times in the twenty minutes. The teams:—

Peterborough		Lindsay
Legros	goal	O'Loughlin
Long	r. def.	Haugh
Morrow	l. def.	Flavelle
Knapman	rover	C. Carew
Jackson	centre	McElroy
Smythe	r. wing	Sandercock
Richardson	l. wing	A. Carew

The scoring:—

First Period.

Knapman	Peterborough	1.00
Flavelle	Lindsay	4.00
Sandercock	Lindsay	5.00
Sandercock	Lindsay	5.00

Second Period.

McElroy	Lindsay	10.00
C. Carew	Lindsay	5.00

Third Period.

Smythe	Peterborough	1.00

Lindsay: Sandercock 6, McElroy, Haugh 2, A. Carew. Total 10.

COMMENT
As You Like it

GOOD NIGHT to that Kingston trip.

AT THAT we would have liked to look over the K. C. I. seven, but now it looks like an idle wish.

TO BE SURE, the Petes have a chance in Lindsay on Wednesday night, but the two-goal lead is too much to overcome.

ABOUT TEN MINUTES after play began, the management of the Peterborough Hockey Club decided not to run an excursion to Lindsay tomorrow.

A VERY CHARITABLE fan remarked coming from the ice box last evening that three defeats the juniors met with this year could be placed on Tackaberry, McCord and McCreath. Here's hoping Con. Corbeau is available for the game in Lindsay.

McCREATH, the referee, is the former forward man of the Eurekas, runners-up in the junior series in 1908-09. Some of the fans were inclined to knock a little, but nevertheless he handled a hard game fairly well. The fact that eighteen penalties were handed out means that McCreath's task was by no means an easy one. He was perfectly impartial.

A force of 800 Germans attacked the village of Kakamas, in the Kenhardt district, Cape Colony, and was repulsed. The German casualties were nine killed and 22 wounded, and 15 men were made prisoners. The British losses were one killed and two wounded.

Recognized.

A Pennsylvania lawyer known throughout the state for his sharpness once met his match in a very unexpected quarter.

An old woman was being cross examined by him as to how the testator had looked when he made a remark to her about some relatives.

"I don't remember. He's been dead three years," she answered testily.

"Do you mean to tell me that your memory is so bad that you cannot go back three years?" demanded the attorney.

The witness was silent.

"Did he look anything like me?" the lawyer finally ventured.

"Seems to me he did have the same sort of vacant look," responded the old lady.—New Orleans Picayune.

"Do you regard politics in your state at all as a square deal?"

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "It is rather a question of who gets lost in the shuffle."—Washington Star.

CURLEY BLOUNT HUSTLES FOR CENTRAL LEAGUE

Erie, Feb. 9. — Advices from Youngstown seem to indicate that slow but certain progress is being made there toward a Central league baseball team this summer. Curley Blount has notified Thomas J. O'Connor, president of the Erie Exhibition company, that everything is lovely, and the Steel City is assured of a place in the Central. It is expected that within a week or so the Central League magnates will meet to make up their 1915 circuit.

President Heilbroner and George O'Neil have left Youngstown after another visit, where they helped out in the task of raising the necessary funds. George O'Neil went in place of Tom O'Connor, who could not answer Heilbroner's second call on account of other business. O'Neil's presence, as owner or part owner of the Erie Club, served to stir up considerable enthusiasm among the Steel City fans, and as a result the situation was boosted pretty well toward success.

Youngstown newspapers seem to be shading the Central project to some great extent, evincing no unbounded enthusiasm. They seem to take the position that the Steel City is imposing some considerable favor upon the Central league, in deigning to become a member of the circuit. This feeling may have had something to do with the necessity of two visits by Heilbroner to Youngstown to stir up grit and gumption enough to land the required support for a club. About all the credit for the success of the affair can go to Curley Blount and his Youngstown friends who helped him, President Heilbroner and Tom O'Connor.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

O'CONNOR—CONROY.

The first and a very pretty wedding took place in the Church of the Immaculate Conception on Wednesday morning last, when Miss Pearl, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Conroy, Otonabee, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. Father McColl to Mr. Thomas O'Connor, of Peterborough.

The bride looked most charming in a gown of pale blue satin with shadow lace and a black velvet hat with a large willow plume and a small bunch of cherries.

The bridesmaid, Miss Katie Sheehan, wore a blue tailor-made suit and a cream silk waist, and a picture hat to match. Mr. James Conroy, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

After the ceremony the happy couple drove to the home of the bride's parents, where an excellent breakfast was served. The house was tastefully decorated with pink and white carnations and ferns.

Only the intimate friends of the bride and groom were present.

The bride's traveling suit was a blue serge tailor-made and a duchess satin waist trimmed with pearls.

Many were the beautiful and costly presents which the bride received.

The young couple will be "at home" to their friends after February 10th at 142 Driscoll Terrace, Peterborough.

Invitations have been received for the annual Valentine dance of the Maids of Havelock, to be held in the town hall of Havelock on Monday, February 15th. Mr. R. F. Given, pianist, will supply the music. The committee in charge is composed of Misses Bolton, McDonald, Bennington, Lynch and Rose.

The Great Frederick's Joke.

The czar's changing of the name of his second and more modern capital from St. Petersburg to Petrograd may be paralleled by the case of the "new palace," Potsdam, which the Emperor Frederick decreed should henceforth be known as Friedrichskron. This new palace had been built by Frederick the Great at the close of his Seven Years' war just to show his enemies that his exchequer was by no means exhausted, and on its cupola are three nude figures, representing his chief female foes—Maria Theresa, Elisabeth of Russia and La Pompadour—with their backs turned toward their respective countries, supporting his crown of glory, hence "Friedrichskron." But one of the first acts of William II. was to restore to the palace its original name.—London Chronicle.

Music of the Drum.

Musical authorities seem agreed that when used in a proper way the drum is thoroughly musical. The common snare or side drum is freely used in musical composition. A large number of drummers performing simultaneously out of doors produce good music. In this connection Berlioz, the composer, pointed out that a sound that was insignificant when heard singly, such as the clink of one or two muskets at shoulder arms or the thud as the butt comes to the ground at ground arms, becomes brilliant and attractive if performed by a thousand men together.—Exchange.

CONSERVATORY ORCHESTRA CONCERT WON WARM PRAISE

Unquestionably the premier musical event of the season took place last night when the annual concert of the Conservatory of Music was held in the Grand Opera House, drawing one of the biggest and most intellectual audiences of the year. Further than that, it was a perfectly satisfied, nay, a delightful audience, that left the building at the close. Praises were heaped upon Mr. Gliddon for the able program he had prepared and the discernment and skill he displayed in assembling such a capable array of talent. The program started fairly promptly. It was well arranged, and there were no delays. Every contributing factor to it more than fulfilled expectations, which is saying a great deal, when the ability, fame and variety of the talent is considered. Such a combination might give rise to the feeling that a program beyond ordinary ability to appreciate might be supplied, but such was not the case. There was not a solitary contribution on the entire program, but carried an appeal the average ear could grasp and appreciate to the ultimate. Indeed this was remarked upon widely as one of the pleasing elements contributing to the all-round success of the concert.

Those who assisted in entertaining were Miss Lina D. Adamson, violinist; Miss Jeannette Killmaster, pianist; Miss Ada Richardson, soprano; Mr. Frank Oldfield, baritone; Mr. Leo Smith, cellist and the Conservatory of Music orchestra.

To draw distinctions would be impossible. Miss Adamson's work again showed that marvellous control and mastery of her instrument her opening number, "St. Patrick's Day" with variations, being an instantaneous success. Miss Adamson is an adept in bringing out the finer harmonies that lay within the violin, but which only a master can extract. In her heavier selections she was equally clever and annexed a goodly share of the evening's applause.

Mr. Frank Oldfield need never feel friendless in Peterborough. His vocalism won him hosts of friends as it invariably has in the past. Mr. Oldfield is the possesor of a manly voice, robust, rich and expressive and he knows how to control it. His range last night was admirable and in a selection from The Messiah, "Why do the Nations," he hit upon an ideal number that demonstrated its exceptional qualities. But there were few who would not agree that his number "Somewhere a Voice is Calling" was the most beautiful and effective of them all. The tender, simplicity and wealth of sentiment that lies in the words of this song needed just such a deep rich voice as Mr. Oldfield's to drive its meaning home. Intense stillness prevailed and one could have heard the proverbial pin drop, so completely did Mr. Oldfield enrapture the hearts of his audience.

Mr. Leo. Smith, violin-cellist, is an artist from the ground up. Many of his audience while quick to recognize the skill of Mr. Smith felt that a little less of the serious demeanor he maintained would have been appropriate. But Mr. Smith puts soul and temperament into his playing. For all the knowledge apparently of the presence of an audience, they might as well not be there. He throws his heart, soul and body into bringing out harmony and he succeeds. In a specially arranged setting by himself of the Fantasia on "Bizet" from Carmen, Mr. Smith more than delighted his hearers. His versatility was marvellous, and his quick changing from high to low, soft to heavy registers marked his work particularly as that of a master. In "The Swan and the Spanish Dance" he also won rounds of applause.

Miss Jean Killmasster as a pianist is always warmly received by her numerous admirers in this city. She again scored distinctly last evening and won great applause.

Coming down to home vocal talent, it devolved upon Miss Richardson to uphold the already high place in the musical world she has already reached. Her many friends were not disappointed but were more than delighted. Miss Richardson sang, by request, in Italian, with a charming accent and faultless interpretation, a selection entitled Piano, Piano, Canto Pio (Der Freischutz) by Weber. It demanded an encore which was forthcoming. Her triumph of the night came later however when in conjunction with Mr. Oldfield, she sang "Spirit of the Woods," by Parker, a spirited, vivacious and romantic song of love. Her strong, sympathetic and expressive soprano, so her audience felt, never was more popularly demonstrated.

To the Conservatory orchestra, nothing but credit can be applied. An outstanding feature that speaks stronger than words was the close, absorbed attention which was given every number they contributed. They presented a very wide repertoire. The overture "Raymond" was beautifully rendered and as in all their numbers, they displayed precision, balance and ability of a high order. Mr. Gliddon deserves no small tribute of praise for the extremely successful work of the orchestra over which he was in charge.

The members of the Conservatory Orchestra who assisted were:

Violins.

First—Miss Adamson, Miss Palmer, Miss Logan, Dr. Park, and C. Seymour, Mrs. Tomlins.

Seconds—Miss G. Smith, Miss D. Dobbin, Miss Garrett, Miss McCarty, Mr. Fred Hooper, John Bryett and Wm. Common.

Viola—Miss H. Dean, Wm. Leech.

Cello—Neill Smith, Warren Dean, Tom Smith, A. Spellman, Leo Smith.

Bass Viol—Mr. W. Cunningham, Mr. Naples.

Clarionet—Mr. Barnes, Otto Gliddon, Mr. Townsend.

Flute—Mr. McGee.

Bassoon—Mr. Hully.

Cornet—Mr. Hughes, Mr. Knippert.

Trombone—Mr. Gilbert.

Horns—Mr. Wood, Mr. Patterson.

Drums and Accessories—Mr. Beach and Mr. Chambers.

Mr. Gliddon, Musical Director.

The program was stretched over a longer period than was planned, but while this was slightly unfortunate it was ameliorated by the excellence of the program presented.

The accompanists were Miss Pearl McKee, Miss Jeannette Killmaster, Miss Adamson, all of the Conservatory teaching staff, and Mr. Leo Smith, who is fulfilling a special engagement at the Empire Theatre. A Steinway piano of Toronto was used for the occasion.

MARY PICKFORD AS CINDERELLA

The Empire Theatre this week offers a special treat for both old and young in the presentation of "Cinderella" which story is told in four acts. Admirers of Miss Mary Pickford will be delighted with her portrayal of Cinderella. The vanity and selfishness of the two sisters and their discomfiture at the success of Cinderella when it is found the glass slipper fits her foot are brought out in a striking manner.

OBITUARY

MR. W. R. STRICKLAND.

The funeral of Mr. Walter Reginald Strickland took place yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, from the residence of his nephew, Mr. Walter D'C. Strickland, 126 Huntley Street, Rosedale, Toronto. The service, which was private, was conducted by Rev. E. C. Cayley of St. Simon's Church, and interment followed at St. James' Cemetery. The late Mr. Strickland, for many years a well-known architect of Toronto, was born at Lakefield, in August, 1841. He was a son of the late Colonel Samuel Strickland, Reydon Hall, Norfolk, England, and a nephew of the late Agnes Strickland, the English historian.

The deceased was best known as the senior partner of the firm of Strickland, Symons, and Rea, which firm during its career saw the erection of the Toronto Union Station and the plant of the Consumers' Gas Company.

Mr. Strickland had lived at Lakefield for some years. He married Miss Charlotte Emelia Morgan, youngest daughter of the late Peter Morgan of Toronto. A member of the Church of England, he was one of the earliest supporters of St. Anne's Church, on Dufferin Street, Toronto, which he attended for many years.

Two sons and two daughters survive: Harry F. Strickland, chief electrical inspector of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission; Reginald W., with the second contingent; Mrs. Harry F. Mytton, of Winnipeg, and Mrs. Roleston-Tate, of Lakefield, at whose residence he passed away.

MRS. MATILDA REYNOLDS.

POLICE WILL MAKE SOME INQUIRIES

An able bodied young man named Matthew Doody faced Police Magistrate Dumble today on a vagrancy charge. He was not asked to plead but at the request of the chief was remanded a week until some inquiries are made about his life. It is stated that he was formerly a mail clerk on the G.T.R.

Attack of the Cossacks.

The Russian Cossacks have a form of attack which is peculiarly their own. It is known as the "lava." Cossack horses are specially trained to carry out the maneuver. The leading sotnia (squadron) spreads out to right and left, and the others at full speed, form up on either side of it in a semicircle or half moon. Every man with a lance is attended by a man wearing a sword, and all the officers are in front of the men of each sotnia. The other squadrons do not wait for a special order, but at once adopt the same formation endeavoring to surround the enemy from another side. With loud shouts reminiscent of the red Indian warwhoop the Cossacks rush down on the foe, and even though the first assault be repulsed another "lava" pours down on the shaken enemy. This system of attack takes its name, of course, from the liquid products of volcanic activity.—London Mail.

GERMAN LOSSES IN TENS OF THOUSANDS

TWENTY FOUR DIE OF MENINGITIS

War Office Says Canadians Brought Disease With Them

TOTAL DEATH LIST SIXTY-FIVE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 10. — In reference to the exaggerated reports of heavy losses from disease among the Canadian troops encamped on Salisbury Plain, the war office today issued a statement to the effect that only 65 Canadians have died in this camp, and that the total loss from meningitis has been 24 men out of 40 cases reported.

It had been reported that the entire Canadian battalion was suffering from meningitis, and the inference had been drawn that the epidemic was due to bad camp conditions.

According to the war office, the disease was brought with the contingent from Canada.

In reference to the report that seventy per cent. of the Canadian horses are suffering from mud fever, the war office declares only ten per cent. of the Canadian horses are sick, and that only a portion of these had mud fever. The war office also denies the report that it had received applications to billet the men instead of leaving them in the camp.

SPIRITED FIGHTING ON THE AISNE AND IN CHAMPAGNE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 10. — The afternoon statement says: "February 9th saw only artillery engagements along the front. At some places this fighting was fairly spirited, particularly on the Aisne and in Champagne.

"Only one infantry engagement, and this of little importance, has been reported. It occurred in Lorraine to the northeast of Manonviller, where one of our detachments drove back some outposts of the enemy on to the town of Leintrey."

SAW MASSEY MEET DEATH

Girl Was on Opposite Side of Street When Shots Were Fired

TORONTO, Feb. 10. — Evidence was taken from three witnesses last night at the opening of the inquest on the death of Charles Albert Massey, who was shot and killed in front of his own home at 169 Walmer Road on Monday afternoon by 18-year-old Carrie Davies. Chief Coroner A. J. Johnson then adjourned the hearing until next Monday evening. Miss Carrie Davies was not present. According to counsel, H. W. Maw, she has been too agitated and nervous to even give him lucid instructions in the case.

Coroner Johnson was somewhat nettled at the absence of the girl, which prevented the concluding of the inquest, and told the jury that he could not see why her counsel had not brought her.

"I did not wish her here tonight because she is very much agitated," returned Mr. Maw. "The shooting only took place yesterday, and she has not recovered sufficiently to converse with me on the incident. As matters stand now, it is very hard for me to know just what is the best procedure. I know nothing of her friends or relatives, most of whom are in the old country."

In reply to Coroner Johnson, Mr. Maw said he was not prepared to act for the girl in order to conclude the inquest. "I have not even seen the statement she is said to have made to the police," continued counsel. "I think it is most unfair to ask that the girl give evidence at the present time. I am not sure that she can be here at any of the hearing of the inquest."

"Your decision as to whether she will be here cannot carry very much weight with me," replied the coroner.

OFFICERS FOR THIRD CONTINGENT WERE GUESTS OF HONOR

The Peterborough Club members were at home last evening to the officers of the 8th Mounted Rifles and 39th Battalion of infantry who are leaving with the third contingent. The evening took the form of a musical smoker and the occasion was conducted in a most entertaining and pleasurable manner.

It devolved upon Lieut.-Colonel Goodwill of the Home Guards, to propose a toast to "The Departing Officers" which he did very appropriately conveying to the officers on behalf of the members of the Peterborough Club their heartiest hopes for a safe return. This toast was responded to suitably by Major Medd on behalf of the Mounted Rifles and Captain Spencer for the infantry.

A feature of the at home was the presentation of a Masonic ring to Mr. Arthur Kent, the popular and efficient steward of the Peterborough Club for the past five years. It was a total surprise for Mr. Kent but he managed to convey his thanks in a few suitable remarks. Mr. W. H. Denham, vice-president of the club, made the presentation. Mr. Kent is a veteran of the South African war who has enlisted with the Third Contingent.

The officers present were Major Medd, Captain Nelson, of Ottawa, Lieut. Johnston, of Peterborough, Lieut. Sneath, Lieut. Rogers, Captain Spencer, and Lieutenant Eastwood.

Initiative Was Taken by Party in France

JOFFRE OPPOSED

Proposals Were Made by Germany After the Battle

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 10. — Certain French newspapers today reprint, with the consent of the government censors, an article published in the Democrate de Delemont, stating that previous to the battle of the Marne a party existed in France which was ready to sign a peace, at the same time ceding to Germany the towns of Briey and Nancy, French Lorraine, the Island of Madagascar and the protectorate of Morocco as well as paying an indemnity. The article continues:

"General Joffre, the French commander in chief, President Raymond Poincare, and most of the cabinet ministers were opposed to the plan, but the situation became so tense as to necessitate the resignation of Adolphe Messimy as minister of war and the formation of a ministry of national defence."

After the battle of the Marne Germany proposed peace through ex-Premier Joseph Caillaux, offering to give up the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine with the exception of Strassburg, receiving in exchange a small zone of the North Sea coast extending from Calais to Dunkirk.

France in addition was to acknowledge the annexation of Belgium by Germany. The answer to this proposal was the signing of a convention by the Allies to make no separate peace.

HAD TO LEAVE JERUSALEM

Rev. A. E. Thompson Forced to Act on Edict by Turks

WILL SPEAK HERE AT CONVENTION

Rev. A. E. Thompson, who has spent twelve years in Palestine, is coming to Peterborough to take part in the annual convention to be held in Bethany Tabernacle commencing Thursday and continuing to Sunday evening. Mr. Thompson has just arrived in New York on his return from Jerusalem. The following extract from the Alliance Weekly, New York, gives the explanation:

"He left Jerusalem because of an order of expulsion by the Turkish authorities applying to all British residents. He and his wife are British subjects. Mr. Thompson reports considerable difficulty in getting away from Jaffa, but through the powerful and most friendly intervention of Dr. Glazebrook, the American Consul, backed by a strong guard from the American warship, he and his party were able safely to embark with a large number of Jewish refugees."

Rev. Mr. Thompson is not a stranger to Peterborough as he spent some time here before going to Palestine. He was baptized in the Otonabee River.

Another speaker at the convention will be Rev. J. L. Long, of Toronto, Alliance Superintendent.

The public is invited to these meetings.

Said Farewell to Corporal Dummitt

Last evening, after drill at the armouries, No. 5 Company, visited Coleman Bros. grill room and enjoyed refreshments. The guest of the evening was Corporal Chas. Dummitt, who is a volunteer in the Mounted Rifles of the Third Contingent.

Five brothers of the Dummitt family belong to No. 5 Company, Charlie being the second one to volunteer for overseas service. His brother Earnest is with the first contingent. Col. Sergt. Fred Dummitt and Sergt. H. Dummitt still remain with the company.

A pleasant time was spent in songs and speeches and Corporal Dummitt was made to feel that he carried with him the best wishes of the company members. Other guests were Sergt. Instructor Biggs and Sergt. Elliott of the Mounted Rifles and Quartermaster Sergt. Edwards of the 57th Regiment. The proceedings wound up with the singing of God Save the King.

WATCH PRESENTED.

Mr. Trevor L. Cuffe who has been connected with the post office for the past three years was presented with a wrist watch by Mr. Edgar on behalf of the staff. He leaves with the 8th Mounted Rifles.

MANAGEMENT OF HOUSE OF REFUGE AT LAKEFIELD

Editor Review,

Sir,—Owing to the publicity given by your valuable paper to a matter with regard to the management of the House of Refuge, which was under discussion at the last session of the County Council, and the scathing criticisms which some of the members of the Council have received as a result, I would beg permission to make a few observations relative to the matter.

I am somewhat surprised that the Examiner reporter should not have given all the details in regard to the case, when he made the attempt to write it up at all. Was it because some of the older and more experienced County fathers had intimated to him that their names were not to be mentioned in the discussion? Peculiar, was it not, that those members at whose instance the discussion took place, and they do not live a hundred miles from my friends Mr. R. N. Scott, were not represented as having anything to say whatever, but the onus of the whole question was thrown on the poor, misguided and, I suppose, illiterate members from the East Riding, who, according to the same correspondent, have always been looking for trouble since the opening of the House seven or eight years ago.

The grievances which were supposed to exist were complained of by members formerly on the board of management, and in their opinion

The annual meeting of the Stoney Lake Cottagers Association was held yesterday in the offices of Hall and Hall when statements and reports were read. The financial statement showed a nice profit on the year's operations.

Germans Lose Heavily in Men and Guns When Driven From Positions

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 10. — The General Staff official statement says that on Sunday Germans undertook an offensive in East Prussia, and that east of Tilsit they were driven back and one battalion was completely annihilated. During six days' fighting in front of Borjimow and Goumine, a number of corpses abandoned in front of the Russian positions compels the belief that the German losses in that vicinity must have reached several tens of thousands.

In the Carpathians, in the vicinity of Mt. Loupkow, the pursuit of the enemy continued, and captures were made in one day of 69 officers, 5,200 men and 18 machine guns.

Fighting on Sunday in the region of Koziouwka with Germans who advanced over the Tukholka Pass was particularly violent. Germans twice captured a certain height held by the Russians, but were finally dislodged after bayonet fighting on an unprecedented scale. The whole side of the hill was covered with German corpses, and in front of one position one thousand German dead were counted.

PARIS, Feb. 10. — A despatch from Tenedos says several English and French aeroplanes flew over Turkish Thrase yesterday, and even as far as Adrianople, where bombs were dropped on the forts.

JUDGMENT IS AGAINST THE CHURCH

Judge Huycke Finds Church is not Entitled to Its Claim

Must Pay Taxes for Garbage Collection

That churches are not exempt from paying taxes for garbage collection is shown in the judgment handed out today by His Honor Judge Huycke in the recent case of George St. Methodist Church vs. City of Peterborough to recover the sum of $84.00 which was paid by the treasurer of the church trustees to the city for garbage taxes for the year 1913. The following is the complete finding:—

"Action to recover money—$84.00 said to be paid by mistake and illegally collected as taxes. No consideration given.

This money was paid by Mr. Brownscombe, treasurer of plaintiffs to the City Tax Collector for what was known as a garbage tax. Brownscombe received the tax bill and paid it without a resolution of the Board authorizing him to do so. No meeting was held about the time of his receipt of the tax notice and he paid it on his own motion to save the penalty to be added. He had always paid bills where penalty added or discount allowed without waiting for special authorization—his action in such cases being always approved and ratified at a subsequent board meeting.

This was such a bill, paid to save the penalty and strictly speaking the plaintiffs would have difficulty in convincing the ordinary individual it was paid by mistake. But assuming it was so paid under mistake the further ground remains, was it illegally and improperly collected by the city. To this question the answer must be in the negative and the action therefore fails.

This garbage by-law and taxation may be a hardship and unjust. As to that I express no opinion and should not if I would. My only task is to determine is it legal and I think it is. I do not make the law; I can only strive to administer the law as and when made.

The Municipal Art provides inter alia that Municipal Councils of cities and towns may enact by-laws for a system of garbage collection and

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1915

A MADE-IN-CANADA ART AND LITERATURE

SPEAKING with a citizen of this city the other day in conversation, it was remarked that the United States has produced very few great men since the Civil War. Before that time there were great Americans who left the stamp of character, of individuality, on their work and country. In politics, in literature, in education, there were men who were outstanding figures that are wanting since that great struggle. It is true that American literature has had some great names to its credit since the war against slavery, such as Longfellow, Emmerson, and Hawthorne, but the great industrial expansion that followed made room for a commercialism that overshadowed all other fields of activity. Art was developed along commercial lines, for what it would bring, so that the aim was to produce "best sellers." Quality gave way to quantity. The public taste has not been trained to appreciate the best that American life could produce, but an unlettered public with crude tastes and coarse instincts have set the standard for that which has been produced in recent years.

Canadian art has been in many respects merely an adjunct of this same commercialized American spirit. The race for dividends suppressed the finer sensibilities until a senatorship made a taste for some form of art not only essential, but fashionable. It was more necessary for those in society to be able to speak glibly of art galleries in Europe than intelligently of tendencies in Canadian thought. A kind of pseudo literary chatter was the accomplishment rather than an attempt to do or learn or improve.

One of the results of this great war ought to be a return to better things. The sobering effect, the depletion in business, the loss of wealth and of human lives, the depressing effect of the conflict, ought to turn the public mind forcibly to serious things. That will mean a demand for better productions in literature, in art, in drama, and a revulsion against so much of that frivolous, trashy stuff with which the public has been bombarded for so long. Canadians have not only endured insipid American humor and crass American criticism on life, but paid high prices to hear it. The humor and philosophy of Broadway reflects in no way the ideals and tendencies of Canadian life. We believe that the bulk of it very poorly reflects the living currents of American thought, but, through commercial organization, Broadway largely dominates the American people. The war has given strength to the cry made in Canada for Canadian industry and commerce. The time is now upon the Canadian people to strike a blow for freedom in its art, to demand a drama reflecting Canadian life, a literature of quality, a public of discriminating tastes and fine sensibilities. Opportunity is knocking at the door of the Canadian people for their art and literature, as well as for their goods and trade.

In this connection, an article by Arthur Stringer, the well-known Canadian author, in the Canada Monthly, is appropos:

Canada has no drama, says Mr. Stringer. Our great Dominion, flung from sea to sea, with a national life as abounding in vigor as it is distinctive in character, with the stamp of bigness on both its accomplishments and its potentialities, is without a stage of its own, is without a school of dramatists, and is without even so much as a tradition of criticism. Canada has not one actor or actress of its own. Nor has it one dramatic composition in any way expressive of its wider issues of existence. Nor has it a tatter of true comedy or tragedy in any way representative of its social conditions. In other words, Canada is the only nation in the world whose stage is entirely and arbitrarily controlled by aliens. It is the only country of continental dimensions that depends on foreigners for that spiritual refreshment and inspiration which may and must be derived from theatric entertainment. And it seems the only country, that having achieved political independence, is content to stand divorced from dramatic consciousness.

Not that Canada is without interest in the drama. Over four million dollars' worth of new theatres were built in this country during the three years that ended with 1911. From 1911 to the end of 1913, it has been publicly announced, the sum of seven million dollars was spent for the same purpose. During the present season a provincial English company playing repertory in the mushroom city of Calgary (although headed, it must be acknowledged, by a London star of undoubted ability) is able to boast of weekly receipts exceeding twelve thousand dollars. Vancouver, the fourth city in the Dominion, is the proud possessor of no less than seven theatres. And in one season the city of Toronto, it has been conservatively estimated, spends one and one-half million dollars in theatrical amusement.

But we now approach the remarkable phase of this somewhat remarkable situation. Canada, it is true, spends its money lavishly enough on the theatre, and the Canadian city is as ready to proffer housing to the itinerant apostles of Thespis as is the rural town to lend a vacant lot for the tented glories of the visiting circus. But in the creation and control of that will-o-the-wisp chain of spectacles which flit like a stream of Halley's comets across its horizon, it has no voice and no influence. Its plays are sent to it by unseen powers, doubtless beneficent, but at times inscrutable in their ministrations. At the door of the Canadian city, drama is dumped ready-made; and it must take what is given or go hungry. In the offices of kind-hearted Hebraic gentlemen along that far-off canyon of noise and vulgarity known to The Profession as "Broadway," are manipulated the strings of Canadian dramatic destiny. From the theatrical standpoint, our Dominion is a mere appendage of New York. And sometimes, from the metropolitan standpoint, the most that it can be called is an appendicle.

A FARMER'S SPECIAL.

THE FOLLOWING NOTICE of motion appears on the first issue of this session's parliamentary Order Paper:

> "February 4.—Mr. Lemieux—Proposed Resolution—That in the opinion of this House, in view of present circumstances, it is highly expedient to revise our immigration policy, so as to attract as many immigrant farmers as possible to Canada."

Why "farmers"? Why spend the good money of those already here, in any calling, to induce competitors to come in and "bear" the market? The policy of the Opposition in this respect has one virtue, that of consistency. Liberal politicians still worship at the shrine of Free Trade and Free Competition. Free Labour is one of the necessary adjuncts of Free Trade. Without free labour competition there could be no free trade. The truth is, that as in all other cases the happy medium is the best, as implied in wise administration and a wise consideration of the actual business of a nation and of the people within that nation. The day of theories is gone by. Sacrificing a people to theories is worse than wrong. It is wicked. We must beware of sacrificing any one branch of Canadian industry for the selfish benefit of any other, or of any class, financial, capitalistic or otherwise.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

VERY COMMENDABLE efforts have been made to secure work for the unemployed with farmers by the Reading Camp Association. It is anxious that the suggestion that each farmer should billet an unemployed man or woman for three months as a temporary measure of relief be emphasized, as that is a very practical way of helping to solve this problem. The man out of work who wants to work can be given a job in this way, if farmers would signify their intention of taking a man, to the Association, 43 Victoria street, Toronto. Farmers can help in this way and at the same time get good men to work on their farms.

CANADA has now an army of 92,000 men. It is daily growing larger and more efficient. Already the Princess Pats are on the firing line, plugging away bravely at the German lines. Of the 31,000 on Salisbury Plain, several thousands have been moved into France already. Another division is almost ready to proceed overseas; and there are many thousands yet to draw on. So far as the British Empire is concerned, the war is just beginning.

SENATOR LANDRY, a very prominent French-Canadian, said at the Monument National, Montreal, that Quebec had respected the rights of the minority, and demanded that Ontario do the same. Who owns this country, anyhow? Is it French or is it English?

TWELVE HUNDRED MEN are "mobilized" at Guelph. Guelph is represented in Parliament by Mr. Guthrie, K. C., one of the front benchers of the Opposition and one of the Government's most merciles critics. Verb. Sap.

LORD KITCHENER has said: "I do not know when the war will end; I do know when it will begin—in May next." That was a great saying and means "business." And Canada's 100,000 men mean business, too.

German Comment on Russian Artillery.

(Militarwochenblatt((Prussian.)

In the battles near Iwangorod it was not possible to discover the position of the Russian batteries, except with the help of airmen. The Russian artillery, whenever possible, avoids the choice of positions behind or in the neighbourhood of decided rises of ground. The batteries are not afraid of marshy ground and meadows, if there is time to prepare the positions. Northwest of Iwangorod even heavy artillery was placed on the marshy bank of the Vistula. The sunken positions provide almost always complete cover, and when this was not the case the Russians constructed a series of masks in line ahead, which were practically undistinguishable from the surrounding country.

Will Not Emulate Germany.

(London Times.)

The best answer we can give to Germany is not to emulate her lust for blind destruction, however great the provocation, but to press forward our preparations for helping to relieve France and Belgium from the blight which has fallen upon them. When we strike home against Germany we will not soil our hands with these shameful crimes. We will fight honourably, in the assurance that victory will be ours, and that the earth will be purged of these relapses into barbarism.

British Warship Names.

(Newcastle-on-Tyne Chronicle.)

During the last few years quite a number of ships have been named in honour of our colonies. The Dominion, Commonwealth and Africa are all first-class battleships, while the Sydney was the cruiser that cooked the goose of the notorious Emden. And the Good Hope, cruiser, as is well known, went down fighting bravely in the recent battle of Coronel, in the Pacific.

Self-Help Encouraged.

(London Free Press.)

The only intereference the British Government seems likely to make with the grain resources of the country is to provide the farmers with good seed and tell them to go ahead and use it.

We See What Is Involved.

(Westminster Gazette.)

It is the free peoples of the Colonies and the United States who see most clearly what is involved in the idea of militarism as it is at work in Germany.

THE PROGRESS OF THE MUTUAL OF CANADA

During the Year 1914

The past year has been one during which financial institutions have had wind and tide against them. Among all such, none have withstood the stress and strain more successfully than the life insurance companies. Indeed, the experiences of the past year have been a wonderful vindication of the claims of life insurance organizations. Thousands of policyholders have found that while many of the securities held by them fell in value or became entirely worthless, their life insurance contracts remain unaffected. We believe that public confidence in the institution of life insurance was never more deep-seated, and it is safe to predict that there will be a wonderful expansion of business for all the companies when normal conditions are restored.

These remarks are suggested by the experience of The Mutual Life of Canada, whose annual statement we publish on another page. The panic accompanying the outbreak of war added to the depression which prevailed previous to that event has in no way disturbed the equanimity of "Canada's Only Mutual." The only perceptible effect was in the amount of new business written. Instead of the usual 10 to 20 percent. increase in the amount of new business written, this year on account of the heavy weather they have contented themselves with duplicating the amount written in 1913 with a small margin in favor of 1914. The actual figures are: for 1913, $14,400,731, and for 1914, $14,525,411. This result, achieved without special campaigning, in such a year as 1914, shows what a strong place The Mutual holds in the confidence of the Canadian public. The total insurance in force now amounts to $94,477,359.

The most notable feature in the experience of The Mutual during the past year was the amount of surplus earned. The large increase is probably due to a favorable mortality coupled with the high interest it was possible for the company to command. In any case, it is a matter for sincere gratification for all the policyholders of the company, because it is upon good results in this respect that the company's ability rests to continue the payment of liberal dividends to the policyholders. The company's reputation for careful, economical management is well known, and that its policy in this respect has been maintained is evidenced by the low ratio of expense to income, which, coupled with the two factors just noted, resulted in the handsome surplus earnings of $1,035,778.14, an increase over the preceding year of $183,615.14.

Altogether the past year has been one which may be contemplated by the policyholders with entire satisfaction and clearly shows that The Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada occupies a place in the very first class of solid and permanent institutions.

A Problem.

Little eight-year-old Florence had a birthday recently and her mother gave her a party. During the afternoon the little girls had been comparing their ages.

"Mother," asked Florence, during the evening, in a perplexed manner, "how does it come that all the other little girls of my age are nine or ten and I'm only eight?"—Harper's Magazine.

DEATH HOOK OF THE AIR

Bomb Device Evolved by an American to Destroy Dirigibles

The horrors of the Zeppelin dirigibles seem now to have encountered an invention that will put them out of action and end their apparently irresistible bomb dropping. It is an American invention, that of Joseph A. Steinmetz, president of the Aero club of Philadelphia. It is a destroyer of aircraft, said to be farther reaching than any bomb dropping device or aerial gun invented. It bears the same relation that the torpedo destroyer does to a navy.

An aeroplane cannot carry the amount of explosive that a dirigible can, but it is faster and the Steinmetz device is to destroy dirigibles as well as other aeroplanes, for it is to be mounted on the swiftest of planes. It is a bomb with contact devices, hooks springing out on all sides.

It is let down by a slender wire from the aeroplane, which swiftly mounts above the slower dirigible. When the latter comes in contact with the wire this draws up until the hooks of the bombs, like the tentacles of a spider, become attached, and the explosion follows. The apparatus is simple and is characterized as one of the most terrible of death dealing devices.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Coal for Departmental Dredges, Ontario and Quebec," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M. on Monday, March 1st, 1915, for the supply of Best Quality, Steam Coal, to be delivered in quantities and at places mentioned on forms of tender.

Forms of tender can be obtained at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the contract. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

A War On Waste

Economy is best practised by cutting out waste. One bar of N.P. SOAP costs 15¢ and contains more and better soap than four or five cakes of other kinds at 5¢ a cake. Why not save the 10¢ by cutting up the soap yourself? N.P. SOAP has been Made in Canada for over 35 years

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

"You'd better be careful, Joe," he said, with a wretched effort at a smile. "I'm on my uppers, and every shake of my hand may cost you $5."

"Well, well!" exclaimed Coleman in sham trepidation. "Here, sit down on that barrel and have a cigar. Bless you, lad, it's like old times to see you again."

Joe was a common old fellow, but his robust good will and sympathy were very warming. Puffing at his cigar and leaning against an anchor, he told Matt "to get on with his tale of woe."

Matt obeyed, but with reservations, saying briefly that he had tried shore life and failed and wanted to return to the islands.

"That's easy," said Coleman. "No need to be so blue about it. I'm good for a hundred dollars. I always liked you, Broughton, and when I like a man it don't stop at the trousers pocket. Bless your handsome face, it don't. All you've to do is to catch the mail boat and make a bee line for the cocoanuts and the girls."

"I have mine with me, Joe. I'm married."

"Oh, I say!" Coleman exclaimed, rubbing his chin and looking worried. "You've been going it, haven't you? A hundred dollars is about my limit. I couldn't go more than a hundred, and that's what they charge for a single passage to Samoa. Hold on, though, I have it! Ship steward or work your way and let wifey be the passenger."

Coleman suddenly dashed to the door and grabbed the arm of a man who had stopped for a moment to peer in. He was a short, thick set person of a seafaring cut, with the appearance of a north German or a Scandinavian and popping blue eyes that danced with good humor. He was effusively introduced to Matt as Captain Schwartz of the schooner Esmeralda.

"I fancied you had up with the mudhook and cleared a month ago!" cried Coleman.

"No such luck," growled Captain Schwartz in a strong German accent. "Everybody behind; everybody humbugging: drouble, drouble, drouble all the time."

"Here's some more," said Coleman cheerfully, indicating Matt. "He's going with you, and when may he come aboard? He's a south sea captain like yourself and has lost his ship."

"Ship? Vat ship?" inquired Schwartz, awakening to interest.

"The topsail schooner North Star," said Matt in a shiver of expectation and hope.

"He's stuck here without a cent," put in Coleman, "and it don't matter to him much where you land him as long as it is something dry, with a palm tree on it and cold missionary on the sideboard."

They all laughed at this, and then Schwartz said, "I wasn't meaning to stop anywhere this side of the Solomons, but he can gome; he can gome." Laying his hand on Matt's shoulder, he added: "Old south sea captains should stand together. You'd have done the same for me, and dat is all there is to it."

"His wife's along," interjected Coleman, winking at Matt, "and a corking young woman she is too. Sings splendid and plays the mandoleen, and it will be dandy of a moonlight night to sit on the poop and hear her."

"You got a wife?" asked the captain, apparently much pleased. "Say, but dat will be fine! Young, she is?"

"Twenty three," replied Matt.

Schwartz looked happier than ever.

"You come on to Malaita," he said. "Me, I am married, too, and got two leetle babies, so high—everything fine. See, but my wife she is very lonesome for white society. I think she jump for joy to see another young white lady. And I'll get you a good posection on the plantation or in the company's store."

Then nothing would satisfy Schwartz but that he should return with Matt and be present when the great news was broken to Chris. Saying goodby to Coleman, they started walking arm in arm, like a pair of cronies; for the Esmeralda was to sail the next day, and Schwartz had promised him the owner's cabin, as well as inviting him and Chris to dine on board that very night. By way of celebration Matt bought a bunch of roses and a box of candy, and it was in this gala fashion and with overflowing spirits that he mounted the stairs of No. 7 and knocked at Chris' door.

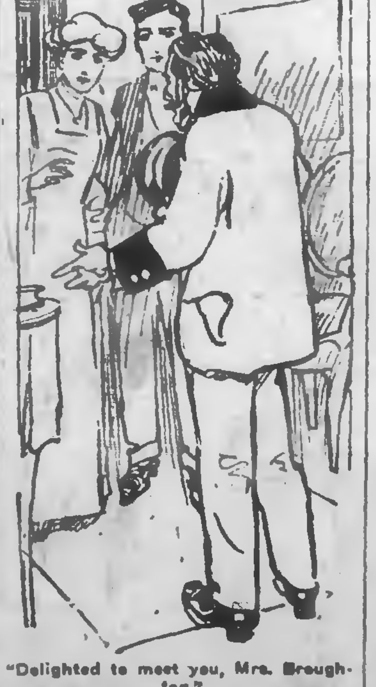
"Shake hands with the best and kindest fellow in the world," he exclaimed as she shrank at the sight of a stranger. "Chris, this is Captain Schwartz of the schooner Esmeralda, who has dropped from heaven to rescue us."

"Dis is the first time I was ever reported from heaven," said Schwartz, laughing explosively. "Delighted to meet you, Mrs. Broughton. No, thank you, I vill not sit down. I weeshed merely to give my invitation in person and extend the courtesies of my ship to so charming a lady."

"The captain wants us to dine on board tonight," Matt explained, "and tomorrow we sail with him to the islands! Just think of it, Chris—we're sailing tomorrow, actually sailing tomorrow!"

"Anywhere you like, old chap," put in Schwartz royally, "though if you will listen to me, Mrs. Broughton, you will go on to Malaita, where my wife is, and the captain can get a good posection."

"And we're to have the owner's cabin, Chris," cried Matt. "Did you ever hear the like of that! Isn't that kind, though? Isn't that wonderful! Isn't that dropping from heaven?"



"Delighted to meet you, Mrs. Broughton."

Chris, now excited too, admitted that it was, and with shining eyes regarded the man to whom they owed so much. They took a street car to the waterfront, where they walked along on foot until they reached the wharf where the Esmeralda was lying. In contrast with the towering clipper ships all about her the Esmeralda appeared to be a toy, and so diminutive that they had to descend to her deck by a ladder. She was a typical south sea schooner, built on sharp and yacht like lines and heavily sparred for her size.

In the little main cabin they were made acquainted with Mr. Brandeis the mate, who was making up his accounts at the table, with small piles of gold and silver coin stacked on the various bills. Mr. Brandeis was a very fair, irritable looking man of fifty or so, with a lank mustache, who spoke no English, and shook hands solemnly at his superior's bidding.

"A goot chap," said Captain Schwartz smiling, laying his hand on the mate's shoulder. "Reads books—all the time he reads books—and never talks except to contradict you, and say you are a liar on page 79, or a fool on page 203. Some day I'll throw him overboard and shoot his books after him and say: 'Go and prove it to the feesh!'"

Beyond the captain's, and reached by a narrow passageway, was the "owner's cabin"—another cubical with barely room for a couple of bunks superimposed.

"This is where you will live," said the captain to Chris, who was regarding everything with much curiosity. "And if you wish to do any shopping, I hope you will not forget our old establishment peesiness!" As he spoke he opened the door opposite and ushered her into the trade room, a veritable floating shop, with a counter and shelves, scales and primitive showcases. It contained everything under the sun, from brass wedding rings, cheap watches, tools of all kinds, jewsharps and flints for flintlock muskets, to boat anchors, kegs of dynamite, barrels of beef and pork, and innumerable bolts of gaily printed cottons.

"But what do you want with all those things?" asked Chris, to whom a sea shop was a novelty.

"Sell them to the noble savage at 300 per cent profit," returned Schwartz, laughing.

"But what are those guns over there for in the rack?"

"To shoot him if he ain't satisfied. They are a tricky lot, Mrs. Broughton, and, like all customers, are ready to beat you down, only they do it with a cloob."

Chris shrank a little closer to Matt, who reassured her by remarking that their islands would not be like that.

"You've never told me where you want to go," put in Schwartz. "Vare is that delightful place so different from the Solomons?"

"Really, captain, I don't want to take you out of your course," returned Matt seriously. "The Gilbert islands are in your way. Drop us there anywhere. The Tokelaus would suit me best."

"The Tokelaus? Vare is dem?"

"Well, the Union islands—to call them the name they have on most charts."

"The Union islands! Yaas, I know the Union islands. A little south, but what's that? Old south sea captains should stand together—that's what I say!"

"Oh, captain, I'll never be able to thank you enough!"

"Dat's all foolishness, Broughton. You would do the same for me."

CHAPTER XIV.

A Startling Discovery.

TEN days had passed since the tug cast them off beyond the Golden Gate and with three toots of farewell left them to shift for themselves—ten days of heavenly peace, with the sails scarcely touched and rustling softly before an unfailing breeze. In all there were seven men forward, who might have been seven authors, from the assiduous way they read—grave, oldish men for the most part, always glued to books under that tarpaulin in the waist. Herman was the only youth among them—tall, whitey-blond Herman, who tried to make friends with the passengers till he was squelched by the mate.

Schwartz, though less of a reader than Brandeis or the others, very soon ran dry as a conversationalist. He became bottled up and uncommunicative, spending hours at a time in his cabin or walking up and down the poop in a brown study none dared to disturb. This was the only prerogative of a captain that he treated himself to, beyond taking his place at the head of the table. Mr. Brandeis took all the observations, gave all the orders, shortened sail or ran up kites without even going through the form of consulting his superior. He was the virtual commander of the ship and made very little pretense that he was not. Matt noted that Schwartz stood no watch, but allowed his to be taken by the second mate, a ponderous individual of sixty, with white side whiskers, who was called Krantz and berthed forward with the men.

This familiarity between officers and men was new to Matt. Mr. Brandeis was not above mixing with them under the tarpaulin and adding his cigar and book to that sprawling circle. Matt had to admit that the mate did not appear to lose caste in consequence. On the contrary, he was treated with great respect, and Herman in particular never failed to spring up at his approach.

The two Japanese, Yoshida, the steward, and Fusi, the cook, were not behindhand, either, as readers.

Mrs. Penfield Gets an Order Hitherto Reserved For Royal Ladies.

MRS. FREDERICK C. PENFIELD.

Mrs. Frederick C. Penfield, wife of the American ambassador at Vienna, has had an unusual distinction conferred on her by the aged emperor of Austria. It is the award of the grand cross of the Order of Elizabeth—an honor given for the first time to a lady not connected with a royal family. The decoration was bestowed in appreciation of the work which she has done in caring for the sick and wounded soldiers in Austria.

Mrs. Penfield was before her present marriage a widow. She is the daughter of the late William Weightman, the millionaire chemist, who left her a fortune estimated at about $50,000,000. When in 1908 she married Frederick Courtland Penfield, author and diplomat, she distributed a million dollars in gifts to nephews and nieces and in contributions to various charities. All her life she has been a generous giver to those philanthropies that seemed to her most worthy. In 1909 the pope conferred on her the papal title of marchioness. Previous to this he had presented her with the grand cross of the Order of the Holy Sepulcher.

In Vienna the Penfields occupy the palatial house of Baron Louis Rothschild, which they leased from him when Mr. Penfield was appointed ambassador to Austria-Hungary. The mansion stands in the midst of one of the finest private parks in the city. It adjoins the palace of Archduke Salvador.

FILING RECIPES.

Method by Which Unsatisfactory Ones May Be Eliminated.

Recipes clipped from periodicals or newspapers may be filed thus:

A five cent package of white court plaster, a scrap book and a pair of shears are the equipment. Any old book will do if you haven't a scrap book.

Snip the sheets of court plaster into strips one-quarter of an inch wide and, say, an inch long, and lay them in the first page of the scrap book. When reading have the scrap book and scissors at hand, clip as you read and paste the clippings in the scrap book with the strips of plaster.

Use two strips to each clipping and put them on the long way of the strip, half on the clipping and half on the leaf, so that the clipping is hinged to the page. You have no idea how many clippings you can get on a page in this way, slipping them half under each other, if you care to. You can read through the bit of adhesive plaster that covers any print.

The great advantage of this plan is that one can take a recipe out, either to file permanently or throw away, without marring the page. The scrap book may be divided into subheads for meats, soups, hot breads, fruit desserts, puddings and the like and filed under these headings.

Short Names Fashionable.

Long names and many initials are no longer smart. One must be satisfied with a Christian name and a surname if she would be quite up to the latest in the world of fashion. Even a married woman is not entitled to more than two initials if she considers herself smart. Perhaps the idea is due to the fact that monograms of two letters are usually more artistic than when three letters are used and certainly easier to decipher.

Manifold Uses of Ammonia.

A bottle of ammonia is one of the household necessities and can be used for many purposes. It is a great aid in washing fine clothes, a tablespoonful to every gallon of water being sufficient amount to use. The sink, washstand, vessels used, are all made clean and sweet with ammonia.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Stains on baking dishes can be easily removed by dipping a piece of flannel in whitening and rubbing well into the stain.

Brass or silver that has been lacquered should never be cleaned with any metal polish, but merely rubbed with a soft cloth, then perhaps with a little dry whiting.

Several layers of newspapers make a warm covering for a bed if placed between a cover of unbleached calico, or even a cretonne cover or old curtain, tacked together.

Candle ends and pieces of wax that drop off the candles should be put into a jar with a small piece of beeswax and melted together, then a little turpentine added. This makes a good polish for linoleum and stained floors.

Jellied Peaches.

For making these drain the sirup from a jar of peaches and cut the fruit into small pieces. Measure the sirup, and if there is not enough to make one pint add enough water to make the desired quantity. Heat the sirup to the boiling point and stir in one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin softened in one-half cupful of water. Stir until dissolved; add one tablespoonful of lemon juice, let stand in a cool place until it begins to thicken; then add the peaches, turn into a mold and let harden. Serve with whipped cream.

Fresh Fruit Cake.

Two two eggs with the whites and yolks beaten separately; one cupful sugar, one-half cupful boiling milk, a little salt, one cupful pastry flour, one and one-quarter teaspoonfuls baking powder. Flavor with orange. Bake one-half hour. When cold split and fill with the following mixture: Stiffly beat the white of one egg, grated rind and juice of one-half orange; confectioner's sugar to spread and not run.

Frosting.—One-half white and one-half yolk of one egg. A little orange juice and confectioner's sugar to spread.

Corn Salad With Mayonnaise.

Line a salad bowl with small white leaves of a head of lettuce and heap the kernels of stewed canned corn in center. Pour the mayonnaise over the whole, being sure to have plenty of it. The toothsomeness of corn as a salad ingredient is just becoming known. It is much better eaten alone with a mayonnaise than mixed with other vegetables.

Puree of Sweet Potatoes.

Peel and boil sweet potatoes about one hour. Or if convenient bake them, as this increases their sweetness. Mash through a coarse sieve add a large tablespoonful butter and enough hot milk to make soft and yet retain shape when heaped in a mound. Season. Pile on platter, make depression in center and fill with rich tomato sauce.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

EDUCATED

Just think, our little Mary Jane
Will graduate this year!
I bet the people all will stare
And say, "Oh, see who's here!"
My, but she knows an awful lot!
You never would have said
She could have got so many facts
In just one little head.

When I come home and want to know
About the wars with Spain
She doesn't have to get a book
To make the matter plain,
And if I want to spell a word
Or straighten out a date
She finds out what it is I want
And gives it to me straight.

I bet you cannot give the year
That Caesar conquered Gaul,
I bet you cannot tell offhand
Who built the Chinese wall.
Well, little things like that would not
Be anything for her.
Why, she can tell when the eclipse
Must certainly occur.

You wouldn't think it, would you, say?
Why, not so long ago
She hardly knew her A B C's!
My, how the children grow!
But she is going to graduate,
That tiny little tot,
And she will do the thing up right,
For my, she knows a lot!

ORDERED TO HOIST FLAG

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Ambassador Page, at London yesterday, cabled the State Department that he had obtained confirmation from the British Foreign Office of the published report that the British Government had admitted instructing the captain of the Lusitania to raise the American flag over his vessel, claiming the right to such action.

The Ambassador said he had not received any official communication on the matter from the British Foreign Office, but had merely obtained verbal confirmation.

He transmitted a copy of the announcement published in the London papers, but his message gave no details of the Lusitania incident.

Although the use of the American flag by the Lusitania and the intimation that it will further be falsely flown by belligerent merchant vessels as a blind to enemies is distasteful to the administration; the President said yesterday that such occurrences were uncommon. He indicated, however, that he did not consider the incident closed.

A HUGE BLUNDER

Germany's War Zone Idea Likely to Cost Her Dear

LONDON, Feb. 10.—It is now understood the Government will not hold the Wilhelmina itself for a prize court, but will send the cargo of grain there in order to have it legally disposed of. The steamer put in at Falmouth yesterday, but no official action was taken. There was once an intention of simply purchasing the cargo, but this appears to be abandoned. Should the owners of the cargo, however, accept the Belgium relief commissions offer of purchase the British Government will assent. The German proclamation whereby the Government took over all the foodstuffs created a legal presumption that the Wilhelmina's food would reach Germany.

Germany's decree is regarded here as a monumental blunder. England was facing the problem of making food absolute contraband when the decree saved the Government from taking such a drastic and unprecedented step. There is not the slightest doubt there of the complete correctness of England's position. The case is one of great importance, however, and the attitude of America is awaited with interest.

More Baby-Killing.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—German artillery is actively bombarding the French towns of Rheims, Soissons, Betheney and Pont-a-Mousson, as well as numerous villages. All have been raked by shells, while the entire population of the towns is living in the cellars. A woman and her son, aged twelve, were killed at Rheims. A baby was killed at Pont-a-Mousson. Otherwise the damage was only material.

ARRESTS MADE IN OTONABEE

Young Men Appear in Police Court and Bail is Granted

On two charges, both of a serious character, Harry Redmond and Louis Sharpe were placed under arrest yesterday in Otonabee township and brought to the police station. It is alleged that they committed wilful injury to a cutter and harness belonging to Michael Fitzgerald to the extent of $10, and that they unlawfully did post for transmission or delivery through the mail to Michael Fitzgerald, a letter of an indecent and immoral character. Neither were asked to plead or elect on the two charges but a remand until Tuesday, February 16th, was allowed on the request of the Crown. The two young men will be defended by F. D. Kerr and C. R. Widdifield who applied for bail this morning on their behalf. His Worship agreed upon $200 and two securities of $100 each which were put up by Robert J. Sharpe, brother of one of the young men, and S. Redmond, father of the other.

It is stated that spite actuated the young men in connection with the alleged offences and that it arose over a deal regarding the purchase of a farm. The young men are said to have endeavored to injure the reputation of Mr. Fitzgerald by writing derogatory things about him.

MARVELOUS MACHINERY FOR WHOLESALE MURDER WAR'S GREATEST CONTRIBUTION TO PROGRESS

Great are the advances which the present war has already marked in man-killing machinery.

At its beginning the Germans developed a complete surprise in their now famous "42-centimeter" howitzer. Contrary to early reports, it was not made by the Krupps but in the Austrian works of Skoda; and it is the belief in military circles that, at the war's outbreak, the Germans had but two of these great guns, so effective at Maubeuge and Namur.

But from the allies' point of view that was two too many; for the 2000-pound shell from this 16.8-inch bore weapon, with its 36,000-yard range, fired high over the fortification selected as its target, falls with a velocity so irresistible as to crash through stone or steel like a bullet through butter, afterward exploding with more than the force of a thunderbolt.

The steel-capped gun chambers in the forts at Liege and Namur were pierced by shells from a smaller howitzer, of Krupp manufacture, known as the 28-centimeter type. With a bore of 11.2 inches, this gun hurls a projectile weighing 760 pounds a distance of nearly six miles. Once such a shell explodes within a confined space, it not only showers upon all living persons within the compartment a deluge of death-dealing bullets and fragments of steel but, to complete the certainty of destruction, generates a suffocating gas.

In point of explosives the Germans had also an initial advantage through their use, by a secret process, of a nitrated gas-tar by-product, known to scientists as "tri-nitro-toluene." Multiply by five the power of the fiercest explosive you know, and you will have some idea of what "tri-nitro-toluene" is like. Compared with it, British cordite is as weak tea to Jersey applejack.

But these smashing howitzers, though spelling quick ruin for the most pretentious fortifications, are of little or no use in field operations. Here the first half-year of war's stern test has fully confirmed the glowing advance notices of the pet of the French artillerist, the so-called "75."

This weapon shoots, at the rate of 15 a minute, a 15-pound shell five or more miles. It is comparatively light and easily handled, works on a pivot so that one sighting suffices for a number of shots; is equipped automatically to take up its own recoil without disturbing its aim; and when one of its shells bursts, the area of death-deal is about twice the size of an average city lot; or, say, 60 feet by 300.

Locate a battery of these field pieces within, say, four miles of an enemy's trench; and, if the entrenched enemy can be reached at all; if his protection be not perfect, it is like turning furrows to plot the trench and sweep it forward and backward till not a soul is left alive.

All this, of course, upon the assumption that the enemy's field pieces let you do it.

To the flying machinethe god of modern war must at this point take off his hat and make a profound salute.

Imagine the difficulty of getting the right range on a target four to five miles away if you had no better guidance than the directions of some observer equally or further remote from the place you want to hit.

But the aviators not only all right over the objective spot but, by wireless, or by other signalling equally swift, let you know if the first shot fell short or overshot and how much, making the correction of range a matter of simple mathematics.

This is the one big new contribution of military science thus far in the present war to efficiency in murder by wholesale.

The second is the perfection of shell construction and propulsion as shown at Liege, Namur, Maubeuge and Antwerp, a point originally of German advantage, but said now to be more evenly balanced, at least among the western allies.

Not the least novel of the war's developments is the reversion to the tactics of the so-called dark ages by the employment of hard grenades; literally bombs such as we used to think only anarchists would hurl. In assailing trenches these are now quite in fashion. Creep up on the enemy at night, in the dark, if he is careless enough not to keep his searchlights going; and when near toss into the ditch where he is trying to sleep a lot of hand-propelled shells of high explosive quality, filled with bullets and scraps of iron.

When they go off he'll know you have called.

RUSSIANS FALL BACK BEFORE STRONG FORCES

While Reinforcements Give Enemy an Advantage at Southern End of Line the Russians Are Forging Ahead on the Northern Wing Between Tilsit and Insterburg in East Prussia.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Chief interest in the war theatres lies in the fighting in the eastern zone, the operations in the west having lapsed into a period of calm, with only a few small engagements on narrow fronts, which can have little effect on the campaign as a whole.

Germans have been checked in their efforts to break the Russian lines before Warsaw, and have transferred many of their troops to East Prussia to meet the Russian offensive in that region. This offensive has commenced to be a real danger to the Germans, as it threatened to drive a wedge between Tilsit and Insterburg and, as to turn the fortified position in the extremely difficult country of the Mazurian Lakes.

If this movement succeeded the Russians would overrun a considerable part of East Prussia and would again be on their way to Koenigsberg and Danzig.

The campaign in the Carpathians and in Galicia is not easily followed, as the official reports are exceedingly sparing in information. It is evident, however, that while the Russian offensive in the western passes of the mountains is being pushed with strength it has been met by stronger opposition in the eastern passes, with the result that the Russians have been compelled to fall back in Bukowina. They have repeatedly done this, only to give the Austrians battle when they debouched from the Russian end of the passes, and it is presumed that this is their intention now.

The operations are on such a large and complicated scale that it may be weeks before any definite decision is reached.

Regarding the operations in East Prussia, Frederick Rennet, Petrograd correspondent for The London Daily News, says:

"Northern operations are undergoing a rapid process of unification. The battles north of Serpetz are becoming more stubborn in character, with increased forces on both sides. Further east is the unbroken communication across the Miawa and the northern stretches of the Province of Lomza into East Prussia at Johannisburg and the southern end of the Mazurian Lakes. The activity of the Russians in this new territory keeps the Germans concerned in their entire outer front, which now forms a great curve, beginning at Tilsit, leading south past the western bank of the Angerapp river and southwest through the Mazurian Lakes till it turns westward into north Poland and ends on the Vistula at Thorn. Their activity has been redoubled since the central column of the Russian eastern army has now its entire strength westward of Angerapp with no natural obstacle until it reaches the River Alle in the heart of East Prussia. This country is very accessible to determined infantry, especially as the Germans must divert a large force against the Russian pressure from the wide, trackless region from Miawa to Johannesburg.

"The hurried movements of Von Hindenburg's armies betray his anxiety as to the attacks on the Bzura and Rawka rivers, which is so necessary to the enemy's plans, both in East Prussia and the Carpathians."

FOES MINING OPERATIONS DEFEATED NEAR PERONNE

French Communique Announces Destruction of a German Sap, in Which Enemy's Corps Were Destroyed While at Work.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Subterranean fighting—the most terrible form of warfare yet introduced — has taken rank with the heavy guns for destructive power. As an advanced military art it has surpassed aviation, and today neither commander attempts an attack of importance without utilizing in his strategy the sappers with their tunneling tools and high explosive mines.

Immediately following the blowing up of the road in front of the La Boisselle barracks by German sappers, who burrowed a great distance beneath the town to plant and explode their mines, only to be caught in their own trap when they charged the French, last night's communique from Paris reported a further disaster to German mining operations.

Before Fay, southwest of Peronne in the coal region of Santerre, the Germans were utilizing the mine workings for the purpose ofunderlaying the French positions with explosive mines. French sappers, anticipating such an attempt, had placed electrically controlled mines in the various galleries of the upper levels of the mine. When the German sappers started through one of the galleries Monday afternoon the French mines were exploded and the German soldiers trapped at their work. A number of them are believed to have been killed.

Allies Win In Flanders.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 10.—The Belgian towns of Passchendaele and Langemarck have been captured by the allies, according to a despatch received here from Sluis yesterday.

It says that the Belgian troops took these places with the assistance of a large force of British troops after a hard fight with the Germans.

Langemarck is north and Passchendaele is northeast of Ypres. Their occupation would imperil the German army whose centre rests on Roulers.

P. E. Leblanc, K.C., Is Governor,

OTTAWA, Feb. 10.—Pierre Evariste Leblanc, K.C., of Montreal, a former leader of the Conservative party in Quebec and an ex-Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, in succession to the late Sir Francois Langelier.

Lieutenant-Governor Leblanc was born at St. Martin, Laval County, Que., in 1854, and he was educated at St. Martin Academy and Jacques Cartier Normal School, Montreal. He was for many years a school teacher and was called to the Quebec Bar in 1879. He sat in the Legislature from 1884 to 1908, when he was defeated by only four votes. He was Speaker of the Legislative Assembly under the de Boucherville, Taillon and Flynn Governments.

Would Hang Raiders In Public.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Lord Charles Beresford is going to put a question to Premier Asquith in the House of Commons to-day, in which he will demand that Great Britain treat German raiders on undefended places as pirates, and, after a trial by court-martial, hang them in public for the murder of women and children. This applies to raids from the air, as well as by sea.

Lord Charles asserts that the Government should adopt this plan in the future, and no longer treat such raiders as honorable foes.

TO MAKE INQUIRY

U.S. Ambassador to Find out What Germany Means

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — President Wilson has directed Ambassador Gerard to obtain and forward to this Government, at his earliest possible convenience, the full details of Germany's intentions with regard to neutral shipping, particularly the shipping of the United States. The President took up in Cabinet meeting yesterday the German declaration and the explanations of the same as furnished by Germany and it was decided that although Germany had expressed no intention to take summary action against merchant ships of dubious nationality, at the same time no information has been forthcoming as to what methods will be pursued by the German submarine commander or other naval officers to protect neutrals fully when engaged in enforcing the war zone decree and demand has been made for the facts in exact and specific details.

AMBASSADOR GERARD.

Ambassador Gerard has been instructed to obtain a definition of Germany's intentions in two particulars: First, he will ask Germany how she intends to enforce her decree; and second, he will ask what steps, if any, will be taken at once to avoid injury to neutral vessels.

FIRST DIVISION HAS BEEN LANDED

Arrival of Canadians in France is Confirmed

OTTAWA, Feb. 10. — That all the Canadian troops of the first division who have been on Salisbury Plain are now in France is the effect of unofficial, but nevertheless trustworthy information received here yesterday.

It is not known when they will go to the trenches, but it is believed that in France, under more favorable conditions of weather, the troops will continue the tactical training in which since last October they have been engaged in England.

The despatch from Canada of the reinforcements for the first contingent and the whole of the second contingent is anticipated in the near future.

A private cablegram from Major Archie Bell of this city, in charge of the first contingent ammunition park, says he arrived at Rouen Monday. The ammunition park, in command of Major Bell, is a division of the army service corps which handles the artillery ammunition. It consists of about 400 men.

SALISBURY, Eng., Feb. 10.—Latest official casualty list of the Princess Patricias up to Feb. 7 gives thirty killed, and forty wounded. Most of the wounded are in English hospitals. FOOD CONTROL URGED BY M.P.

Canada Should Supervise Export Says W. F. Cockshutt

OTTAWA, Feb. 10. — The House was in session less than an hour yesterday afternoon.

The short session comprised the introduction by Hon. Messrs. Casgrain and Coderre of the new member for Terrebonne, George Rochon, who was elected at the polls only yesterday, the formal notice of the Premier's resolution to vote an additional $100,000,000 for war purposes; the election of Mr. Albert Sevigny as Deputy Speaker; the introduction of public bills; the answering of questions, and the tabling of volumes of reports and returns.

The question of taking steps to control the export of Canada's food products is being raised by W. F. Cockshutt (Brantford), who has given notice of a resolution that "the circumstances arising out of the present are such as to justify the Government in exercising supreme control over the quantity and destiny of our food exports, thereby regulating the prices at which bread, meat and other food products shall be sold for home consumption, while at the same time directing that our surplus food exports should only reach British or friendly countries."

Mr. Armstrong (East Lambton) introduced his bill to place inland navigation companies under the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission.

The House then adjourned until today.

Tariff changes of the Government are to be announced on Thursday, when Mr. White will deliver his budget speech.

In the Senate yesterday the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne took up the sitting, the address being adopted without division. Senators Murphy and Giroir moved and seconded and Senators Bostock, Liberal leader, and Lougheed, Government leader, also spoke. The tenor of the speeches were loyalty to the Empire.

MANY DROWNED

Water From Old Working Floods Coal Mine

NANAIMO, B.C., Feb. 10.—Twenty-one men employed in the mine of the Pacific Coast Coal Mines, Limited, at South Wellington, seven miles from Nanaimo, were drowned by a rush of water yesterday.

Evidently one of the old flooded workings of the Alexandra mine, which has not been operating for years, was broken into by the men in the South Wellington, which adjoins it on a lower level.

Among the victims of the disaster are Joseph Foy, manager of the mine, and David Nillerat, fire boss. Foy was on the surface at the time, but on hearing that the old workings were being tapped, he went below ground with the intention of getting all of the men to the surface. He opened a trap door of the old stope and was met by a flood of water which hurled him against the timbers. His body has not yet been recovered.

Major Morrison-Bell Safe.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Major Arthur C. Morrison-Bell of the Scots' Guards, who recently was reported missing in France, is a prisoner in Germany. Mrs. Morrison-Bell yesterday received a letter from her husband announcing his safety.

Major Morrison-Bell is a Conservative member of the House of Commons. He saw service in the South African war, and was aide de camp to the Governor-General of Canada in 1900-04.

Forced Consuls To Lower Flags.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 10—The Telegraaf yesterday published a despatch saying that the German commander at Bruges, Belgium, ordered all the consulates there to [illegible] flags and remove the coats of arms.

The consuls, the despatch adds, including the representative of Turkey, protested but the order was enforced, in some cases with violence, and in [illegible] to surrender all their arms.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

BY ORDER OF THE BOARD

By M. QUAD

For seven years old John Fosdick had been paying teller of the First National bank in a western town. He had secured the place through having the friendship of the president. But there had been a "ring" against him in the bank. Without the president behind him, even after he had held the place for three or four years, he would have been fired by those in authority.

The seventh year was drawing to a close when old John was caught up. A stranger presented a check which he hesitated to pay and about which he consulted the cashier. Later on the cashier stated that he had ordered it to be held pending examination. Old John said that he had been ordered to pay it at once. The check was paid, and, being spurious, the bank was $800 out of pocket.

The president being in Europe, the board took the case under advisement, and "by order" the old man was fired out into the world to begin life anew. There were resolutions, of course, and one of them was to the effect that the bank presented him with the sum of $100 for long and faithful services. He put on his hat without protest, and he left the bank without taking the money. At his humble home an old, anxious wife met him and, wifelike, gave him sympathy and encouragement first of all.

"Never mind, John; never mind," she kept saying. "We have a few dollars ahead, and you are only fifty-five years old, and something good is sure to turn up. You have fought too long to give up now."

But the weeks went by and nothing turned up. The business world has very little use for an old man who has no capital. John Fosdick's savings were gradually used up, the generosity of his few friends exhausted, and there came a day when the question of food and fuel became a serious one. He was not one to sponge or turn beggar. If the world would not let him earn his food, at least he would go out of it and hope that his going would open the hearts of men toward his widow. After pondering for an hour he started out with the firm intention of drowning himself in the river. It was a blustering November day, and as he passed the bank with bowed head, bent shoulders and well worn garments even those who had deprived him of his place felt a touch of sympathy. He was making for the suburbs and a highway bridge and wondering how long it would take to drown and what men would say of him when dead when he caught sight of men and horses skulking behind an abandoned factory. It was singular, bound on such a mission as he was, that he should have seen or wondered and speculated on why those men and horses were there, but he had scarcely passed the old factory when he suddenly turned about and ran for the business part of the town with speed that astonished himself.

In the vaults of the First National bank was a sum close upon $3,000,000 deposited there temporarily by a railroad company. Outside the vault was a big safe containing $25,000 more. It was a quiet afternoon, with few people moving about. Over 100 of the men living in town had gone over to the new town of Prairie Flower to an auction of real estate. There hadn't been a better opportunity for years to make a dash at the bank. It was a civilized young city, but within striking distance of No Man's Land and a hundred desperate outlaws.

Of a sudden old John Fosdick, bareheaded and his gray hair flying, burst into the bank. He was speechless with his running, but he did not try to use his voice. He dashed open the gate and seized the heavy doors of the safe and closed them with a bang. Several employees tried to seize him, but he shook them off, and just as firing and yelling were heard on the street he slammed the doors of the vault. He had only turned from it when four border ruffians rushed into the bank, each with a pistol in hand, while three others remained outside and fired at every pedestrian in sight.

"Hands up and money out!" shouted one of three who entered the bank, and in an instant every official and employee was covered.

"Gentlemen, the bank is closed for today," said John Fosdick.

"Open the safe and vaults or I'll blow your brains out!"

"I have a key to neither."

"You liar! Take that!"

The old man sank with a bullet in his brain, and the white faced cashier would have opened safe and vault with his own hands but for the arrival of assistance. A few citizens had gathered and killed one of the watchers and wounded another. This caused a stampede on the part of the desperadoes. They did not even grab the money packages in sight, but hastened to get away as fast as possible. John Fosdick did not drown himself, but he lay dead. He had been discharged on account of old age and carelessness, but his speed and acumen had saved the First National bank from being cleaned out. He wondered what men would say of him after death. They said he was a hero. He had hoped men would have pity on his aged widow. When he had been laid away the bank voted her a life pension, the citizens and the railroad company made up a public purse, and she wanted for nothing the rest of her life.

CONSPIRACY IS PROVEN

Germans Did Utmost to Upset Peace of Europe

PETROGRAD, Feb. 10—(Via London.) — The short session of the Duma opened yesterday afternoon in the presence of a throng that filled the balconies of the chamber, the Ministers, the members of the council and the empire and the diplomatic representatives.

Foreign Minister Sazonoff said the allies' goal was assured. It was useless for Germany and Austria to say repeatedly they were forced into the war or to repeat the old story that King Edward had sought to surround Germany with enemies, for, he declared, the whole world knew that the agreement entered into or projected by that monarch were fundamentally defensive.

Quite different, continued M. Sazonoff, had been the attitude of Germany, who, despite Russia's efforts to continue her relations of good neighborliness, had sought to embroil Russia with neighboring countries, especially with Scandinavia, where Germany showed distrust of Russia, with Galicia, where German gold caused the Ukraine movement; with Roumania, where the Germans tried to blunt the consciousness of the community of interests between the Roumanians and Russians, and with Turkey; where German intrigue had flourished.

In Persia, M. Sazonoff continued German agents were violating the Potsdam agreement and promises given to the Russians, and had sought to compromise Anglo-Russian relations. The same intrigues, he added, had been carried out in China and Japan, but luckily, they had been sterile.

"All this," M. Sazonoff declared, "was sufficient for us to judge of the value of the German statements regarding the alleged envelopment of Germany by the triple entente. Equally worthless are the assertions that it was not Germany who began the war, for irrefutable documents exist to prove the contrary.

Slump Not Very Bad

Making allowance for the importation of $86,000,000 worth of coin and bullion more than the previous year, the total trade of Canada for the twelve months ending Oct. 31 last was just an even billion dollars, a drop of only $127,000,000, as compared with the preceding twelve months. Imports of merchandise were $514,000,000 and exports $59,000,000.

Imports from the West Indies increased from $1,135,000 to $6,046,000 as a result of the preferential tariff, but imports from the United Kingdom fell from $143,000,000 to $106,000,000, and those from Germany from $15,640,000 to $9,927,000. Imports from the United States declined from $442,341,840 to $421,074,528.

Exports to the United States increased from $179,000,000 to $213,000,000; those to Australia from $4,459,000 to $5,500,000, and those to British Africa from $3,800,000 to $1,809,000, while exports to the United Kingdom fell from $212,000,000 to $204,000,000.

"Engaged Man's Panic."

"Engaged man's panic" is as familiar a phenomenon as the squawking of a captured chicken or the flopping of a hooked fish. And woman instinctively anticipates it, feels it before it actually begins, deals with it according to her abilities. No woman ever feels that this is a slur upon her. She knows that it does not involve her, but is only the nervousness of the free at the touch of the matrimonial bridle—and that bridle, as she knows and as he knows, is not in her hands, but in the hands of society. Even the man marrying for a home, even the man marrying for children or for money, even the man marrying because only by marriage can he hope to get some one to associate with him, bear with him, listen to him on terms of his own arranging—even these men feel the nervousness as the bridle drops over their heads and the bit presses their quivering lips.—From "Degarmo's Wife," by David Graham Phillips.

"Knotty" History.

Tying knots in a handkerchief to jog one's memory had its origin in China thousands of years ago. Before writing was invented in that country, which did not happen until 3000 B. C., memorable and important events were recorded by long knotted cords. The most ancient history of China is still preserved as told by these knots. When Emperor Tschang Ki invented writing the entire system of "knotting" was abandoned. And today the memory knots made by us in handkerchiefs are the only surviving descendants of that ancient custom.

STIRLING WON FROM MARMORA

Bill Whitty's Team Making Strong Bid for the Cooke Trophy

Stirling, Feb. 10.—In the Trent Valley League game at Stirling last night the home team annexed a 7-4 victory over their old rival Marmora. When the teams met before Bill Whittey's seven carried off the honors by 7-6 although only after a real stiff struggle. Last night the task was not quite so hard as the Stirling seven was somewhat stronger. Captain Lynn was on the forward line and his combining with "Shadow" Cooke was responsible for the majority of the scores. Bill Whitty and Gould played a good defence game, the former's rushes being particularly brilliant. Conley, the midget Stirling goaler, played a stellar game in the nets picking off the long shots and blocking close ones like a veteran.

Shannon at rover was easily the pick of the Marmora septette. A bright feature of his work was that it was entirely free from rough tactics. He was on the ice and playing the game as it should be played for the complete sixty minutes. Tommy Moffat had a new man on the defence in Wells and he played good hockey all the way through. C. Jones the other member of the rear guard was also much in the limelight. Clairemont the regular netman was out of the game with an injured hand and while Buchanan, who subbed, was good at times, he allowed several long ones to beat him.

The score at the close of the first period was 3-1 and twenty minutes later it was 5-1. Marmora came to life in the last stanza and ran in three while the home brigade was scoring two, making the final score 7-4. The teams:

BOWLING

Excitement prevailed last night when the Examiner and Beginners met in what may prove to be the deciding games of the series. Only after a lot of hard shooting did the Beginners succeed in taking two out of the three. The first game was very close and not decided until the last frame. The other two were productive of some good rolling, the Beginners spilling them for 576 in the second, with the Examiner 578 in the third. Glover, of the Examiner, bad a good string with 224, and is now tied with Cottrell of C. G. E. Shop for high single. Cairns fell but five short of making a record for three successive games.

The score was as follows:

Beginners	1	2	3	T'l
Flowers	154	192	141	487

$10 FINE IMPOSED ON TWEED CLUB

For Playing Man Whose Certificate Was not Signed

At the meeting of the executive of the Trent Valley Hockey League held in the Stirling House, Stirling, yesterday afternoon, the game between Tweed and Madoc, played in Madoc and won by Tweed, on January 11th, was ordered to be replayed on neutral ice on February 24th. The reason for the step of the executive was that the Tweed club played a man whose certificate was not signed by the secretary of the league. For the infringement of the rules the Tweed club was fined $10. In all probability the game will be played in Marmora.

NO INTERVENTION SOON.

Italy's Participation In War Will Be Considerably Delayed.

LONDON, Feb. 10. — The London Daily Telegraph has the following from its correspondent in Rome:

The military preparations of Italy are now terminated, but her intervention in the struggle, except in an unforeseen contingency, is not imminent for several reasons.

First, because of the season.

Next, because it does not appear that the general war situation will undergo any very rapid change.

Lastly, because of the approaching reopening of the Chamber of Deputies.

Intervention at this juncture, while not appearing justified sufficiently by objective reasons, might be interpreted as a Parliamentary devise to evade the decision of the Chamber on certain acts of the Ministry not strictly in harmony with the attitude of Italy, considered from the standpoint of the different groups of belligerents.

A Ministerial crisis does not seem probable, but cannot be wholly left out of account.. The Government has in several ways shown indecision, and has given cause for criticism in its economic measures, especially in the matter of provision of grain and coal. This will form a subject of serious discussion in the chamber, and may even lead to a party vote. This is a true reading of the present situation in Italy.

"Trust In God and Hold Out."

COLOGNE, Feb. 10. — (Via London.)—Cardinal von Hartman, Archbishop of Cologne, in addressing a meeting yesterday said: "The Emperor's words, 'I no longer know parties; I know only Germans, has found a unanimous echo among the German people, who are united for king and country.'

"The motto for to-day is 'Trust in God and hold out.' Our armies, protecting us in the east and west, are in good position. God will not permit atheistic France and orthodox Russia to crush the flourishing religious life in the fatherland.

"Trust, therefore, in our just cause, our brave troops and the noble Emperor who is adorned with all the virtues of his Hohenzollern forefathers. Trust above all in the Ruler of Battles, to Whom we faithfully and continually pray."

Going at the pace that kills looks foolish to the rest of us, and the man who goes it can't reach his distination too soon to please us.

Georgia Bloodhounds

What the Georgia bloodhound can do seems almost incredible. A convict sleeping in one bunk of a hundred, shod and clad precisely as the hundred convicts about him, may slip his chain and flee. Ten miles away he may meet his fellow prisoners again, may run to and fro among them or walk with them a mile and leave them.

Six hours after these hounds, put on his track where he slipped the camp, will follow him to where he met his gang, will trend his track in and about with hundreds of tracks, take it up where he leaves them and run him down though he cross convict gangs every mile he runs.

This escaping convict, clad in stripes cut from the same bolt with a hundred others, may run through the woods, touching weeds and bushes as he runs. Fifty other convicts may run through the same woods in every direction. The dogs will hold his scent, running full tilt, breast high. If he makes a curve of forty-five degrees the dogs will not run the line, but will catch his scent thirty yards away and across the angle, though it were filled with the convicts who had eaten and slept with the fugitive.

Often a dog will carry a scent in a gallop, running parallel thirty yards to the windward. An uncanny and terrible little beast is the red bone hound, trained for the hunting of man.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Old Forts of Antwerp.

As long ago as 1641 an English traveler to Antwerp was impressed by the extensive character of its fortifications. "The graffs, ramparts and platforms are stupendous," writes John Evelyn in his diary. "* * * But there was nothing about this citty which more ravished me than those delicious shades and walkes of stately trees, which render the fortified workes of the towne one of the sweetest places in Europe; nor did I ever observe a more quiet, cleane, elegantly built and civil place than this magnificent and famous citty of Antwerp."

SAVED BY A WAGER.

Doomed by the Surgeons, Hay Bet He Would Live, and He Did.

When Colonel Hay, notorious for his love of gambling and betting, was severely wounded in the Peninsular war two brother officers came across his apparently lifeless body.

"Poor Hay! He's gone at last," said one named Winsor.

A faint voice came from the ground. "I'll lay you a hundred he's not." His death seemed only a question of minutes, but he continued, "Enter the bet, and you, Marston"—addressing the other officer—"be witness."

He then fainted. When he was taken to the hospital the surgeon told him the bullet could only be removed by sawing through two ribs and introducing a child's hand to extract it, as forceps could not touch it. "The chances are," he added, "that you will die under the operation."

"If Winsor will make his bet double or quits I'll consent," said the colonel.

Winsor agreed.

"Now saw away," said Hay. "I won't die." And he did not.

"But for that bet," he said afterward, "I should be a dead man. It was my determination to win it that kept me alive."—Pearson's Weekly.

Information.

It was a very fashionable concert and the artists very well known ones, but the two young things were too busy with picking out their peculiarities to hear the music.

In the midst of a beautiful selection the pianist suddenly lifted his hands from the keys and one of the young things was heard to say clearly:

"I wonder if that hair is his own?"

The old man who sat beside her was slightly deaf, but he turned with a benevolent smile.

"No, miss," he imparted pleasantly; "that is Schubert's." — Philadelphia Press.

PULFER—TYLER.

Hastings, Feb. 10.—A quiet but pretty wedding, and one of interest locally, was solemnized on Tuesday last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tyler, the principals in the important event being their daughter, Florence, and Mr. J. Pulfer, of Sask. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. T. H. P. Anderson, pastor of the Methodist Church, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. After the ceremony, and customary congratulations, the bride led the way to the dining room, where a dainty dejeuner was served and much enjoyed by those present.

The happy young couple left on Wednesday for a short honeymoon trip to Western Ontario after which they will take up residence in Saskatchewan.

A. O. F. SOCIAL MEETING.

From the ranks of the court, twelve left with the first contingent, two with the second, and three are with the third. Court Stanley is paying the dues of the men who are joining the overseas forces.

The ladies of Queen Alexandra Circle had charge of the meeting, which was featured by the following program:

Reading, "Union Jack" — Miss E. Sheppard.
Reading—Miss E. Wiggins.

During the meeting several members spoke briefly on fraternalism and matters of interest to the Court.

There is this about ideals — they somehow don't want to work just this minute, but like to illumine the future with their roseate light.

MANAGEMENT OF

was a matter for discussion in council. As none of the members quoted in the scribe's report ever sat on such committee, why should any fair and competent newspaper man write so as to leave only those members open to criticism?

Personally, I know nothing wrong with the way affairs have been conducted in the house, not having been on any committee by which I could become conversant with the same.

The whole matter was of small moment, and I am satisfied should never have appeared in print, but it is remarkable how sensitive are the feelings of some correspondents, and the way they rise in righteous indignation over a few inoffensive remarks of individual members in private session. "It is surely to laugh."

SAW MASSEY MEET HIS DEATH

ed: "It seems to me it would be a breach of those fundamental ideas of British fair play not to give the defence further time, when the girl has not been able to instruct counsel, and I understand this girl is not yet able to do so."

The coroner then agreed to the adjournment until Monday, the day previous to her appearance in police court, and called Plainclothesman McIlroy and Fred Massey, who testified that they, with the jury, had viewed the body.

Dr. John Mitchell, who resides within half a block of the Massey residence, said he was returning home about 20 minutes after 6 o'clock when he saw two men bending over Massey in front of his residence. He approached and found Massey's vest had been unbuttoned and his collar and tie loosened. Dr. Mitchell said he was told by one of the men that Massey had been shot.

"I suggested that he be taken into one of the residences, and unknowingly indicated his own residence. Then I was told someone in that house shot him, and that it might be unwise to take him in there, so he was carried into a house further north." According to the doctor, Massey received a punctured wound from one-quarter to three-eighths of an inch in diameter in the left chest, just above the heart. He was quite unconscious when he first saw him and died within a few minutes in the house to which he was conveyed.

Saw Him Fall.

Miss Beatrice Dinnis, 126 Walmer road, saw Mr. Massey shot on his doorstep. She walked down Walmer road on the opposite side and slightly behind him. Miss Dinnis said he mounted the steps, paused for a moment, then, just as he put his hand out to the door, a revolver shot sounded and Massey exclaimed "Oh!" and staggered back. He staggered down the steps and had nearly reached the bottom when the second shot rang out and he fell to the pavement.

Miss Dinnis said the house was unlighted except for a light in the cellar. Asked by Crown Attorney Greer if she saw the person who shot Massey, she replied that she had a hazy recollection of seeing a dark figure step out on the verandah after the first shot, fire the second, and then go back into the house.

levy on land a special rate to meet such expense and further enacts that:

"No land shall be exempt from the special rate, anything in any general or special act or in any by-law to the contrary notwithstanding."—R.S.O. 1914, 1914, Cap. 192. S. 406. S.S. 6a.

It is true that churches are generally exempt but for this special tax the general exemption is thus expressly abrogated.

Such being the existing law, the only question remaining is whether or not the city authorities acted legally and regularly in the inception of the system and in the levy and collection of the rate. I think they did and so find.

This tax was a new thing to the church people and thought to be a hardship. They say and think no assessment notice was given. Perhaps not, but if the roll is otherwise regular such notice is not necessary.—R.S.O., Cap. 195. Sec. 70.

The case relied on by Mr. Dumble was decided before this section was passed and it may have been passed for the express purpose of meeting such extreme and isolated cases.

The assessment of 1913 was quite regular, was regularly and properly adopted for 1914 as provided in Sec. 56 of the Assessment Act, and no second revision was necessary as contended. Such second revision is in such case declared or rather implied as quite unnecessary by S. 56, S.S. 3.

So far as I can see the by-laws in question were all properly drawn and passed. The penalty of distress and imprisonment on default provided in by-law No. 1817 is attacked. A reading of that by-law shows the offending clause to apply more to the collateral matters of receptacles, etc., than to the collection of the rate and in any case that clause if fatal (and I do not think it is) is not in the by-law under which this collection is made. The levying by-law is No. 1818 and it is not impeached at all and as I see it, is unimpeachable. Moreover this by-law is not quashed nor has any application to quash it been made. This multiplies the plaintiffs' difficulties in this section—the by-law being now valid and subsisting.

On the other hand the assessment of the church is too high. When no taxation was called for, no one thought or cared about the amount of assessment. It was $84,000.00 in the year complained of; it has since been reduced to $55,000.00. I suggested a refund of the difference, some $29 or $30. The city authorities were inclined to accede to the suggestion but it was rejected by the church.

The action fails and is dismissed with costs if asked.

(Sgd.) E. C. S. HUYCKE,
Judge.

MOOSE PIN FOR TREVOR L. CUFFE

Trevor L. Cuffe who has enlisted with the Mounted Rifles was presented with a moose pin by the local Order of Moose. The following resolution was passed by the lodge:—

Moved by Bro. Mayor Buller, and seconded by Bro. E. H. Bartlett, that the treasurer be authorized to procure a suitable momento for presentation to Bro. Cuffe, as a slight token of esteem, during his absence for military duty, also that this lodge agrees to keep him in good standing during his absence, praying that God's blessing may rest upon him, and that he may have a safe and speedy return.

Mrs. Airress has had to care for her invalid husband for some years and she herself has spent some time in the hospital.

AMERICA AT THE GRAND OPERA

No attraction ever put on at the New York Hippodrome was received with the acclaim that greeted the spectacular masterpiece "America." Public and press alike bubbled over with praise. GERMANS ARE EVACUATING LODZ FRENCH TAKE IMPORTANT POSITION

TWO HUMAN HEADS FOUND

Boy Searching for Clothes Made the Discovery

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 11. — Two human heads, two feet and a hand, wrapped in a burlap bag were found yesterday afternoon in an alley behind a bottling works on Beaubien street. Features were almost obliterated by acid. The police believe one of the heads is that of a man and the other is a woman's. A boy searching for bottles made the discovery.

Detectives found a satchel containing clothes marked "M. F. A. Easton," a few feet from where the heads were found. The satchel had been covered with rubbish.

Easton, who formerly conducted a mission on Beaubien street here, died in Detroit two days ago. He once was in charge of a mission on Canton avenue, Chicago.

ONE ROBBER SHOT DEAD

Plucky Cashier in Bank Put up Fight

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 11. — One robber was shot and killed, and a second captured and $700 in cash recovered after a raid on the Mohawk German Banking & Savings Co. here yesterday. The two robbers entered the bank at noon and ordered Cashier Wm. Cross to throw up his hands.

Instead Cross reached for his revolver. One of the robbers fired at him but missed. Cross got his gun, but not before the burglar had grabbed a handful of currency from a counter and started out of the door.

Cross fired at them, dropping one man in the street, while the other escaped. The man who was shot died before he could be identified.

The fugitive robber was caught later in a cellar and all the stolen money found on him.

TO THE BITTER END

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Feb. 11.—"Recent public utterances in Germany give no reason to suppose that the purpose in view will be prompted by the apparent course suggested," was the answer of Sir Edward Grey to a question in the Commons this afternoon asking whether with a view ending the terrible loss of life in the war, Great Britain was prepared to declare publicly, a base whereon the allies were willing to discuss terms of peace. The members greeted the answer with cheers.

Ernest Bicknel and Henry James, Jr., representatives of the Rockefeller foundation, left Berlin Tuesday for Vienna, on their way to Roumania, to negotiate for grain for the people of Poland, who are in distress.

TOSS OF COIN TO DECIDE OFFICE

Jos. Kelly, the New Head of Poultry Association

MERCHANTS THANKED

Poultry breeders turned out en masse last evening at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association. All kinds of enthusiasm cropped up, which bespoke an activity and interest within the association that is growing stronger every year. Since the formation of the association seven years ago, it has developed into an organization that has done great things to popularise poultry breeding in this section, and local exhibitors are credited by the judges with being among the largest and most successful in the province.

Capable and experienced officers will guide the local association this year. Mr. Joe Kelly seemed to be the popular choice for the office of president, although for a while it looked as if Mr. J. T. C. Lang was to fill the position.. When Mr. Kelly was nominated he declined to accept the office, because he felt that around poultry show time the president should be always on the job and he certainly would be unable to be there. He nominated Mr. J. T. C. Lang, who said he would not accept unless there was no other member available for the position. To settle the matter a coin was tossed, and fate thrust the position upon Mr. Joe Kelly, who took the chair amid applause.

The "defeated candidate," as Mr. Lang was termed, was runner-up for the vice-presidency.

Mr. Archie Brault was installed as second vice-president.

For secretary, Mr. J. J. Cunningham, who ably filled the office last year, was re-elected.

Mr. J. T. C. Lang was elected treasurer, which necessitated him withdrawing from the vice-presidency. To fill his place, Mr. Robert Robson was appointed. Mr. George Paxman was nominated and was urged to accept, but he preferred not.

The directors appointed were: A. Everson, George McClennan, George Buller, W. T. Abbott, A. Mesley, T. Stenton, H. T. Lush, P. Hartley, P. H. Smedmore.

Mr. George Paxman was nominated for honorary president, also Mr. F. Holmes, and were declared elected. The honorary directors appointed were Warden Dr. Kindred of Havelock, Mayor Buller, Arthur Ash, J. H. Garbutt. J. H. Callander and R. J. Kidd were re-elected auditors for the coming year.

January 4th, 5th and 6th were suggested as good days on which to hold the 1916 exhibition, and on motion of Mr. Paxman and Mr. Abbott this was agreed upon.

The usual salary of $35 a year to the secretary was authorized.

In regard to the apointment of judges for the annual exhibition, it was suggested having only one judge next year. A man competent to judge water fowl was felt to be necessary hereafter. It was decided, after considerable discussion, to continue to engage two judges. Correspondence will be instituted with several to obtain prices.

Great praise was showered upon the fathers or founders of the present association who have stuck with it from the beginning. In this connection the following resolution received unanimous approval:

"That the association express their appreciation of the support of the merchants, by their donations, which were good, considering business conditions, and their gratification at seeing the older members staying by the resolution be published in the press". rebolution be published in the press."

Some of the old members are: Messrs. Geo. Paxman, J. T. C. Lang, Joe Kelly, J. J. Cunningham, R. D. Robson, F. Holmes, H. T. Lush, Archie Brault, Geo. Buller, James Baptie.

The membership of the Poultry Association is now one hundred and ninety-seven. Seven years ago there were but seventeen members, who formed the necleus of the present nourishing organization. At the first meeting, on February 18, 1908, the late Mr. R. H. Leary presided.

The treasurer's report was as follows:

Balance in bank, 1914	410.52

British Capture Five Hundred of the Newest Class of German Recruits

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 11. — A Havas agency despatch from Petrograd says that Lodz is being evacuated by Germans, who are removing stores, offices and commissariat with the utmost expedition.

Headquarters at St. Omer, France, has announced the capture by the French of a hill of Notre Dame De Lorette which dominates the entire region. It has been the object of fighting for weeks.

The British captured a position on Sunday night near Festhubert, making prisoners five hundred of the newest class of German recruits.

The Russian Red Cross story that Germans are now poisoning their shells, which poison wounds, finds support in France, where French chemists have, on investigation, found these latest shrapnel shells contain a composition strongly impregnated with phosphorous. The effect is that the wounds inflicted by these shells take much longer to heal and frequently do not heal, the tissues becoming cold and the bone eating away, and too often death follows.

FIVE MILLION DOLLARS FROM THE PRINCE OF WALES FUND LENT TO CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

LONDON, Feb. 11. — There is considerable criticism which is voiced by the Daily Chronicle over the administration of the Prince of Wales fund. It appears five million dollars of the fund have been lent to the Canadian Government for six months without formal sanction and without the knowledge of the Prince of Wales. There was a proposal to lend a portion to Newfoundland and British Columbia, but this encountered too much opposition.

KAISER IS DREADFULLY DEPRESSED BY TERRIBLE LOSSES OF SOLDIERS

LONDON, Feb. 11. —— Despatches from the continent represent that while Emperor William finds the situation hopeful, he is dreadfully depressed over the terrible cost in men Germany has had to pay in return for very limited advance against the Russians.

One account from Warsaw represented these as numbering forty-five thousand dead.

Danish military critics say that the Emperor has protested against this slaughter, and an effort will be made to transfer fighting to some point where the Russians are less formidably entrenched.

DAILY MAIL GROWS SARCASTIC

LONDON, Feb. 11. — The Daily Mail grows sarcastic over the story that the British Government has spent one hundred thousand dollars converting the magnificent old Donigton Hall in Leicestershire into a home of rest for German officers, of whom it will accommodate three hundred. There they will have every comfort, luxury and refinement of living which a first-class hotel and elegant country residence in combination would supply.

The Mail supposes the Government wishes to suggest to German officers the difference between kultur that allowed Louvain to burn and culture inspired by sunset in the Trent valley.

THE PARIS STATEMENT

PARIS, Feb. 11. — (Afternoon Official Statement.)—"Along all of the front yesterday as far as Champagne there were artillery exchanges. Projectiles dropped by aeroplanes of the enemy within our lines did no damage. In Champagne a German attack against our position in the forest to the north of Mesnil-Les-Hurlus, recently occupied by us, was repulsed.

"In the Argonne, fighting in the vicinity of Maria Theresa earthworks has been very violent. We have maintained all our positions. Losses of the enemy are considerable and ours are serious.

"It is reported at La Fontenelle, in Ban-de-Spat, that Germans had at least two battalions of troops present. After having ceded some ground at La Fontenelle, our troops re-captured everything they gave up."

INTERNATIONAL BRIDGES WILL BE GUARDED

As Protection Against Attempts to Destroy Them

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Feb. 11. —The Canadian ends of both international bridges between this city and Niagara Falls, Ont., were put under military guard today as a protection against any attempts to destroy them. Bridge officials and the military denied any knowledge of a reported attempt to destroy a bridge.

Bridgeburg, Ont., Feb. 11.—Military guards were stationed today at the Canadian end of international bridge to prevent an attempt to wreck the structure and railroad men were notified that bridge passes will not be respected. Employes must be identified to avoid arrest. The action was prompted by the recent attempt to destroy the international bridge at Vanceboro, Maine.

MOTHER SEEKS NEWS OF SON

He Came to Peterborough From London

If any person knows where Ernest Edward Cuddon is living they would gladden a mother's heart by conveying to her through Chief Thompson news of his whereabouts. He is a tall, curly-headed boy with fair hair and left London, England, in March, 1911, where he was an employe in the post office. He left for Canada and came to Peterborough, so his mother says, but for a long time no news has been received by her from him. She has written to a local clergyman, begging him to find her boy. The mother's name is Mrs. E. Cuddon of 31 Ridley road, Dalston.

Chief Thompson has searched the immigration files and made other inquiries, but failed to find his name. He would be glad to hear news of him.

TAKE MEASURES AGAINST TRADE OF THE ENEMY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Feb. 11.—Replying the question from Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, "Whether the Government will place all food and raw material used in German and Austrian industries on the list of absolute contraband," Mr Asquith said, "The Government is considering the question of taking measures against German trade in view of the violation by the enemy of the rules of war I hope shortly to make an announcement of what these measures are to be."

DEBATE ON THE LANGUAGE QUESTION FORESHADOWED

Senator David Gives Notice That he Will Move Resolution

Ottawa, Feb. 11.—A debate on the school and language question is foreshadowed in the Canadian Senate.

Yesterday Senator David, of Montreal, gave notice that on Wednesday next he would, seconded by Senator McHugh, move the following resolution:

"Considering that one of the main objects of the establishment of the senate was the protection of minorities, this house, without derogating from the principles of provincial autonomy, cannot but regard the division which seems to exist among the people of the Province of Ontario over the bilingual question and believes that it is in the interest of the Dominion at large that all such questions should be considered on generous and patriotic lines and settled, so as to preserve peace and harmony between the different national and religious sections of this country, in accordance with the views of the fathers of confederation and with the spirit of our constitution."

Senator Domville introduced a bill designed to require joint stock companies to file lists of their shareholders.

Senator Belcourt re-introduced his bill designed to prevent the pollution of navigable waters.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Lougheed, Speaker Landry and Senators Choquette, Shehyn, Tessier, Gadbout, McKay (Montreal) and Casgrain, were named to represent the senate at the funeral of the late Sir Francois Langelier.

SIXTY PER CENT WOUNDED FIT FOR SERVICE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 11. — In connection with his recent statement that British casualties in the western fighting aggregated one hundred and four thousand officers and men, Premier Asquith stated in Parliament this afternoon that approximately 60 per cent. of the wounded already had recovered and were fit for service.

THUMB OF LEFT HAND SEVERED

Miss Lulu Lockhard the Victim of Painful Accident

PHONED TO HER MOTHER

With the thumb of her left hand completely severed and left in the machinery, Lulu Lockhart, a young lady employed in the Bonner-Worth company plant displayed admirable nerve and pluck by walking into the office and while waiting for the ambulance to convey her to the hospital, calmly telephoned her mother to say she would not be home for supper. She then rung off to enter the ambulance and be taken to Nicholls hospital where her wound was dressed and every aid given her. Miss Lockhart went to work in the Bonner-Worth company plant about six months ago and was getting along splendidly so her employer said. On Tuesday evening five minutes before quitting time some yarn became tangled in her machine. Without stopping it she tried to unravel the tangle but her thumb became caught and was drawn in and completely pulled off. Although suffering intensely, she managed to walk into the office. She didn't faint as would be most natural under the circumstances. The ambulance was telephoned for immediately. In the interval the brave plucky girl insisted on calling up her mother to tell her not to keep supper as she would not be home.

Miss Lockhart was brought home from the hospital last night and is getting along as well as might be expected, although suffering considerable pain.

Under the present workmen's Compensation Act Miss Lockhart should participate in compensation for injuries provided an appeal is entered according to the rules governing the act.

Miss Lockhart lives at 531 Park Street.

Jack Hughes, a prospector, has reached Duluth with a dog team, having covered 2,500 miles from Fort Chippewayan, Alta., since October 20. He has ten days left to cover 500 miles to Chicago to win a $1500 wager.

MORRIS CHAIR FOR FAIR PRESIDENT

J. H. Garbutt Honored at Luncheon of Directors

TO GET MORE MEMBERS

The board of directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition met for their annual luncheon and meeting last evening in Hooper's dining-parlors, and the function was marked by a presentation of a handsome Morris chair by the directors to Mr. J. H. Garbutt, who for the fourth year was elected president of the association at the annual meeting held recently. The presentation was made by W. J. Cox, immediately after the well-catered repast had been completed. R. M. Glover read the following address:

J. H. Garbutt, Esq., President of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Dear Sir,—We, your fellow officials, have arranged this meeting in the interests of discharging a debt of gratitude which we feel we owe to you, and which becomes due on the occasion of your entering upon the fourth year of your occupancy of the office of President.

You have held this position for three years and because we did not believe in the principle of "three times and out" you have been again placed in the office. And not for this reason alone. Your past services have been such that it was felt the interests, and with the most satisfactory interests it represents, would be as well served in the year to come as they have been in the past three years. During these three faithful years you have given ungrudgingly of your time and efforts at no doubt some sacrifice of your personal interests, and with the most satisfactory results. Three highly successful exhibitions under your presidency, with three substantial surpluses, have been, we feel, very largely due to your painstaking work and intelligent interest. The Society has achieved a stronger position than ever before, the public interest has been largely enlisted and a gratifying improvement made in both the character and quantity of exhibits.

We regret that even in its prosperous position, the finances of the Association will not permit the offering of a salary that would be commensurate with the work you have done, and the sacrifices you have necessarily had to make. In default of that we feel that a frank and hearty recognition of your services will be to a man of your public spirit and interest in the Association and what it stands for—a grateful action. There are things that money cannot buy, and there are services that money alone will not adequately reward.

We, therefore, take advantage of this occasion to express our high appreciation and our earnest thanks for the excellent services you have rendered, with the certainly that they express the sentiment of the members of the Association and of the public at large.

As you are entering upon the fourth year of occupancy of the President's chair and, as we feel that in view of the arduous duties of the position, it may be coming to be a little hard, we desire to provide you an easier seat, and, therefore, ask your acceptance of this easy chair, and, without disparaging the maker's skill, we wish to supplement with the upholstery of our good wishes, with the hope that you may enjoy its use for many years of a happy life and contented career of usefulness and public service, such as marked the past years of your life.

Although taken entirely by surprise, Mr. Garbutt made a very fitting reply. He thanked the members most cordially for the presentation and also for their best wishes for his success as voiced in the address. He hoped he was worthy of the honor. It was, in his opinion, the work of the directors as a body which resulted in the Peterborough Exhibition being the striking success it has been for the past three years. He recalled with pleasure the work he had occasion to take part in while the late Mr. Leary held the presidency, and likewise the hearty support given himself when he was called upon to fill the vacancy left by the president.

Mr. Garbutt referred briefly to the cry of "patriotism and production" which is being heard

HET NEW SPIRIT IN POLITICS.

THE ADDRESSES in the House of Commons in reply to the Governor-General's speech were of a high order. The pages of Monday's Hansard, like the pages of those of the special war session, will go down in history as brilliant records of great world events. They are something more than Hansard usually is. Everybody and everything has a changed relation to the world, in view of the great war that has so many gigantic issues and great principles at stake.

The Canadian Parliament has suddenly risen to a leading place in British Imperial politics. What it says and does are of great import, not only to Britain, but to all leading nations in the world. The converse is also true. The affairs of Belgium, France, Russia, Germany, have suddenly taken a larger place in the minds of the Canadian people. Our trade has a new significance, and our politics will henceforth be less continental in that it will assume a larger place in world affairs. Because the British Empire has demonstrated its untiy, has proved that it is an empire in fact as well as in name, it will undoubtedly have a weightier influence in international politics than it ever before exercised. That is why everything assumes a changed relationship in world affairs.

The pages of Monday's Hansard seem to have shaken off the old attitude like an outgrown garment, and taken on a new vigor and a broader view of men and things. Party divisions will not be wanting. Men in public life will still cherish the affiliations of policies and leaders and traditions, but the seriousness of the present situation, the history-making days we are living in, and the events we are witnessing have cast a strange spell over all minds. There is a sense of bigness, a spirit abroad that makes men measure up to something greater than themselves. It is manifest in the thousands of young men who have volunteered to fight the battles of liberty and of democracy. It is present in the business man who twists and turns, during a period of slackness and stringency, in keeping his business in operation and at as full capacity as possible. It is seen in the politicians who forego party advantage for the pubiic good. This spirit seemed to pervade the addresses as they were recorded in Hansard. Canada is fortunate in possessing the dignified and tactful leader she has at the head of the government in the person of Sir Robert Borden. Fortunate is she also in having at the head of the Liberal party the polished gentleman, Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Both are party men, but both have deported themselves in the House in a maner that ought to raise distinctly its tone and art. Much devolves on Sir Robert Borden as Prime Minister in the present conduct of politics, and, the quality of the addresses and the nature of the questions asked show that a splendid example is being set for Canadian public life. It is well that such is the case, for the old deportment of barangue and pointless or unfair retort, of speeches in quantity without quality, would not be becoming in a nation that is to be shortly called to the councils of a great empire, and which will no doubt have a voice in the settlement when it comes.

THE QUEBEC MARRIAGE CASE.

THE TREMBLAY marriage case must be reargued, so runs the decision of the highest court in the Empire. The reason why so unusual a pronouncement should be given is not very clear, and seems to be that their lordships had difficulty in determining the attitude of the code towards marriage as a civil, apart from an ecclesiastical, contract.

The facts of the case, which appear in the news columns, are undisputed. The marriage took place in good faith and was solemnized according to the Catholic Church. Six years after the marriage, the husband discovered that his wife was a fourth cousin of his, and he applied for, and received, a decree of annulment of his marriage on the slight technical ground that a dispensation had not been obtained permitting the marriage under this distant relationship. A small fee would have secured this dispensation, and doubtless it would have been paid, had the parties known before their marriage of their relationship. The granting of the decree of divorce by the church that married this couple appears to have had no adequate foundation, and the whole case has been fought on a technicality that is contrary to the ends of justice.

The case is complicated, owing to the peculiar situation of Quebec, where Roman law pertains, and where the Catholic Church has more influence than in any other Canadian province, owing to the presence of ecclesiastical courts. But the case is important, because it will have an effect beyond Quebec. It is surmised that the Privy Council postponed its decision for political reasons — so that no animosity would arise between different parts of Canada over the case during the present war. If such is true, the Privy Council has committed an outrage, as the great expense of a second argumentation must be borne by the parties involved, and they had difficulty in financing the first appeal. If the wife is unable to finance a second appeal, she must remain a divorced woman. Justice is not granted her because she has appealed to the Privy Council and paid for a pronouncement by it that has been withheld.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION.

THAT accident prevention is largely a matter of education has been clearly demonstrated by carefully compiled statistics of some United States railways, recently published. On one railway, during a period of fifty-three months of operation since the formation of safety committees among the employees, a reduction of 371 is shown in the number of persons killed and of 11,258 in the number injured.

At the same time, despite this favourable showing, in three years there were registered 17,781 accidents, of which 99 out of every 100 could have been prevented.

While no statistics of the accidents occurring throughout Canada are available, it requires only a casual glance at the newspapers to show that the number is large. In view of this fact, it is very evident that there is great need of an extension of the "safety first" educational movement in Canada. The subject is one which should not be left entirely to private interests to develop; it is in the general interest of Canada at large that the number of her disabled and injured citizens should be greatly reduced.

A fertile field for the propagation of the "safety first," or accident prevention movement, is the public school. The need of care should be taught the child, as lasting impressions can be made upon the young mind. The pulpit also has an influence which should be directed towards education along accident prevention lines. This work may rightly come under the head of social service, in which some churches are taking an active interest.

Canada owes it to her people, municipalities owe it to their citizens, schools and other organizations owe it to their scholars and members that attention be faithfully directed to the matter of safety and accident prevention, both public and personal, and that they be made to realize that it is better to be careful than be a cripple.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SIR JOHN FRENCH, who commands the largest army ever raised by Great Britain, is sixty-two years of age, but does not look it nor do his movements suggest that age. As a boy, French developed a fondness for homiletics which led his mother to urge that he be educated for the ministry, but his father, a naval captain, had his son enter the navy. After some years he left that branch of the service and joined the cavalry, where he soon made a name for himself. French was a student, and instead of attending teas and fox hunts, as his brother officers did, he devoted himself heart and soul to the study of military tactics. His success in the Boer war stamped him as one of the greatest cavalry leaders of all time, while his appointment to the command of the army in France is additional proof of his ability.

THE ESTIMATES of the Dominion Parliament provide for $47,000 for the new post-office and $25,000 for a new drydock. As soon as the necessary legislation is put through, it is hoped that work will be begun without delay. The erection of public buildings during a period of unemployment and hard times is a very good way of ameliorating existing conditions. It is to be noted that the estimates provide for a goodly number of public works throughout Canada, and the erection of these will be a source of relief and improvement in a great many places.

Start of a Turkish Navy.

(London Chronicle.)

The Turkish navy of the past owed almost its existence to an English sailor, Hobart Pasha, a bold buccaneer of the Elizabethan period, who, by some strange perverseness of fate, was born into the Victorian age. He retired from the English navy in 1863, and during the American Civil War he became a blockade runner with hairbreadth escapes innumerable. After the war he entered the Turkish service, suppressed the Cretan rebellion by intercepting the supplies from Greece, and then reorganized the Turkish fleet so well that the Sultan appointed him marshal of the empire. Hobart Pasha also enjoyed the unique distinction of being twice struck off our navy for breach of the foreign enlistment act, and twice reinstated there. And he died in 1886 with the rank of a British vice-admiral.

Germany and Dr. Liebknecht.

(London News and Leader.)

Why should the German Government protest so violently or take up arms against Dr. Liebknecht, whose isolation it asserts, unless it were really nervous? The German Socialist, well disciplined and regimented though he be, might indeed be asking questions. He was invited to this war as a sacred war in defence of the Fatherland against Russian barbarism. Now he sees all the flood of hatred diverted against England and France, and these two liberal countries made the main objective of German military efforts. Well might he begin to ask whether he has been deceived.

How Are Nurses Selected?

(Vancouver World.)

Throughout Canada there are hundreds of applications from nurses who wish to take service in the war zone. The militia department is under the unfortunate necessity of refusing scores for each one that is accepted. In the circumstances, it would be interesting to know on what principles the choice is made.

IMMIGRATION.

Editor, Review:

Sir, — Sacrificing people to theories is the only resort of the authorities, and that would be the least objection to the immigration. Even free trade is better that free exploitation, or, as Saturday Night puts it, the obtaining of immigrants merely to get cheap farm labour. Mr. Preston charges the late Lord Strathcona with making profit out of immigrants by a transportation combine, and our Government advertises "Free farms for all," when the settlers are starving. However, Mr. Lemieux and Mr. Stevens, who is to lecture on "Canada's Duty to Her Immigrants," should consider whether the fault is not in the class of politicians and lawyers and the Salvation Army.

THE C. P. R. ECHO.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir, — In a friend's home today my attention was drawn to an article dealing with the "C. P. R. Echo."

I trust you can afford me a few lines in your valuable paper to ask, if there is no way in which the citizens of our city can have the oportunity of perusing these productions of the Rail Road Offices, which, I understand, are only to be typewritten.

In the G. T. R. Depot a short time ago I had the pleasure of reading a few extracts from the "G. T. R. Gazette," edited by Mr. John Herron, a copy of which, I was informed by Mr. McNabb, had been well received at the head office in Toronto.

I am quite anxious now to see the "Echo." Surely an article by such a business man as the gentleman mentioned is worth reading, and if the other articles approach in any degree those which I read in the "Gazette," the citizens of Peterborough are missing a literary treat in these two magazines.

Would the editors of the "Gazette" and "Echo" not insert their principal stories in the Review?

Apologizing for using your valuable space,

Faithfully yours,

Seeking Big Trees

The American Genetic association of Washington has offered two prizes of $100 each for two photographs—one of the largest trees of a nut bearing variety, such as the chestnut, oak, walnut, butternut or pecan and one of the largest broad leaf tree that does not bear edible seeds, such as the elm, birch, maple, cottonwood and tulip poplar. The contest closes on July 1, 1915. The association does not want photographs of cone bearing trees, for it is well known the big trees of California have no rivals. The object of the competition is to find out in what regions the native trees attain their largest growth and under what conditions they thrive best.

When the situation of these large trees is learned the measurements will be verified. Then the association will try to get seeds, cuttings or grafting wood from especially thriving trees in the region with which to experiment in other parts of the country. If there is anything in heredity in trees—a question that the experiments will do something to answer—the association may be able to establish some especially choice strains of native trees in regions that now lack good specimens. The investigation may also help to determine whether trees can be acclimatized. Trees sometimes grow better in new places than they do in their native region. That is true of some of the Australian eucalypts, and the Monterey pine flourishes better in New Zealand, it is said, than it does in its native California.—Youth's Companion.

THE NORTHERN CANADIAN WILDS

Few Hudson Bay Agents Natives and Half-breeds There

Though much is written about Western Canada nowadays, writes P. H. Godsell, in the Wide World Magazine, one hears very little of the vast northern wastes of that Dominion, where the conditions of life vary but little from what they were a century ago.

Until very recent years the great wilderness of swamp and forest stretching from the head of Lake Winnipeg east to Hudson Bay, and northerly to the Arctic Circle, was known as the district of Keewatin.

With the exception of small detachments of Northwest Mounted Police, a few scattered missionaries, and the Hudson Bay Company's traders and employes, this vast district is peopled entirely by Indians of the Cree and Salteaux tribes, and, in the far northern portion, a few wandering Eskimos and Chippewayans.

This country, in which winter of almost Arctic severity holds away for eight months in the year, is a network of large lakes, rivers and smaller streams draining into Hudson Bay. Along most of these navigable waters, situated from a hundred to two hundred and fifty miles apart, stand the lonely trading posts or forts of the Hudson Bay Company. These forts usually consist of a picketed or stockaded square inclosing a number of log or frame buildings, usually four or five, with a tall flagpole rising in the centre, from which, on special occasions, floats the red ensign of the company.

The staff of the smaller outposts generally consists of one white man as officer in charge, with two or three half-breed or Indian assistants or dog-drivers. As in most cases these posts are situated in a virgin wilderness, far from civilization, the trader may not see a fellow white man for six months at a stretch, and has only the society afforded by his half-breed servants.

Large Increase In Revenue.

Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, Postmaster-General, is the only member of the Government whose department can report an increased revenue in spite of the war. The sale of stamps in December brought in $1,720,492, an increase of $28,492 over December, 1913. For the nine months of the present fiscal year the revenue has been $11,189,780, an increase of $66,074. The parcel post system, which was established early last year, is responsible for much of the increased revenue. The sending of Christmas gifts to the 33,000 Canadian soldiers on Salisbury Plain would also increase the December receipts.

The revenue of the department for last month was almost three times that of December, 1904, and the revenue for the first nine months of the fiscal year 1904 was $4,472,600, as compared with $11,189,780 for the same period of this year.

Big Water Plans For Regina.

That the City of Regina is optimistic as to future prospects for development is evident from the fact that the waterworks department is preparing plans for tapping additional sources of water supply. There is an abundance of water available from the present artesian wells to meet all possible demands from the existing population, but Regina is profiting from her experience of several years ago when she was caught napping in this regard, and the increase in population was so great that the waterworks extension could not keep pace. R. O. Wynn-Roberts, consulting engineer, has laid out plans to provide for additional water supply on short notice.

SYNOPSIS

Matt Broughton leaves the service of John Mort on a pacific island to return to America. Mort gives him a valuable ring. Broughton promises to say nothing about the mysterious Mort and his woman companion. He is shipwrecked and must realise in San Francisco on the ring.

Raising $1,000 on the ring, to be repaid, Broughton returns to his old home at Manaswan. He thinks of going into the mule business with Victor Daggancourt, a colored garage keeper. Broughton is visited by the local editor, who calls him "king."

The "king" is due to a "fake" newspaper story about Broughton's adventures in the Pacific. At a church fair he meets Christine Marshall, daughter of a local magnate.

Matt falls in love with Chris, who asks him to call on her. Daggancourt is anxious to make the start in the mule business in Kentucky.

On his way to the Marshalls' Matt is detained by an importunate stranger, but Matt is late and cannot listen to him. He tells his love to Chris.

Chris also loves Matt. The stranger, who calls himself Kay, shows Matt an old portrait of Mort and offers him $50,000 for information about him, but Matt remains loyal.

The ring is flawed. Matt hears from San Francisco, and is worth only $500. Kay raises his offer to $100,000 in a railroad car and shows Matt the ring to prove he and his employers are aware Matt knows Mort.

Matt again refuses and is attacked, but escapes. He tells Chris about Mort, and together they try to puzzle out the strange man's identity.

Chris promises to marry Matt as soon as he gets a job in spite of expected opposition from her wealthy and proud father.

Mysterious influences lose various positions for Matt, including one as assistant to Daggancourt and demonstrator of an automobile.

Matt and Chris elope and are married after a quarrel with General Marshall. They go to San Francisco and ship for John Mort's island on board the schooner Esmeralda, commanded by Captain Schwartz.

An indefinable suspicion was beginning to creep into Matt's mind that there was something wrong with the ship. The transformation of Schwartz from an amiable, talkative, friendly little man into the taciturn creature who paced the poop or wrote for hours in his cabin struck oddly on Matt's attention. The gruff mate was gruffer than ever and showed an increasing disinclination to let Matt see the chart as the vessel's course was plotted from day to day. And these white and whiskered patriarchs? Was it a floating old men's home or what?

The humorous view with which these things were at first regarded changed imperceptibly as time wore on. Who was this strange Schwartz and this strange Brandeis, and what had been the secret of the former's impulsive good will in San Francisco? Nothing now was heard of old south sea captains standing together. The amazing fact dawned on Matt that Schwartz was no seaman at all, but a landsman masquerading as the master of the vessel. Was it possible that they were prisoners on this singular ship—comfortable, well fed, politely treated prisoners?

To increase Matt's misgivings, Chris, who was a lighter sleeper than himself, had been hearing "noises" in the middle of the night. She described them as "funny, snapping sounds" that commenced after Schwartz had passed their door and looked in, as though to assure himself that they were asleep. She was so positive of this that Matt determined to stay awake one night and see and hear for himself. If it were fancy on Chris' part the sooner she was undeceived the better, for she was nervous and frightened and had moments of passionately wishing they had never set foot on the Esmeralda.

Midnight struck—eight bells. Half after midnight—one bell. One o'clock—two bells. Half after 1—three bells. He grew drowsier and drowsier. Suddenly Chris clutched him.

"He's coming," she whispered. "Matt, he's coming—I heard the door."

Matt held his breath. Schwartz was tiptoeing past their door. No, not past it, for the man stopped on his way and cast a quick glance within. He was in his pajamas. His face was a study of furtiveness and caution. Then he tiptoed on and was seen no more.

"Didn't I tell you?" murmured Chris. "In a moment the noises will begin."

"Sh-h-h!" returned Matt. "Sh-h-h!"

It was more than a moment, however, before the quiet was disturbed.

"There, there!" exclaimed Chris.

A peculiar jarring sound became faintly audible, as though some machinery had been set in motion. But it was too irregular for machinery, and had an indescribable thrilling quality that Matt was at a loss to account for. The cabin shivered with it. It was as fine as the lash of a whip and as vicious, as it seemed to sting the air. Matt leaped from the bunk, despite Chris' entreaties. By George, he was going to see what it was! Follow Schwartz and find out.

It was an astonishing sight that met his gaze. Forward of the foremast was a sort of hut constructed of mattresses, forming a windbreak or shield, open only to the fo'castle. Within it, seated on a box, was Herman, bent over an apparatus and causing it by means of a small brass handle to emit that astounding buzzing as well as an incessant sputter of sparks and flashes. There was no listlessness now in that gawky youth. His expression was keen; his hand moved the key with lightning precision; he had an unmistakable air of mastery and skill as of a man engaged in something he excelled in.

Wireless! Of course it was the wireless. Matt had read of it, but had never seen it before in action. Zi—zi—zizizizi—zi—zi-zi-zi zi zi! The brass lever darted up and down, lingered and snapped amid a splutter of sparks and flashes; the captain, holding a sheaf of papers with his thumb, reeled off sentence after sentence in a low, vibrant voice; the lantern light flickered over the yellow sheets, over Herman's bent head encased in a curious harness, over the gleaming apparatus. Occasionally Schwartz was warned to stop. The machine no longer transmitting, would receive. Zi, sizi, si-zi-zi-zi—with this time Herman repeating, word by word, the message thus mysteriously caught from space, while Schwartz listened darkly, with preoccupation, seeing the unseen, weighing and understanding what was being told him.

Matt returned as he had come, more concerned than ever not to betray himself. The discovery had daunted him; he was in the grip of terror. He was so agitated that he could scarcely speak, as Chris, on guard at the door, shut it behind him and breathlessly asked what he had seen.

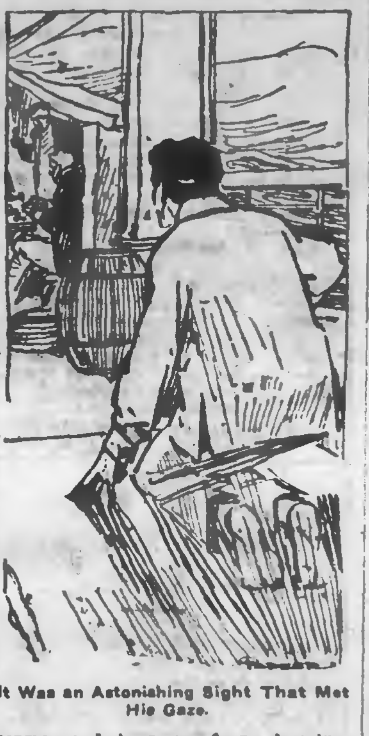
"They're working a wireless apparatus," he answered.

"Wireless, Matt! You don't mean a wireless telegraph?"

"Yes. Herman's operating it, and Schwartz is sending messages."

"You actually saw them?"

"Yes, inside a lot of mattresses by the foremast to deaden the sound, of course, and keep us from hearing. We're prisoners on this ship. Chris, they've kidnaped us."



It Was an Astonishing Sight That Met His Gaze.

"But isn't that a terrible thing to do?"

"For us—yes."

"But couldn't they all be punished and sent to prison?"

"Possibly, if the Oregon ranged alongside. But where is your Oregon? Chris, this whole ship and the whole crew must have been waiting for us in San Francisco, like a lot of spiders for two little flies. Tokelaus! We'll never see any Tokelaus. That was all part of the scheme to hoodwink us—to get us away."

"But what could they want with us?"

"Want with us! Why, they want John Mort!"

"Oh, Matt!"

"Yes. The same people who are running this ship are the same that drove me out of Manaswan. Bribing me failed, force failed, but they were cunning enough to know that rather than starve I'd double back to the islands. So there was Schwartz all ready, with his ship and his blarney and his spider's web across the road I was bound to take."

"Why hasn't the captain tried to make you tell—tried to force you to tell?"

"That's coming. As sure as I am alive that's coming when we reach the people who are answering our wireless. There's trouble ahead, Chris."

"Well, in that case, you'll simply have to take the only way out."

"I'll never do that—never."

"But, Matt, they might— Rather than have you hurt I'll tell everything myself."

"You shan't."

"I will, Matt, I will!"

"You don't know where this island is. You don't know the bearings. What could you tell them that they don't know?"

She whispered something back that blanched his face.

For a moment he was silent. It had never come to him that their deviltry might be turned against Chris.

"I'll sink the ship first!" he cried.

CHAPTER XV.

Danger Above and Below.

It was difficult, once the Esmeralda had been revealed in her true character, to maintain the fiction of unconcern. But it was policy to do so, lest something worse might befall, and Matt and Chris were perseveringly friendly to the careworn captain, and to the sulky, sardonic mate. They judged it wise to talk a great deal of the Tokelaus, and of their plan afterward to reach Samoa and start a little cacao plantation.

Matt's cry, wrung from his desperation, that he would sink the schooner had given him the germ of an idea. Yes, why not sink her—not from any notion of wild revenge, but as a well calculated solution of the perils surrounding them? To wait, in fact, until they knew there were islands near them and then, sinking the vessel, compel Schwartz to take to the surf boat. This was a fine, big, carvel built boat, twenty-six feet long, and Matt tested it with his penknife to make sure it was sound. It would easily hold all hands, with ample provisions and water, and a trip of sixty or eighty miles in it would be no terrible hardship. Compared to the unknown dangers that grew daily nearer, the hazard of such an escape seemed small indeed. And once ashore, anywhere ashore—they would be safe, for, however primitive and loose the little native governments are, they are strong enough to protect the lives and persons of those within their rule.

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th. 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

But to sink the Esmeralda! That was so easy to say! Of course a stick of dynamite would send her to the bottom in short order, and there was plenty of the deadly stuff in the trade room, together with caps and fuses. But that was suicide. That was to open a barn door to the Pacific ocean. The alternative was to chisel a good sized hole in her garboard streak and give it about twice the bore of a bilge pump.

The Esmeralda had an unusually good pump, worked by a couple of hand spikes, and throwing a five inch stream. Matt squared the circle industriously and then doubled the result, going over these calculations again and again to make sure of no mistake. What he aimed to accomplish was a leak that would force Schwartz to lay the vessel toward the nearest land, and perhaps bring it into view before there would be any need to take refuge in the whaler. On a two to one ratio of leak against pump, he hoped the Esmeralda might stay afloat for ten or twelve hours after he had achieved his purpose.

They were twenty-four days out of San Francisco when the first land rose over the horizon. To Matt the sight of the island was like a signal; it made him acutely restless and uncomfortable; he was possessed with the suffocating sense of almost terror that precedes all desperate deeds. Taking advantage of the commotion on deck, he ran below, watched his opportunity, and entered the trade room. No cracksman, on his knees before a safe, and thrillingly conscious that at any moment he might be interrupted, could have experienced more trepidation than did Matt as he sought out a case of axes and pried open the lid. He seized one, he went down on his knees before the hatch and fumbled with the ring countersunk in the planking.

The hold was about nine or ten feet deep; he peered in again, gauging it. Rope? There was rope everywhere, compactly coiled and burlapped. It would be quite a bother, though, to cut the fastenings; new rope also was sure to kink—to tangle and twist itself into snarls. Why not a bolt of that stout red cotton. It would be just as efficacious—more efficacious—limber. He made the loose end fast to a keg of nails and tossed the bolt itself down the hatchway; lowered the ax after it on a piece of twine; also a key saw and a pair of chisels on another piece of twine.

Crushing the cotton in his hands, he swung over the opening and let himself go. His feet touched the iron bars; all about him it was as black as pitch except under the twilight of the hatch. The air was stale and stifling and reeking of bilge water.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Diet For Diabetes.

Dr. Marcel Labbe recommends as a diet for diabetics food distributed about as follows: Dry vegetables (peas, beans and lentils), 300 grams; butter, 150 grams; five or six eggs; five or six aleurone biscuits or thirty grams of gluten bread. The butter is used with the vegetables; the eggs may be cooked to suit the patient's taste. This is a ration for one day and is to be continued three or four days.

The Journal of the American Medical Association remarks that this "is by no means an inanition diet, since it furnishes on an average 120 to 140 grams of protein, 130 to 170 grams of fat and 170 to 190 grams of starch."

Lesson VII.—First Quarter, For Feb. 14, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. iii, 1-13, 19, 20—Memory Verses, 8, 9—Golden Text, I Sam. iii, 9—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

What a specially great lesson this is for boys, with something for every one, young and old. In all Scripture there is a message from the heart of God to each individual heart that reads. It is true always, as in the last verse of our lesson chapter, that the Lord reveals Himself by His word. The Scriptures are the revelation of God to man, and the Lord Jesus Christ is the Living Word, in whom we see the Father, even as He said, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (John xiv, 9). Our lesson opens with Samuel ministering unto the Lord. See also chapter ii, 11, 18. This is not the word which is translated to "minister in the priest's office," but the word to serve or minister, as when Joshua ministered to Moses (Ex. xxxiii, 11; Josh. i, 1).

Even a child can serve Him who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister (Matt. xx, 28). May we always be able to say from the heart, "Whose I am and whom I serve," and count it our highest privilege to minister unto Him (Acts xxvii, 23; Luke viii, 3; Dan. vi, 16). In the revised version the words "precious" and "open" are in the margin "rare" and "frequent," and the meaning probably is that any special message from the Lord was of rare occurrence or it had been some time since He had spoken. The book of Judges ended with every man doing right in his own eyes (xxi, 25), and now Eli, the priest of the tabernacle, which was then at Shiloh (i, 3; Josh. xviii, 1, 10), was somewhat out of fellowship, for he mistook broken hearted, praying Hannah for a drunken woman and did not control his own sons, honoring them above God, so that a man of God had to come to him with a reproof and a warning (i, 12-16; ii, 27-36).

Before we consider the call of Samuel in our lesson let us look at the circumstances of his birth. His father, Elkanah, seems to have been a devout man, going up from year to year to worship and to sacrifice unto the Lord of hosts in Shiloh (i, 3). But he had two wives, which was contrary to God's original arrangement and always brought trouble. Hannah, who had no children, was continually taunted by the other, her adversary, provoked sore and made to fret and grieve (i, 4-8). Her refuge was prayer unto the Lord, and He heard her and gave her this son Samuel (i, 10-20). She called him Samuel because she asked God for him (i, 20, margin), and when she had weaned him she took him to Shiloh to serve the Lord in the tabernacle with Eli, visiting him from year to year when she went up to worship and taking him a little coat (i, 24-28; ii, 18, 19).

The Lord abundantly rewarded her for the gift of her firstborn, for He gave her five others, three sons and two daughters (ii, 20, 21). So Samuel grew before the Lord and was in favor both with the Lord and also with men, and the Lord was with him, and all Israel knew that he was established to be a prophet of the Lord (iii, 21, 20). How beautifully the Lord did bless the boy who was dedicated to Him even before his birth, and how grandly He did reward his mother and cause her to forget her misery and sing for joy! Her song in chapter ii, 1-10, which is also called a prayer, is one of the most beautiful on record.

Returning to our lesson story, we read that one night, or perhaps toward the dawn (verses 2, 3, 15), Samuel heard some one call him, and, supposing it to be Eli, he ran to him, but, on being assured that Eli had not called him, he lay down again. The second time he heard his name and went again to Eli, but was assured as before. Not until he heard his name the third time and for the third time went to Eli with the words "Here am I" did Eli perceive that the Lord was calling the child. Then he said to him, "If you are called again say, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.'" For the fourth time the Lord called him and this time mentioned his name twice—"Samuel, Samuel."

I have found only seven people in the Bible who were thus addressed, and there must be some significance in it, whether we can see it or not. Look them up and ponder the circumstances prayerfully. On hearing this fourth call Samuel replied as Eli taught him, and then the Lord gave to Samuel the solemn message for Eli, which he faithfully repeated to him in the morning, telling him every whit and hiding nothing from him. It is doubtful if either of them slept again that night. Samuel had his first message directly from the Lord, and Eli was no doubt wondering what it could be. They each had enough to think about. Samuel from this time onward seems to have had always an ear for God. Note the peculiar language of I Sam. ix, 15, and may we all have similarly anointed ears to hear His voice. Eli saw the justice of it all, remembering no doubt the words of the man of God in chapter ii, 27, and he submissively said: "It is the Lord. Let Him do what seemeth Him good" (verse 18). Compare Job i, 21; ii, 10; Ps. xxxix, 9; Isa. xxxviii, 15; xxxix, 8.

MOLES ARE MODISH.

Why? Because a Queen Adopted Their Fur For Muffs and Wraps.

MOLESKIN WRAP.

Anybody who knows the little gray mole in his haunts and is aware of his unpopularity with gardeners will be surprised to learn that a moleskin mantle like the one illustrated is a very costly wrap. The answer is that mole is fashionable. The story goes that Queen Alexandra of England hearing that farmers in a certain section of Great Britain were suffering from a plague of moles, adopted the use of moleskin with the object of making it fashionable and creating a commercial demand for the pelts of the little animals in order to aid the farmers. She succeeded, for in a short time moleskin was one of the most popular of furs. It is a very beautiful pelt, its soft gray being becoming to most women. Hundreds of skins are needed to make a wrap like the one shown here. This luxurious mantle has a collar of unspotted ermine and is lined with satin.

SUBSTITUTE FOR SHELLAC.

An Economical Varnish Which May Be Easily Prepared at Home.

For keeping the woodwork that is finished natural in good condition this substitute for shellac varnish may be made at home and kept ready for use any time the housekeeper chooses:

Take four pounds of silica or the same quantity of China clay—the former, however, is the better—and stir into it a quart of good Japan liquid drier. Beat the mass into a perfect mixture.

Then add, while stirring the mass quickly, one and a half gallons of best hard oil, after which let the mass stand an hour or so and strain through a fine sieve. Thin with turpentine for use. On soft woods use it very thin, but it should be applied heavier on harder wood. This shellac will look and wear well.

INVESTORS IN LAND OFFERED BIG PROFITS

Case of the McCatcheon Brothers is Proceeding at Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 11. — That land booms were coincident with the birth of "every new crop of fools" was the opinion expressed by Magistrate Dennison yesterday, when the preliminary investigation into the charges against the McCutcheon Brothers was continued in the Police Court. He remembered it, he said, in '56 and '90 and 1912. It seemed to run in cycles.

"It looks to me," said the Magistrate, "as if the McCutcheons had formed company after company to buy from one another to create sales and fees."

Mr. A. J. Russell Snow explained that the defendants, who were dealers in properties, sold these properties on agreements of sale, with the cash from one sale buying new property and selling it to a syndicate. The McCutcheons would act as agents in the resale to the public. They would thus make profits on the purchase and sale of the land, and would get in addition commissions on the resale of the lots to the public.

The Magistrate expressed his lack of sympathy with such get-rich-quick schemes. Mr. Snow stated that it was the common practice nowadays. "Lots of the best real estate firms in Toronto are doing it," he said.

Juggled Subscriptions and Land.

Dr. Herbert N. Weaver, the complainant in the charge, in the witness box explained that a syndicate had been formed in England for the purchase of a certain portion of the Mayfair subdivision outside Edmonton. The English company, he said, paid $130,000 for the land. Witness invested $500, but when he received his papers found he had been put down for $1,000. Later, according to Dr. Weaver, this land held by the English investors was taken over by McCutcheons and other land at Calgary substituted for it. Dr. Weaver said that this land was claimed to be opposite a railway station, which it was not. It was represented to him in London, Eng., that investment in this Mayfair land would yield profits of 40 to 400 per cent. He never got anything out of it. He had paid an additional £31 on account of the increased value of his holding when the transfer was made to the Calgary land. Dr. Weaver complained that the location of the land had been misrepresented to him and that the valuation of the property was entirely wrong, it being worth only one-fifth of the $100,000 which was claimed as its value.

McCutcheon Brothers was represented to him, he said, as a concern that had floated 42 syndicates and sold off every one at a profit to shareholders. He did not know what had become of the $65,000 cash subscribed by the English investors, but he "heard" $10,000 had been given to the people from whom the McCutcheons bought. This was the Strathcona Land Syndicate.

Ready to Tumble Down.

Mrs. Hannah Allen apparently had not been much impressed with the Mayfair land, the future "Rosedale of Edmonton." The property she described as "not very desirable, as it slanted so much." "Not a person in three years," she maintained "ever thought of buying or selling a lot there, as the earth was liable to tumble down." Witness further stated that the river "went wild" every spring, and if anyone attempted to build a home there he would be in danger of being floated away. Seven hundred and fifty dollars a lot for that locality was very high she thought. She had left Edmonton, 1913, and at that date there were no buildings on the property.

"Would you be surprised to hear that the McCutcheons paid $321,000 for that 160 acres in July, 1912?" asked Mr. Snow.

"Property was selling very high, then," answered the witness.

Mr. William Coulter had bought two blocks at Mayfair for $750 each. He was told by McCutcheon that he could get his clear deed when the third payment had been made. He had made his third payment but had not got his deed. He wanted his deed or his money. He had no cause of complaint except the elusiveness of his deed.

Byron D. Armstrong was another who wanted his deed for Mayfair property he had purchased.

"I was told," he said, "that we should get at least $100 to $200 a foot for the land I paid $40 for." He was out $1,600 and never got his deed.

Mr. Secord said an incorporated company which he represented had purchased the property from McCutcheon Brothers for $400,000.

"They paid little for these properties," said the Crown Attorney "and sold at a tremendous price."

Only Got Paper.

Arthur Pennington of Bowmanville had invested in Montana property syndicated by McCutcheon Brothers. He had paid the McCutcheons $500 and got a receipt.

"We were supposed to get 60 acres," he said.

"Did you get it?"

"No; only the receipts."

"The McCutcheons took all the money and that was the end of it," commented the Magistrate.

FEARFUL LOSSES

Inflicted on Turkish Forces by British

CAIRO, Feb. 11.—News reaching here emphasizes the fearful character of the execution done by British troops in the two days' battle on the Suez Canal. The slaughter in the Turkish ranks was as terrible as anything in history. The British are still burying dead by the score, where they lie on the desert.

This is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the enemy advanced in open formation over a very wide front and failed to drive their attack home, thus rendering machine gun fire comparatively inocuous. Where attempts were made to cross the canal, British machine guns were brought to bear. Pontoons literally filled with dead have been brought to the surface. When all is known it will probably be found that not far short of 10,000 of the enemy were killed.

Barrie Hotel Burned.

BARRIE, Ont., Feb. 11.—Fire totally destroyed the Queen's Hotel here yesterday morning, carrying with it the entire stock of the A. E. Cudmore Bankrupt Stock Co., and the store of J. D. Waisberg, the latter saved his stock.

The hundred men mobilized here for the third contingent rendered the firemen splendid assistance, and all the hotel residents escaped.

ADRIANOPLE BOMBED.

Allied Aviators Cross Turkish Thrace and Assail Forts.

MITYLENE, Feb. 11.—(Via Paris.)—Several British and French seaplanes flew over Turkish Thrace on Tuesday, according to a despatch from Tenedos. Two of the machines went as far as Adrianople dropping bombs on the forts. The Turks are said to have been unprepared for a bombardment, as they did not expect allied aircraft to venture so far inland.

Mitylene (or Lesbos) and Tenedos, are islands near the mouth of the Dardanelles, which the allied fleets have been bombarding. Adrianople is more than 100 miles inland from there, and almost as far away from the base of operations as Constantinople would be.

Attack on Monterey.

CADEREYTA, State of Nueve Leon, Mexico, Feb. 11.—Carranzista troops, commanded by Gen. Pablo Gonzales, yesterday attacked Monterey the largest city in Northern Mexico. Gen. Villareal's division assaulted and took several suburbs. The artillery bombardment was terrific and parts of the city are in ruins.

A Villaist regiment, commanded by Col. Feraz, deserted to the Carranzistas, but the attack was discontinued after the unexpected arrival of reinforcements for the Villa troops.

ESTIMATES FOR ARMY ARE PASSED

Three Million Force is Supported by Commons

LONDON, Feb. 11. — After two days of debate, during which many matters in connection with the war were discussed, the House of Commons last night passed without division the army estimates for 3,000,000 men, exclusive of India, and also by a "token" vote provided for the pay of the officers and men. By this vote the Government will receive a blank check for this purpose.

Replying to points raised by members of the House, Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, said that in case of a raid on Britain Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton was in command of a mobile force, which was ready to go anywhere at any time.

There was considerable discussion of the question of inoculation against disease, in reply to which Mr. Tennant declared the sentiment in favor of compulsory inoculation was increasing, and that the Government was considering adopting it. Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War, felt so strongly about the matter, Mr. Tennant said, that he was about to issue an order suspending grants of leave to those persons who declined to be inoculated.

The Under-Secretary added that the suggestion that the War Office should consent to the enlistment of "bantam battalions" was being considered. In the mining districts, he said, there were many men under the regulation height who desire to serve in the army and that some of them already were in training.

CARGO IS HELD

Britain Sends Wilhelmina's Lading to Prize Court

LONDON, Feb. 11. — The British Foreign Office, after an enquiry, has decided that the cargo of the American steamship Wilhelmina must go through a prize court. The ship may depart from Falmouth as soon as the cargo is discharged.

It is officially confirmed that the Wilhelmina was neither convoyed nor ordered into Falmouth, but was compelled to make that port because of damage suffered in storms while crossing the Atlantic.

"It was the length of the Wilhelmina that saved her. If she had been another 100 feet long she would have broken in two," said Capt. Brewer of the steamer yesterday, on the voyage of the Wilhelmina.

Spy in London Regiment?

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The benefit of a "test mobilization" was fully demonstrated yesterday morning when in something like half an hour the whole of the eighteenth overseas battalion lined up on the parade grounds at Queen's Park, all in shape to leave, had such been the orders.

An alleged German secret agent is in the thirty-third battalion's guardroom at Queen's Park awaiting removal to the military prison at Fort Henry. The man had enlisted as a private at Windsor, evidently crossing from the American side. It is said he talked in his sleep and made use of German expressions.

DR. ROCHE'S STATEMENT ON FREE SEED GRAIN

Question of Distribution of Seed in the Western Provinces is Discussed in the Commons—Opposition Members Fill Order Paper With Inquiries Regarding Affairs Both of War and Peace.

OTTAWA, Feb. 11. — With the budget and its proposed tariff changes looming up for to-day in the Commons, yesterday's session was comparatively quiet and uneventful, the chief discussion of the day hinging on the subject of the distribution of seed grain among the farmers of the west.

W. M. Martin (Lib., Regina) moved the adjournment of the House to deal with the urgent need of western farmers for seed grain. This was particularly the case in the southwestern portion of Saskatchewan and the southern part of Alberta, which had been drought-stricken last summer.

A serious feature of the situation Mr. Martin maintained, was that upon the strength of an official communication from the Commissioner of Immigration at Winnipeg and statements in the Government press throughout the whole west it was believed until last month that the Dominion Government intended to supply seed grain to the holders of patented as well as unpatented lands. He urged that this letter be made good by the Government.

Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, said he sympathized with the farmers of the west, but the policy of the Government was well known. He expressed regret that the commissioner's letter had been open to misinterpretation, but the expenditure involved if the Government acted upon all applications would be eleven million dollars.

The discussion was continued by Messrs. Buchanan, Dr. Neely, Thompson, Maracch, Hon. Frank Oliver, Dr. Michael Clark, Hon. Arthur Meighen, Turriff and R. B. Bennett.

Notice was given yesterday of another batch of questions.

Hon. Charles Murphy inquires as to the amount paid the C. N. R. for transportation, express and all other charges to the Valcartier Camp.

He also desires to know the names and salaries of those employed to administer the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

He requests the fullest information regarding the transports which conveyed the Canadian troops to England, the names of the vessels, the owners, the brokers, the cost, etc.

Hon. Frank Oliver brings up the question of pensions of the dependents of those of the Canadian contingents who may be killed or disabled. He asks what the Government intends to do.

Further questions are being asked regarding the purchase of medical supplies in Ottawa for the troops. Mr. Kyte and Mr. Chisholm desire to know all about J. E. Powell, who received a large order, his place of business, the sums paid, etc., also all about clinic thermometers purchased in Ottawa.

F. B. Carvell inquires if the Government has instituted any proceedings to recover the $34,607 which was overpaid the Southampton Railway.

An abrupt adjournment became necessary during the afternoon when the Parliamentary electric plan went wrong and the lights went out. The members, trooping from the chamber, had to requisition candles and tapers to find their hats and coats, and navigate the inky blackness of the corridors.

ALLIES MASTERS OF BELGIAN COAST

Germans Around Ostend Are Alarmed at Their Positions and Reinforcements Are Being Sent in From Bruges—Battling in the Argonne Goes on Night and Day Without Appreciable Change.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Though the battle has slackened on the major part of the 320 miles' front in France and Belgium, violent and bloody encounters continue in the Argonne. The Germans persistently renew the attack, and when they have enough of it the French assume the offensive, so there is rest neither night nor day. It is here that the heaviest losses on the western front have occurred, and it is here that the most gallant resistance of the war has been made by the French armies. Bolant has been added to the fighting zone around Bagatelle, which the French have been stoutly holding under violent assaults till the ground became untenable owing to the masses of unburied dead that accumulate, and then the soldiers of the republic retire a few yards or advance, as the case may be, and dig themselves into the earth again. At Bolant and Bagatelle the rival trenches have become so close that the soldiers throw hand grenades at each other. Tuesday artillery fire was also very heavy. The Germans delivered a violent attack on the fortifications of Marie Theresa, in their process of feeling out the French lines and strength. They were beaten back at this point with considerable losses.

A Boulogne correspondent writes: "From a very reliable source I am in a position to state that the allies are now absolute masters of the dunes. Little by little the German offensive movements changed, and after a short defensive they gave way before the allied troops.

"With regard to the district about Ostend, the Germans have become greatly alarmed at their position. Large reinforcements arrive daily at Ostend from Bruges.

"The health of the German troops is becoming extremely grave. At Mons over 50 per cent. of the garrison are in the hospital suffering from typhoid fever. At Antwerp 12,000 soldiers are in the hospitals suffering from fever."

The French outposts in Lorraine are also becoming a menace to the Germans as the progress in Alsace becomes more pronounced, and at La Lisiere, east of the Parroy forest, and to the north of it, an attack was launched and repelled by the French advance guards.

French cavalry are again becoming effective. The Germans began an action northwest of Manonville, and when beaten they were pursued by French hussars.

The enemy made an attempt to drive the French from La Fontenelle, in the Vosges, and was checked.

Three series of German mines were blown up by French engineers at La Boiselle, and the holes thus made were entered by French infantry, who used the bayonet with great effect in repelling a German counter-attack on the newly-gained position.

RUSSIANS REPULSE REPEATED ATTACKS OF GERMAN FORCES

One of the Fiercest Assaults in the Carpathian Campaign Results in Signal Triumph For the Slav Armies, According to Advices Received in Petrograd—Conflict in Poland Wanes.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 11.—Details of a dramatic and desperately contested fight in the Carpathian Mountains, in which the bayonet charges are described as most ferocious, and without precedent in history, reached Petrograd yesterday.

According to these reports, repeated attacks on the part of the German troops were finally repulsed by the Russians, and the German dead lay in great numbers in front of the Russian positions. The losses are described as enormous, and unquestionably the fighting was waged with the utmost ferocity by Germans and Russians alike.

The scene of the fighting was at Baligrad, which is 30 miles south of Sanok, in Galicia. German troops were present in very considerable numbers. It is claimed semi-officially by the Russian staff that the Hungarian forces in the Carpathians have been augmented by 300,000 Germans, and that German officers are now definitely directing the Carpathian movement.

The German plan, insofar as it can be observed here, now seems to be to abandon gradually their aggressive on the Bzura and in the Vistula region, and to transfer their troops to points where there is greater opportunity of piercing the Russian defensive. The fighting in the Carpathians would appear to be a part of this procedure.

Concentrating their forces in the night of Feb. 7, the Germans early the following morning began what doubtless rapidly developed into one of the fiercest attacks in the history of the Carpathian campaign. With their first line almost totally annihilated, the Germans pushed forward their second line, under the support of heavy artillery, and were successful in gaining a strategic elevation. But from this position they were almost immediately driven back a Russian bayonet charge. Attack and counter-attack followed each other in rapid succession, and towards evening the Germans, in great numbers, appeared to be in possession of the heights.

Then a general counter-attack by the Russians resulted in two hours of hard hand-to-hand fighting, which left the snowclad hillsides strewn with dead. After a most stubborn resistance the German regiments finally were definitely driven out. A Russian officer claims personally to have counted upward of 1,000 German dead before the Russian positions on this hill. He described this engagement as typical of the battles which are occurring daily in the Carpathians.

ROUMANIA FIRM

Her Entry Into War Only Matter of Time

LONDON, Feb. 11. — The Daily News has received a telegram from Takeu Jonecu, one of the best known Roumanian statesmen, a former premier and leader of the Conservative Democrats, dated Bucharest, Wednesday. It says:

"I have expressed in the English and French press my strong belief in regard to Roumania's future action on the side of the triple entente. Nothing has occurred to change my former declaration. Indeed, my belief is firmer than ever. The present calm is public opinion springs from a deep belief that action is certain. Naturally, I cannot fix dates, but I may say that the presence of Austro-German troops near her boundaries has not weakened Roumania's determination. Statements to the Austro-German press about a change in favor of Austria and Germany are devoid of foundation."

COUNT'S SUIT IS REJECTED

Asked for Annulment of Marriage to Anna Gould

Paris, Feb. 10.—Following the delivery of arguments in the third trial, the Rota Tribunal of the Roman Catholic Church has rejected Count Boni De Castellane's suit for the annulment of his marriage to Anna Gould, now Duchess De Tallyrand, according to a private despatch from Rome today. This case has been in the Vatican for several years.

Pending Since 1910.

Count De Castellane's appeal to the Vatican courts for the annulment of his marriage to Anna Gould has been pending since 1910. Under the ecclesiastical judicial system before a religious marriage is annulled the case must be heard three times by the Rota Tribunal, each time by three different judges, and two decisions must favor a contestant before the judgment is final. In the Castellane case the present Duchess of Tallyrand has won two of these decisions.

If the Count had been successful in obtaining annulment of the religious marriage he would have been enabled to marry again. Under the French law he would have obtained possession of their three children, who were given into the custody of their mother when she secured a divorce in the Paris courts on Nov. 14, 1906.

De Castellane based his petition largely upon affidavits made by Prince Del Grado and Jean De Castellane, the Counts brother, who declared the then Miss Gould invalided the religious marriage by declaring to them a quarter of an hour before the ceremony was performed that she intended to divorce her husband if ever he were unfaithful to her.

Who She Was.

Anna Gould, daughter of the late Jay Gould, was married to Count De Castellane in New York City on March 4, 1895. After her divorce from him she married Prince Helie De Safan, on July 7, 1908, and became the Duchess of Tallyrand when her husband succeeded to the title upon the death of his father in Paris, Feb. 21, 1910.

LOCAL PLUMBER IN DUTCH AT LINDSAY

(Lindsay Post.)

At this morning's session of the Police Court George Brenton, a Peterborough plumber, was summoned to answer a charge of violating a local by-law which does not permit an outside plumber doing work in Lindsay. The charge is preferred against him by Sanitary Inspector R. Douglas.

One clause in the by-law reads "that any plumber who shall not have a place of business in town, or who does not have a residence therein, cannot undertake such work."

Mr. Brenton was engaged on a building being erected by Mr. James Bogue, also of Peterborough

A conference was held by Police Magistrate Jackson, Town Solicitor Fulton, Sanitary Inspector Douglas and the contractor, in the chief's office. The defendant in the case explained that he was installing the hot water fittings and had not touched the plumbing, but it was pointed out that this work was leading up to the general plumbing. The case will be further considered at 4 o'clock today.

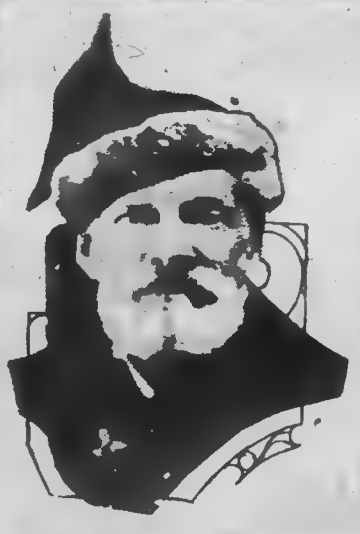
Whitby, Feb. 11.—Magistrate Harper yesterday dealt with the case of William Stone, who has been in jail here since December 16 last, charged with assaulting and choking his daughter, Lillian Stone. Stone was allowed to go on suspended sentence, but was bound over to keep the peace in the sum of $300. He is the father of the young G. T. R. night operator who was mysteriously shot to death on December 11 while on duty.



COUNT LADISLAUS STADNICKI

Who organized the Polish Legion which is fighting on the German side. There are tens of thousands of Poles in the armies of Russia, Germany and Austria and the slaughter of the sons of this ancient kingdom by men of their own blood is one of the greatest tragedies of the war.

MARITZ EXECUTED

Rebel Is Said To Have Fallen Victim of The Germans.

PRETORIA, Feb. 11.—According to a story published here, Lt.-Col. Maritz, who fomented the South African revolt some weeks ago, when recently negotiating with the Union of South African officials for the surrender of his forces, asked that his life be spared. He was informed, however, that no conditions could be granted, and that the Government would be as free to execute him as it would be free to put to death the rebel Wessels.

Maritz left the camp on the understanding that besides surrendering himself he would try to bring in the German artillery. Then followed a German attack on Kakamas, and it is suggested in the newspaper accounts that Maritz led the Germans to Kakamas with the intention of handing them over to the Government forces.

When this treachery was discovered the Germans are reported to have promptly attacked Kakamas, but were driven off with severe losses. Maritz then was arrested, and, it is said, he was probably executed without further ceremony.

Budapest Municipality Buys Hogs.

VENICE, Feb. 11.—It is stated that as a result of the high prices of food in Budapest, and in order to protect the public the municipal authorities of the Hungarian capital have purchased several thousand hogs which will be fattened and killed and the meat sold to the people at the cost price.

German Consul Visits Horn.

MACHIAS, Me., Feb. 11.—Werner Horn, confined in the county jail for damage to property at Vanceboro as a result of his attempt to destroy the Canadian end of the railway bridge over the St. Croix river, was visited yesterday by Oswald Kanhardt German consul at Boston and Hannibal E. Hamlin of Ellsworth, former Attorney-General of Maine. They conferred with the prisoner for two hours.

U. S. Guards For Britons.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The British Government has arranged with the Government of the United States to appoint quartermasters and paymasters in the American army to act as neutral wardens to British prisoners of war in Germany. The initiation of this plan, however, has been delayed as Germany still has the matter under consideration.

Announcement to this effect was made in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon by H. J. Tennant, Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office.

May Marry By Proxy.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Minister of Justice Briand, with the approval of M. Millerand, the Minister of War, has given his approval to the proposed bill which would allow soldiers who are unable to leave the front to contract marriage by proxy.

MARRIAGE CASE TO BE RE-ARGUED

Husband Secured Ecclesiastical Nallification of the Union

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The Privy Council, it is learned, have taken the unusual course of directing that the Despatie versus Tremblay case, which comprises what is known as the Quebec marriage case, shall be re-argued.

The original arguments were heard last May. The facts are undisputed. The decision will be of considerable interest, especially to Roman Catholics in the British Empire. The parties were married in 1904 and as neither of them then knew that they were cousins in a fourth degree, no ecclesiastical dispensation was applied for as the church requires in such cases.

Null and Void.

Six years later the husband, on discovering the relationship, applied to the bishop for a decree of nullity, which was granted.

The case has now been carried to the Privy Council on behalf of the wife, who appeals against the decision of the court of review confirming decision of Judge Bruneau, granting the husband a declaration that the marriage was null and void.

A Ticklish Case.

Several days were occupied in original arguments, precedents quoted reaching back even to the time of Henry the Eighth; their lordships also apparently finding much difficulty in determining the attitude of thee toward marriage as a civil, apart from ecclesiastical, contract. The case is the first of its kind in Canadian jurisprudence.

Popular Decision.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—It has been learned here that the Privy Council has decided that the Tremblay-Despatie marriage case must be re-argued before it.

This decision postpones a final judgment on the relation of the ecclesiastical and civil marriage laws of Quebec and will proably be most welcome to both Protestants and Roman Catholics, who were much aroused on this question some years ago, by the Despatie and Hebert cases. A decision by the Privy Council at this time would have revived the old animosities which have disappeared since the war began.

The contracting parties to the suit were fourth cousins and Roman Catholics. They were married in Sorel in 1904. The husband secured an ecclesiastical nullification, which was given civil effect by Judge Bruneau. A Montreal review court judgment upheld Judge Bruneau.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—The lawyers interested in the Tremblay-Despatie case, while declining to comment to any extent on the decision of the Privy Council that the whole matter will again have to be re-argued before them in London, say it is unlikely that anything will be done in the case before the war is over.

It may be mentioned that, in connection with this case, the Orange Lodges of Montreal and the Province of Ontario contributed freely toward the fund for carrying on the wife's appeal.

BRODEUR SAID TO BE MENTALLY DEFICIENT

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 11.—Albert Brodeur, alias Blanchard, who is charged with the murder of Mrs. Matilda Case, was ordered committed to the State Hospital at Bridgewater for observation as to his sanity, after Dr. John A. Houston, superintendent of the Northampton State Hospital, and Dr. Charles P. Hooker, jail physician, had informed the court that he was mentally deficient and not in a proper condition to be placed on trial for the crime with which he is charged.

Brodeur is the man who was arrested in Peterborough, Ontario, one year ago last January.

from one side of the Dominion of Canada to the other. It is up to the true British subject to keep behind the men in the trenches. The men who are particularly looked upon during the present crisis for assistance are the farmers. The farmers of Canada must respond, and, in the speaker's mind, the farmers of this vicinity are responding. This was demonstrated by the fact that the acreage of fall wheat has this year been increased some 25 per cent.

Before closing his remarks Mr Garbutt again thanked the directors for their kindness and hoped they would continue their good work during the coming year, also that the new members on the board would also take up their duties with a determination to make the exhibition of this year a record one.

The directors present were: J. H. Garbutt, president; F. J. A. Hall, secretary; R. Denne, S. Milburn, F. Wise, T. Brown, F. Kitney, J. Gillespie, R. M. Glover, O. Hall, W. J. Cox, T. H. Hooper, T. Cruickshanks, and W. Roberts. A telegram was read from G. A. Gillespie, M. L. A., expressing his regret on being absent and extending his best wishes to the president.

It appears as though the directors are going out to boost the membership of the association. R. Denne was the principal agitator for renewed energy along that line, and before the meeting adjourned it was decided to have each director take a book of tickets and ask every farmer in the vicinity to join. The two directors selling the most tickets will be the delegates to the annual convention of the Ontario Agricultural Associations. While the members are endeavoring to bring in new members, they will urge that further interest be taken in the field crop competitions.

The Ontario Government has notified all the associations throughout the province that the grant for the coming year will be but fifty per cent of the grant made last year. It was the unanimous opinion of the local directors that a letter be forwarded to Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M. L. A., asking him to use as much influence as possible to have the grants remain the same. R. Denne expressed himself as being very dissatisfied with any step the government should take to cut down the grants, for it would necessarily cause the prize list to be cut down, and the prize list should be enlarged if the farmers are to be encouraged to increase their production.

President Garbutt reported that he was present at the convention of the Eastern Ontario Fairs held recently in Belleville. All associations affiliated with the convention had their dates so fixed that they would not conflict, and affiliated associations can secure the services of a judge from the Ontario Department of Agriculture for six dollars per day instead of eight dollars. On motion of Messrs. Glover and Denne, it was decided to become affiliated with the Eastern Ontario Fairs. The annual fee is one dollar.

William Collins and W. J. Cox were the delegates to the annual convention of Agricultural Associations of Ontario held in Toronto recently, and owing to the much-regretted absence of Mr. Collins, who is confined to the hospital through illness, Mr Cox reported. A resolution was carried at the convention asking that the various associations urge their local provincial member to assist as far as possible in having the Provincial Government give $75,000 in grants to the fairs of the province this year.

Another very good suggestion Mr. Cox secured at the convention was to have more prizes for boys under 18 years of age who are showing exhibits. The local directors thought it particularly helpful as far as horses were concerned. The horses to be had today are not as a general rule properly halter broken, and it was thought that if the boys were given more prizes, colts would be broken more to the halter.

A scheme to increase the membership of the associations, which was brought out at the Toronto convention, was also brought to the attention of the local board. It was to have the directors choose sides, and the side securing the greater number of new members in the year would be the guests of the other side at an annual banquet. In all probability some action along that line will be taken next year.

The following committees of management were selected (the first-named on each committee to be chairman:

HUMANITY.

(By Maj.-Gen. Sam Hughes.)

Nobody would to-day expect Gen. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, to write poetry, says The Toronto Star Weekly. He seems the most unlikely of men for that. Yet it appears that there was a time when he did it. Back in 1886 he wrote the following lines for The Lindsay Warder, of which he was editor. The title of it was "Humanity," and we feel that we owe it to Canadian literature to revive the lines.

The infant heart is pure. 'Tis only in
Maturer years, when human mind, oppressed
By tyrant's lordling will, becomes debased
And weak; when generous impulse, noble zeal,
Free thought, and honest effort, are repressed,
Enfettered by the galling bonds of want,
Combined with wretchedness and woe; when old
Dame Nature's sweetest flowers, Truth, Modesty,
And Innocence, lie faded, withered, dead—
'Tis only then fell sin and sordid self
Find place within the hallowed precincts of
That sanctified abode, the human heart.

Should not we then, with resolution firm
Our highest powers combine, that tender yet
Capacious plant, the unsullied mind of youth,
To cultivate, to moisten with fresh dews,
The gentle dews of kind encouragement
And Love; choice grafts to set therein, and these Developed by the fertilising powers
Of Sense, to guard till shining bud, then rich
Uninjured blossom, then the choicest fruit,
Do in succession deck the noble stem?

The mind thus cultured, constantly becomes
One purer, nobler, stronger; soon in turn,
Upon associate minds, a power for good
To exert, and so a noble part perform.

STRUCK WITHOUT WARNING.

Sinking of Ganteaume Subject of the French Official Report.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The French Government made public yesterday the result of the inquiry ordered by the Minister of Marine into the torpedoing of the French merchantman, Amiral Ganteaume, on Oct. 26, 1914, and gave to representatives in Paris of the neutral powers copies of the memorandum. The vessel, when struck by a torpedo fired by a German submarine, had on board 2,600 refugees from Belgian and French coast towns.

The report says the attack was committed by a German submarine without daring to show its colors and without warning or stopping. It asserts that the attack was made on an undefended merchantman carrying women and children, and old men, who were refugees. The attack, it is contended, was without military or naval utility or strategy, and was only "the murder of inoffensive individuals."

A little learning is a useful thing if the learner has sense enough to use it.

A humorous skit "A Swell Affair" brings in two very funny characters, Michael and Ikey, an Irishman and a Jew, who are attending a ball given in a swell city residence, several complications follow. The scene closes with a burlesque boxing bout.

Interspersed throughout the two hours and a half of program there will be choruses by the team, solos by local singers and instrumentals.

This program will be given entirely by the boys and we trust that the people will rally nobly to show appreciation of their hard work. For particulars see the large bills. Friday, Feb. 26th.

The meeting of the Red Cross Association was held in the council chamber on Tuesday afternoon. The work which has been under way is now finished and a large box has been shipped to Toronto.

The Omemee hockey team is having good success this year. They met the Millbrook seniors in the local arena and defeated them 5-3. The game was fairly fast considering the poor lighting. Both teams worked hard. Millbrook showed a lack of practice and they could not get past Mills who played a great game in the nets. Fred Cunningham was clever and his rushes were of the gilt edge variety. Merney was a tower of strength on the local defence and secured two goals by long rushes. Nattrass on the defence for Millbrook and Orr on right wing were really good, the former being a heady defence player and also one of considerable experience. A return game will be played in Peterborough some time soon. The teams:—

Omemee—Mills, Cunningham, Cunningham, Merney, Watson, C. Mills, Down.

Millbrook — Richards, Nattrass, Hardley, Southeran, Bingham, Orr, Edwards.

Don. A. Merner of the Bank of Toronto left on Tuesday for his home in Stratford in order to have an operation on his foot, which was injured recently.

Omemee Juniors defeated Reaboro at Reaboro by 4-1. The game was clean and fairly fast. Horsley scored Reaboro's only goal by a pretty shot which was one too many for C. Mills. Down, Watson and Clement did the scoring for Omemee. The teams:—

Omemee—C. Mills, Cunningham, Down, Woodruff, Clement, Watson.

Reaboro — Vanstone, Hawkins, Horsley, Stephenson, Reid, Jones.

Miss R. Cunningham of Peterborough is the guest of her cousin Miss Ola Earle.

The Women's Missionary Society was entertained at the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday afternoon. The main attraction of the meeting was the very excellent address by Mrs. Dr. Earle, upon "Child Training in the Kindergarten."

Omemee defeated the Woodcutters 27-0 on Tuesday night.

The anual Sunday School Convention under the auspices of the Emily Township Association was held in the Omemee Methodist Church on Thursday last and was voted a great success by the large numbers who attended. The special features in the afternoon were the fine addresses by Mr. Harrison of Emily on "The Home Department," Rev. Mr. McInnis on "Decision Day in the Sunday School," and Mr. P. J. Orwig of Toronto on "Life."

The evening session was largely attended and splendid addresses were given by Mrs. Lewis of Peterborough on "Primary Class Work," Rev. J. W. Down, on "The Sunday School Realizing its Ideal," Rev. E. R. James, on "Why the S. S. Teacher Should be a Man of Power," and Mrs. Orwig on "The Teen Age." The officers for the ensuing year are Mr. F. Sandy, president; Dr. Thompson, secretary; and Mr. Wm. Envry, treasurer.

Don't forget the conundrum supper under the auspices of the A. Y. P. A. to be held in the Anglican Church Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th. This promises to be a very interesting event.

Mrs. J. MacLauchlin of Toronto was the guest of Mrs. J. W. Down for several days last week. She returned to her home on Saturday.

Why Pat's. Changed Rifles.

Why the Princess Patricia Regiment discarded the Ross rifle before going to the front is explained in a letter from one of the non-commissioned officers which has been received at Ottawa. It bears out the previous explanation that the reason underlying the change is that the regiment is composed almost exclusively of former British soldiers accustomed to the Lee-Enfield. The complaints were frequent, and just before leaving for France the Ross rifle was replaced. The brigade with which the Princess Pats are merged is considered one of the finest at the front.

Compensation.

If it is true, as our business philosophers tell us, that "those who never do more than they get paid for never get paid for more than they do," then it is quite clear that if you want to get paid for more than you do you must do more than you get paid for. Even a philosopher ought to see how impossible that is, but, of course, the true philosopher cannot be expected to hesitate over a mere impossibility.—Life.

THE BOWSER FAMILY

Why They Won't Go to the San Francisco Exposition

By M. QUAD

Mrs. Bowser was in the front hall looking around to see if there was a pin or a shirt button lying around loose for Mr. Bowser to stumble over and read her a lesson on extravagance, when he came running up the steps and almost took the door off its hinges as he entered.

"What on earth"—she started to say, when he seized her in his arms and danced about and cried:

"We'll go! We'll go and put in at least three months!"

The cat came out of the sitting room and joined the waltz, and it was two minutes before Mrs. Bowser got a chance to ask what it all meant.

"It means San Francisco exposition!" he replied as he chucked her under the chin. "Hey, little woman, but how does that strike you?"

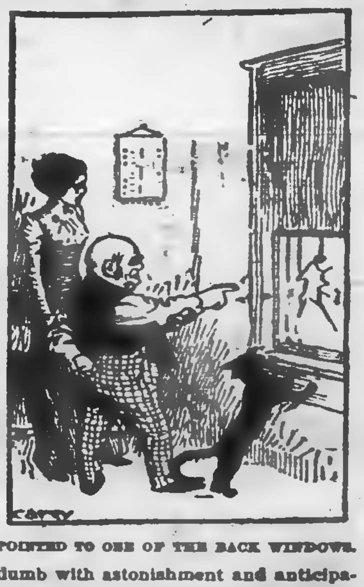
"You don't mean that we are to go?"

"Of course I do. I've made a ten strike in stocks, and away we go to Frisco! I couldn't wait to get home to tell you. Does the good news astonish you?"

"It—it doesn't seem possible!" she gasped.

"I thought it would take your breath away. Come on; let's have dinner. Eh, tootsy wootsy? Going to see the west and the exposition, are you?"

Mr. Bowser was like a boy with a new sled, and Mrs. Bowser was almost dumb with astonishment and anticipation. Twice during the meal he got up to go around to her and pat her on the head and ask her how many dresses she wanted, and as he put his arm around her going upstairs the cat followed on behind and winked at her own whiskers and said it was something she never saw in that house in all her life before.



POINTED TO ONE OF THE BACK WINDOWS.

"Now, then, sweety," said Mr. Bowser as he sat down to his cigar, "in the morning you take $500 and get an outfit, and if that is not enough take $1,000. I'll go and engage passage, buy two new trunks and what clothes I need, and within a few months from today we land in San Francisco with our hats on our ears."

"But I never thought we could go," she said.

"Probably not, as I didn't know how things would turn out, and I didn't want to raise false hopes. You may have observed, Mrs. Bowser, that I never fly off the handle. I just coolly and calmly wait till a thing is assured before I holler over it. Yes; we are off to the great exposition, and we'll see the west at last."

In her happiness Mrs. Bowser shed tears.

"Come, now, tootsy, none of that," he said as he rose up and kissed her. "You deserve all I can do for you. You have been one of the best little wives any man ever had, and I want you to know how much I appreciate it. I've been brusque and short with you sometimes, but you have never doubted my love, have you?"

"Never. I wish every woman had as good a husband."

"And I wish every man had as good a wife. There have been times when you ought to have taken the poker and whacked me over the head, but you never lose your temper. Mrs. Bowser, do you know that sometimes I believe you are an angel from heaven?"

"But you mustn't believe it," she replied, beginning to be a bit alarmed over his goody goodness.

"But I do. I am an old kicker and faultfinder and deserve to be booted, and you are an angel of earth and deserve forty gold medals for living with me."

"And so we can afford to go to San Francisco, can we?" she asked, hoping to turn the conversation.

"You bet. Frisco for three months, and we'll live on the fat of the land. Darling, do you know I was thinking of a little incident in our lives as I came up on the car? It was about our playing euchre one evening. Do you remember that you beat me seven straight games and how mad I got? I called you a cheat and a swindler, and I kicked over chairs and said I'd get a divorce, and you—you"—

"Oh, I've forgotten!" she laughed.

"Do you think we'll be ready to start for Frisco in time?"

"Of course. But I want to talk about that game of euchre. I even tried to make you believe that an ace would take the joker. Ha, ha, ha! As I look back and remember how mean I was I wonder that you didn't pick up a chair and fell me to the floor. It would have served me just right. Is it any wonder that when I think of these things I call you an angel?"

"You are a dear, good man, and let's talk about the wardrobe I am to get. If I have to have four or five dresses made"—

"And about our old love letters," he interrupted as he began to walk about. "There isn't the least doubt that I wrote a heap of silly nonsense, but on two or three occasions when you have said I did I got mad and raised a row. Yes, sir, I remember of one letter in which I said I had kissed the tracks you left in a cranberry swamp, and yet when you told me of it I bowled about divorce. My dear angel, can you ever pardon me?"

"Of course. Won't you tell me how long it takes to go to Frisco?"

"About five days, I think. And there's another thing I want to refer to. One day I came home and found you on the lounge with a sick headache. You tried to get up and welcome me, but you could not. You were dreadfully sick, but did I pity you? Did I sympathise with you? Did I order you tea and toast and sit beside you as a decent husband should? No! I brutally told you that any lady who would walk around the block bareheaded ought to have seventeen sick headaches, and I left you to the mercy of the cook and bounced off to the club. Mrs. Bowser, can you—will you—ha! What's that?"

Mr. Bowser stood stiffly erect in the middle of the room and pointed to one of the back windows. The cat stood beside him and looked in the same direction.

"Yes, the glass is cracked," said Mrs. Bowser. "A boy threw a stone from the alley."

"Cracked! Ruined! Destroyed!" hoarsely whispered Mr. Bowser, with his finger still pointing. "And this is the way you run my house! This is the way my wife looks after my interests!"

"But a boy threw a stone," she protested.

"A boy! A stone! And you were right here?"

"Yes. But how could I help it?"

"How do I help it? Are stones thrown when I am here? Fifty dollars' worth of glass ruined through your want of care! It's no use—no use!"

"That pane only cost 75 cents, and I say that I can't stand in the alley and prevent boys from throwing."

"Mrs. Bowser, we need not discuss the matter further," he said as he turned away. "I came here with a heart full of love and kindness to find my home a scene of ruin and desolation. This ends our going west."

"But you won't give up the trip because a boy cracked a pane of glass, will you?"

"I will. The trip is off! There will be no Frisco for us. It is not the broken glass I look at, but the principle of the thing. As a wife and housekeeper you are a flat failure. For anything you might do to prevent, this house could be torn down and carted off by hoodlums!"

"But how foolish of"—

"That will do, woman—that will do! I have given you trial after trial, and it has always resulted the same way—ruin and desolation. I have no doubt the back fence is broken down, the woodshed carried off and most of the foundations of the house removed. Our money will be needed right here for repairs. I am now going for a little stroll, and should any one call for me you can say I am not at home until noon tomorrow."

"But how can you blame me?"

"Woman, the subject is closed. Good evening to you—good evening!"

Bestowal of a Name.

"What are you going to name the baby?" asked the interested neighbor.

"I hadn't thought of that," replied Mr. Groucher. "What I have been worrying about is what he is going to call me. Parents take a whole lot of trouble about a christening, but the father never manages to protect himself against being called 'pop' or 'the old man' when the infant grows older."—Washington Star.

His Experiment.

An Irishman went into a hardware store to buy a looking glass. The shopman brought him some to choose from. Pat left one on the counter and, walking back a few feet, closed his eyes.

"What are you closing your eyes for?" asked the shopkeeper.

"Bedad," said Pat, "I want to see how I look when I'm sleeping."—Chicago News.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

THREE GAMES IN SENIOR CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE

Tonight's Contests Bring George Street and St. Luke's Together

For the past six weeks this league has been running a regular schedule of games and much excitement has been shown over the results. Now as the league comes to a close tonight the teams will no doubt expect a large attendance.

Three good games are scheduled, but probably the most excitment lies in the St. Luke's vs. George St. game.

These two teams lead the league neither having been beaten yet, and as they go on the ice tonight they will be at full strength and ready to put forth their best efforts to win.

Persons interested in hockey should not miss these games, as all teams promise a fast and clean brand of hockey.

The league standing is as follows:

	W.	L.	To Play
St. Luke's	4	0	1
George Street	4	0	1
St. John's	2	2	1
Murray Street	2	2	1
St. Andrews	1	3	1
St. Paul's	0	4	1

Junior Church League

Last night in the Junior Church League, George Street downed St. John's in a shut-out, 7-0. The play was quite rough, but fast. All the George Street team worked hard, but Helson and Graham were especially good, the latter being the chief goal-getter of the team. For the losers Soward and Heard were very prominent. At half-time the score was 3-0. Mr. Frank Jobbitt handled the game well. The teams:

St. John's — Goal, Pidgeon; defence, Soward and Ecoblichon; rover, Heard; centre, Parks; wings, Flowers and Common.

George Street — Goal, W. Rutherford; defence, Hamilton and Simpson; rover, Helson; centre, Graham; wings, F. Rutherford and Peever.

Knox and Charlotte Street meet tonight at seven o'clock. This is the last game in the first round of the schedule.

No Longer Goes Fast.

"They say that she has been going a rapid pace lately."

"Indeed!"

"Yes."

"I don't think she is doing so now."

"Isn't she?"

"Her career has received a check."

"Lost her money?"

"No; bought a hobble skirt."

The Post of Danger.

The Sieur de Joinville in his memoirs of St. Louis tells us that a certain man, sore beset by the pressure of temptation, sought counsel from the bishop of Paris, "whose Christian name was William." And this wise William of Paris said to him:

"The castle of Montl'hery stands in the safe heart of France, and no invading hosts assail it. But the castle of La Rochelle in Poitou stands on the line of battle. Day and night it must be guarded from assault, and it has suffered grievously. Which, gentleman, think you, the king holds high in favor, the governor of Montl'hery or the governor of La Rochelle? The post of danger is the post of glory, and he who is sorely wounded in the combat is honored by God and man."—Agnes Repplier in Atlantic Monthly.

The Fourth Officer.

"I've been on a bridge of a ship since I was fourteen. I don't know how to breathe inside a house," he said. One has to lead some kind of life, and as I sat there thinking it occurred to me that, even if it was poorly paid and at times lonely, there was something very sane and useful and good about the life of the fourth officer. In a little while he would look at his watch and exclaim a trifle diffidently, but with an unmistakable resumption of authority: "It's 10 o'clock. You must go now." Then he would almost instantly fall asleep, sleep for four hours, spend four more alone with the trackless waters and the southern stars, bathe, breakfast and begin another day with a fit body, clear brain, steady nerves and untroubled eyes.—Flandrau's Essays.

MIDGETS WERE GOOD SCORERS

Had Nine Goal Lead Over Local Juniors

The Peterborough juniors were swamped at Lindsay last night, when the Midgets took the second of the home-and-home games by 12 to 3. They win the round by 17 to 6, and will now meet Kingston.

The speedy and aggressive work that featured the Midgets' play here last Monday night was very much in evidence, and they won pretty much as they liked.

A big crowd witnessed the game. The teams:

Peterborough — Goal, Legros; R. defence, Morrow; L. defence, Richardson; rover, Knapman; centre, Jackson; R. wing, Smith; L. wing, Rose.

Lindsay — Goal, O'Loughlin; R. defence, Haugh; L. defence, Flavelle; rover, C. Carew; centre, McElroy; R. wing, Sandercock; L. wing, A. Carew.

"I can't th-think what I was crying about," sobbed Jimmie.

BRAMPTON EXCELSIORS TO MEET ORILLIANS

Picton Was Defeated in Second Game by 6 to 4

Brampton, Feb. 11.—The Brampton Excelsiors qualified themselves to meet Orillia in the second round intermediate semi-finals by defeating Picton here last night. The locals won by a three-goal margin at Picton, and were the favorites, but the score of 6 to 4 in tonight's encounter demonstrated the fact that the Easterners were still hopeful, and went their limit in an endeavor to turn the Red and White on their own ice. The first period was not fast, each seven waiting for the other to start something. Brampton were first to tally, but Picton made it 1 to 1 before the period closed. In the second session both teams showed real life, and a fine brand of hockey was dished up. Brampton scored three straights after some neat combination, Picton got one toward the finish, and it read 4 to 2 for Brampton.

Brookbank was forced to quit in the last period, and it was six men a side. Picton came strong in the final round, and looked dangerous. Before the period had half expired they had tied it up. Only excellent checking by the Brampton defence held them. The homesters showed better staying power and came along with two more, which made it 6 to 4, or 10 to 5 on the round. Brampton go to Orillia next Monday, and the return game will be here on Wednesday, the 17th.

The line-up:—

Brampton — McClure, Ingoldsby, Beecham, Roberts, Brookbank, Anderson, Blain.

Picton — Scott, Hubbs, Budborough, Hefferman, Burns, Hudgen and P. Burns.

A Disappointed Pensioner.

Mrs. Higginson's letters to her husband's family in Brattleboro, says Mary Thacher Higginson in her biography of Thomas Wentworth Higginson, always contained characteristic comments on her husband's doings.

"Wentworth has been away two days this week," she wrote, "and is going to Washington tonight to fight for women. I wish they had been fixed before we were born. * * * Lately he has been trying to find a father and grandfather for some stray girl—I don't know who. He hasn't found them yet, but I suppose he will persevere. I should think that one would be enough but he is naturally thorough, you know."

The colonel explained in a postcript:

"The case of this girl is that she wants a pension because her father was a soldier and died in a military prison. I have come upon only two obstacles to her wish:

"First, that she is not the man's daughter.

"Second, that he is still alive."

Shaking Hands.

Cheerful Idiot—I was quite excited just now seeing two men shake hands. Johnson—What can there possibly be exciting about the simple ceremony of handshaking? Cheerful Idiot—Oh, each man had his hand doubled up and was shaking it under the other fellow's nose!—London Telegraph.

Unless They Are Heiresses.

"It's hard to lose a beautiful daughter," said the wedding guest sympathetically.

"It's a blame sight harder to lose the homely ones," replied the old man who had several yet to go.—Boston Transcript.

Condensed Rations

Each British soldier on active service carries in his kit a small package containing what is known as an "emergency ration."

The "emergency ration" is wrapped in a small package. When the emergency arises the center band of the package is torn off and two small tin cans are disclosed. One can contains a quarter of a pound of concentrated beef and the other the same quantity of cocoa paste. The combination of the two foods is sufficient to maintain the strength of the average man for thirty-six hours if consumed in small quantities.

The beef and the cocoa paste may be eaten dry, but greater flavor is gained without loss of nourishment if the beef is allowed to simmer in water over a fire and the cocoa paste made into cocoa. The amount of beef in the tin will make two quarts of beef tea and the cocoa paste can be converted into the same quantity of cocoa.—New York Press.

Giant Locomotives.

At present the largest locomotive reported to be in use is a huge compound engine which measures 120 feet over all and weighs 850,000 pounds. It is an oil burner and carries 4,000 gallons of oil and 12,000 gallons of water. It cost $43,380 to build. These giants have reached a point where one locomotive is so long that it is hinged in the middle with a flexible joint so that it can turn a curve without upsetting.

Aeroplane Propellers.

The propellers of aeroplanes such as are used in the present European war may be made of selected ash, which is both strong and light and will not split under vibration or shock, or of built up layers of spruce with mahogany centers. The framework of the machines, too, is generally made of wood, spruce being much used on account of its straight grain and freedom from hidden defects.

Curious Family Complication.

Details of a curious family complication come from St. Gall, Switzerland. A naturalized Swiss citizen, German by birth, is married to a Hungarian. His brother-in-law is fighting against the Servians and the husband of his sister-in-law is fighting against the Austrians. Of the man's two brothers one is in a Prussian regiment and the other is serving France under General Gallieni.

Tinted Specs For Artificial Light.

For viewing objects illuminated by artificial light when it is desired to see such objects exactly as they would appear in daylight, H. E. Ives, the English physicist, suggests colored glass spectacles. The glass would be covered with a collodion or gelatin surface, stained with aniline dyes carefully selected to filter out the light rays peculiar to artificial light. For each kind of the latter a special formula would have to be followed in preparing the spectacles. These spectacles would be useful in many industries, as, for example, the making of artificial teeth, where color has to be most accurately matched. They might also be lent to visitors at picture galleries by night or on dark days, when artificial illumination is employed, in order to insure the most favorable view of the pictures.—New York World.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

A special meeting of the W.C.T.U. will be held at the home of Mrs. J. S. Knapman, 604 George St., tomorrow afternoon at 3.30. There will be special prayer service in honor of Miss Francis Willard. Every one cordially invited.

FEELS OUT OF PLACE.

Mr. Thomas Dale, an employe of the wood working department of the Canadian General Electric works, who has been confined to his bed for nearly two weeks through illness, is improving nicely, and hopes soon to be on his feet again. Mr. Dale has been for a number of years actively engaged as wood worker, and naturally feels very much out of place in the day time, as he listens to the whistle calling his fellow workmen to their several branches of the work.

WRISTLETS AND SOCKS PRESENTED TO SOLDIERS

There will always be strong feelings of regard cherished by the Y. M. C. A. boys who have enlisted, for the kind-hearted ladies of the Kitchener League who, last evening at a social time in the association parlors, presented them all with knitted garments of socks and wristlets. Speeches were made by Mayor Buller, Jos. Wearing and Major Johnston. Solos were rendered by Miss Clancy, Sergt. Major Wilford and Mr. F. Skitch, and readings by Mr. Tom Anderson and Pte. D. Eldred.

Refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening spent. It was probably the last entertainment of its kind the boys will be given before their departure.

MANY WERE CALLED BUT FEW ATTENDED

What happened to the manufacturers and business who were notified of a meeting that was called for yesterday afternoon? So many responded that they could have been numbered on the fingers of one hand and still had some fingers to spare. In view of the agitation for better train service and remembering that the meeting was primarily called to select a deputation to proceed to Toronto in regard to the same, it does not look as if there was a great rush to have such service altered. When deputations appear so popular it seems hard to understand why more members failed to be on hand.

SPRING ASSIZES

The jury sitting of the Spring Assizes which commences on Tuesday, Feb. 23, will be presided over by Sir William Mulock, Chief Justice of the Exchequer Division. The one criminal case of Edgar Grose, charged with the murder of William O'Brien is the cause of considerable interest as are several civil cases likewise to be settled at the jury sitting. Three of the civil cases to come up are Clute vs. G. T. R., Bank of Ottawa vs. F. Brownscombe; W. G. Ferguson, G. L. Hay and Herbert Bell and Presick vs. Cordova Mine Co.

STORE AT WARSAW IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Neighbors Worked in Vain to Stay the Progress of the Flames

Warsaw, Feb. 11.—Fire, caused, it it supposed from an overheated stove, totally destroyed the store of Thomas Clements of Warsaw yesterday afternoon about three o'clock. The stove was situated in the unoccupied second storey and the flames had made great headway before any preventative steps were taken. Adequate fire fighting apparatus not being on hand, neighbors lent their assistance and did all in their power to check the fast spreading blaze. When it was found that their work was futile they centred their efforts on saving some of the stock. Owing to the rapidity with which the wooden building burned only a small quantity of boots were saved. Mr. Clements had stored 200 gallons of kerosene but a few days ago and all was lost.

Besides the building and stock owned by Mr. Clements, a quantity of goods owned by Mrs. George Bullock of Lakefield, was also destroyed. Mrs. Bullock intended opening a millinery and dressmaking establishment in the second storey of Clement's store and what goods she had removed to her new quarters were destroyed.

The exact loss cannot be estimated. Mr. Clements' building and stock was partially covered by insurance.

FOREMAN IS STRANGLED TO DEATH

Was Attempting to Put Belt on Revolving Pulley

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 11. — Richard Smith, a young married man, aged about 27 years, was the victim of a terrible death by strangulation in machinery at Graham's evaporator on Pinnacle street.

The deceased was night foreman in the evaporator this week. He had been there since last fall. About 12.30 yesterday morning he got up on a potato-peeling table to put a belt upon a revolving wheel. It is thought that some of his clothing became caught in the shaft or pulley and caused him to be drawn around the shaft. There being only about 12 inches or so between shaft and ceiling, the unfortunate man was strangled. Marks around the neck tend to that belief.

As soon as the discovery was made the police were notified, and Sergt. Naphin went to the scene. Life having been extinct before the alarm could be given, the body was not removed from its deadly position until after the officer's arrival. Coroner Dr. Yeomans was notified and he instructed the police to have the body removed to Tickell & Sons' morgue.

The late Richard Smith was a son of the late Richard Smith, Cannifton road, who died about two months ago. He leaves to mourn his demise his mother, a young wife and child, two brothers, Wm J. and Thomas, and two sisters, Misses Nora and Rose.

HOME GUARD

The Battalion will parade at the Armouries at 8 p.m., on Thursday evening, February 11th.

Immediately after roll call the Sergeant-Major will take charge of the parade, forming it into large companies under competent instructors. Officers and non-commissioned officers will fall into their respective positions under the charge of the regimental instructor.

By order,

MAYOR WILL TRY TO ARRANGE MEETING FOR RADIAL RAILWAYS

Although it appeared to be doomed for a natural death when the depression set in, it would not be improbable to see the idea of having all the towns in this section of the province connected by rural radial lines in the near future. The scheme had a most ardent backer in Mayor Buller and in fact His Worship a few months ago had about completed the preliminary details for a big mass meeting, at which prominent men of Canada, including Hon. Adam Beck, would speak on the proposed plan. The general tightness of the money market did not warrant immediate action so the matter was temporarily abandoned.

Prompted by the idea of giving work to the unemployed, Mayor Buller has written the secretary of the Ontario Rural Radial Lines Association, urging that a large meeting be held in Toronto of representatives from municipalities of the province. At this meeting the possibility of having the work gone on with could be discussed and delegates appointed to wait on the Dominion Parliament now in session at Ottawa to endeavor to secure a grant to assist in the work.

In speaking of the matter today Mayor Buller expressed his hope that ere long the execution of the big scheme would be commenced.

LECTURES ON BOOK OF REVELATIONS

The lectures on the Book of Revelations, given by Mr. R. Irving in Gospel Hall are increasing in interest and attendance. One thing which the preacher spoke of last evening was the necessity of holding sound doctrine. He handled without gloves Pastor Russell and his anti-hell-fire preaching. Also this preacher is no believer in soul-sleeping after death as Pastor Russell and the Seventh Day Adventists all teach. He also believes that this word spoken to one sinner of old applies to all who die in their sins: "Hell from beneath is moved to meet Thee at Thy coming" (Isaiah xiv. 7).

MAY A. BELL MARKS COMPANY

The attraction at the Grand Opera House which will come for a stay of one week, commencing Monday, Feb. 15th, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, will be that noted and romantic attraction, May A. Bell Marks, supported by Marks Bros. No. 1 Dramatic Company, who have surrounded themselves with an exceptionally clever supporting company of people that are not engaged for their dramatic ability alone, but as well for their knowledge of the musical experience they have also.

It has always been Mr. Marks' desire to present to his friends a variety that no other attraction could afford to carry. Therefore he has now a company of both musical and dramatic artists that affords him the opportunity to introduce musical numbers that have never before been seen in this line of productions in which he has organized. He also has as special features, singers and dancers that are engaged only for that part of the entertainment who have appeared over all the principal vaudeville circuits in the country.

As May A. Bell Marks has always been connected with such attractions as the best productions, and Mr. Marks has taken great care in the selecting of his people, and secured people that have only had the like reputation. In all, Mr. Marks carries a company of twenty people and produces his plays in a very elaborate manner, as well as having them beautifully costumed.

The advance seat sale at the box office opens Friday morning at 9 a.m., and it is expected that his attraction will do the banner business of the season.

ACCOUNT FOR BOARD

Mrs. Sarah J. Middleton brought an action against P. H. Lloyd in Division Court on Monday afternoon, to recover an account for board. The case was to have been tried before a jury but such a course was unnecessary by the case being settled between the two parties whereby Lloyd agreed to pay the costs of the court and jury fees.

O. A. Langley appeared for the defendant, and W. H. Moore, K. C., for Mrs. Middleton.

NO POLITICAL INTENT.

So Says Cologne Gazette Regarding Loan To Bulgaria.

BERLIN, Feb. 11.—(Via London.)—The pending loan of $30,000,000 to Bulgaria by German and Austrian bankers, announcement of which was made on Monday, is said by The Cologne Gazette, to have been arranged under the auspices of The Berliner Disconto Gesselschaft. The money is to be advanced against treasury notes payable after the conclusion of peace.

The Cologne Gazette says that no political conditions are attached to the making of this loan, but that the event nevertheless is of political significance, since it shows that Bulgaria desires to continue her former financial relations with Germany and Austria in preference to accepting the offer of a loan made several months ago by the triple entente powers.

The Navel Orange.

The first we know of the navel orange, which is very valuable not only on account of its fine quality and taste, but also because of its being seedless, is of a single tree that was found growing on the northern shore of the Mediterranean Sea. This was about the year 1565. Grafts of this tree were taken to Spain by the Moors several hundred years ago, and from Spain the trees were carried to South America by the Spaniards.

She—Oh, yes! The dentist won't mind!

A Descendant of Attila.

Although most present day descendants of the Huns are to be found in Bulgaria, the premier family of the Hungarian nobility—the Esterhazys—claim lineal descent from Attila; and the earliest Hungarian records to some extent bear out this claim, they certainly show no trace of this ancestry in their appearance, for Attila was physically as well as morally one of the most hideous characters in history, while the Esterhazys are a conspicuously handsome family.

GERMANS STRONG IN EAST PRUSSIA

Have Immense Bodies of Troops by Reason of Equipment and Strategic Railways

RUSSIANS IN HUNGARIAN TERRITORY BERLIN ADMITS

Submarine Attack May Precipitate More Stringent Methods Against German Trade

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 12. — The Russian incursion into East Prussia appears, judging from despatches reaching London, likely to be as short lived as were the previous Russian raids into this same district. Germany's equipment and strategic railways in this territory have enabled her within a few days to throw immense bodies of troops against the invaders in the Carpathians.

Berlin admits the Russians have entered Hungarian territory at several points in the Carpathian district, but declares these positions were most dearly bought in view of the terrible casualties inflicted by Austrian artillery and machine guns on Russian massed formations.

In Russian Poland, Germans hold the belief that Russia is preparing to fall back to her second line and Russian trench detences in that region will be assisted by the flooding of the great sections of intervening country.

London newspapers profess the belief that the German submarine attack on the British steamer Laertes, flying the Dutch flag, will precipitate more stringent measures against German trade, which were promised by Premier Asquith in his speech delivered yesterday in the Commons. The Daily Mail says it believes the Government will announce a complete blockade of the German coast, as a result of which all goods to Germany by sea will be liable to seizure.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 12. — Further explaining the Russian retirement in East Prussia, the official statement today says: "It is believed we are on the eve of a great operation which must settle definitely the struggle in East Prussia."

The statement goes on to say that Russians are seeking the shelter of their own fortresses before attempting to take "more concentrated" locations from which to oppose reinforced Germans. It is intimatd that a shroud of secrecy will surround the operations in the immediate future.

LOCAL LIQUOR STORES AND HOTELS NOTIFIED OF TAX

The war tax on non-sparkling wines of five cents per quart and upon champagne of twenty-five cents per pint goes into force at once and Collector of Inland Revenue, Mayor Buller and his Deputy, William Parker, are on the job today notifying all liquor stores and hotels. The stamps which were received at the Inland Revenue Office this morning will be on sale there. They are similar to the postage stamps with the words "War Tax" printed across the face.

When the date of enforcing the war tax on all the other commodities is made known, the local inland revenue officials will notify all grocers, druggists, etc., who sell goods upon which the war tax will be levied.

HE HAS STRANGE HALLUCINATIONS

Young Farmer to be Examined as to His Sanity

On an information of insanity a young Smith township farmer, named J. Edward Robins, appeared before County Police Magistrate Langley this morning. His actions and conduct were rational enough and he replied to questions and talked quite sanely but it is said he has strange hallucinations. It is also alleged that his domestic life has not been one of complete concord. The young man was in an asylum about three years ago and came out supposedly cured.

Magistrate Langley told him he would be given a thorough medical examination by local physicians who would endeavor to say whether or not he was safe to be at large.

"What if they start asking questions and I tell them it's none of their business?" he asked.

He is to come before the Magistrate next Wednesday morning at ten o'clock, in the interval the examination to be made.

The German submarine U2 attempted to torpedo the British steamer Laertes. The vessel escapes only by manoeuvering and fast steaming. She was flying the Dutch flag.

A new loan of one billion two hundred and fifty million dollars is asked for by German financiers.

PRIVATE GASH IS WEDDED AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Many volunteers of the third contingent were present when Capt. Rev. Spencer of the 39th Battalion united Private Walter John Gash, 264 Reid street, now of the 39th Battalion, to Miss Elizabeth Fosbraey, also of this city, in the holy bonds of matrimony, in St. John's Church yesterday afternoon at five o'clock. Private Gash has been granted leave of absence from parade till Monday.

While the carriage bearing the bride and groom was en route to the church it overturned, but luckily none of the occupants was injured. All appeared to enjoy the incident, evidently thinking, "a bad beginning makes a good ending."

A despatch from Berlin says the invasion of Roumania has been ordered before she can mobilise. Four hundred thousand troops are being prepared for the same.

Big Demonstration for Belgium in Madrid

MADRID, Feb. 12. — A remarkable demonstration of sympathy for the suffering Belgians took place here yesterday.

Nearly 20,000 Spanish Republicans at a mass meeting adopted resolutions promising help to the Belgians, and later marched to the residence of the diplomatic representatives of the allies where they cheered the euvoys.

Within the last two weeks there has been a marked change in the sentiment, which in the early months of the war was favorable to Germany.

MOUNTED RIFLES

It is very probable that the local unit of the Mounted Rifles will not leave for a week or ten days. The men will be innoculated tomorrow and that naturally occasions delay. The cheques for the ten dollars of advance pay which each man will receive are now being issued.

Word has been received that the 39th Battalion will not leave till after March 31st.

LIBERALS USING UNFAIR TACTICS

Ottawa, Feb. 12. — Liberal attempts to discredit the Government while tying the hands of the government by a pretended truce has produced a painful impression. Premier Borden is very severe on the unfair tactics which is considered to be on a par with the action of the senate. There is trouble ahead if it continues.

GIRL LEAVES PLACE OF EMPLOYMENT

Ethel Gulliver, a thirteen-year-old girl, has run away from the home of Mr. McKenzie, where she was employed as domestic, in the county of Kincardine. It is believed she came to Peterborough, as Chief Thompson received a long distance telephone message from Ripley Centre, this afternoon, to try and locate her. She is a Barnardo Home girl.

TWO HUNDRED GUARDS OUT

About 200 members of the home guard turned out last evening and were put through a course of instruction by Sergt.-Major Peters, ex-militia instructor, who is still active and able to outdo many a younger man. He drilled them for about an hour and the variation from the usual company drill was appreciated, and although it was all new to quite a number of the guard, a good showing was made. There were no orders issued.

DIPLOMAS FOR TWO LOCAL YOUNG LADIES

London, Ont., Feb. 12. — Sixteen new graduates of St Joseph's Hospital Training School for Nurses received their diplomas from the hands of Bishop Fallon at St. Peter's Parish Hall last night. Among the graduates were Misses Maud Shaughnessy and Muriel O'Dette of Peterborough.

NO APPROVAL FOR PROPOSED SITE FOR DISPOSAL PLANT

Owing to the statement which recently appeared in local papers to the effect that the provincial Board of Health had given their approval to the proposed plan of the city sewage disposal plant, the solicitors for the township of Otonabee have made enquiries of the Provincial Board and are informed that the disposal of the sewage in Otonabee has not been approved and that no judgment of this point has been given.

Permission has been given the city to place their pumping station if they desire to do so at the corner of Lock and George Streets, but nothing further has been done. The engineer of the Provincial Board points out that there is no difficulty in pumping sewage a couple of miles and it is expected that a site for the diposal plant will be selected which will be approved of by all concerned.

As the matter stands now, it is far from being settled.

THE PARIS STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 12. — The afternoon official statement depicts a climax of inactivity along the front as regards infantry movements. Between the sea and the Somme yesterday saw artillery fighting. To the south of La Boisselle the enemy exploded a mine at the end of our trenches. We, however, maintained our positions. From the Somme to the Argonne there has been reported nothing more than the bombardment of Tracy-le-Mont by the enemy, and activity of our artillery in the sectors of Rheims and Soissons.

In the Woevre, yesterday witnessed fairly spirited cannonading on the part of the Germans in front of Rambucourt and the forest of La Hazelle. We bombarded railroad stations at Thiaucourt and Arnaville.

LONDON, Feb. 12. — The Times' military critic says there is little likelihood of any advance on either side in France for a long time to come. A successful offensive over impassable ground in the face of perfectly screened artillery which has its ranges perfectly marked is impossible. Successful assault by mining or bombardment of a bit of trench, he says, has no consequence. Since August, aviators have failed to go up only on six days, and few hostile preparations escape the eyes of the airmen.

The British army, the critic continues, despite its being accustomed to campaigning in warm climates, has stood winter experience well, and is now in better condition than any of the contending forces.

GERMAN MILITARY COMMANDERS INTERFERE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12. — The United States has sent an inquiry to Germany on complaint of the American minister Van Dyke at The Hague that German military commanders were interfering with his diplomatic communications with Luxemburg. American Ambassador Gerard at Berlin has been instructed to make representations to the German foreign office.

Special Levies on Insurance and Bank Note Issues

PATENT MEDICINES

Telegrams, Letters Railway Tickets and Wines Included

OTTAWA, Feb. 12. — Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, delivered his budget speech yesterday afternoon upon a formal motion that the House go in committee of ways and means and the budget debate was therefore adjourned for a week. The outstanding feature of the budget is the taxation of raw materials, heretofore free of duty, and a general or "horizontal" increase of all existing tariff duties by an additional 7 1-2 per cent. ad valorem. Except in a few specified cases where goods come under the British preference the increase is only 5 per cent. In addition to this are several special stamp taxes.

The Minister estimates that, the special taxes will yield an annual income of $8,000,000 and that the tariff increases will bring in from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000.

Liquors (except wine), tobacco and sugar are exempted from the horizontal increase. Squid and nicotine sulphate, now subject to duty, are placed upon and remain upon a free list. A specific duty instead of the 5 ad valorem duty is levied upon iron ore, the duty being 8 cents per ton (British preferential, 6 cents).

The "special war revenue tax," as it will be known, will include: A tax of one per cent. annually upon the note circulation of banks, to be computed and paid quarterly.

One per cent. on the gross income of trust and loan companies. One per cent. on premiums received in Canada by all insurance and trust associations, except life, fraternal and marine companies, payments to be made quarterly.

The above charges are made retroactive, and apply to all transactions made after Jan. 1, 1915.

One cent on each telegraph or cable message originating in Canada, to be paid by the sender.

Five cents on each ticket costing over one and not more than five dollars, and five cents for each additional five dollars or fraction of five dollars, on all railway and steamboat tickets to points in Canada, Newfoundland, British West Indies and the United States.

The following stamp taxes are applied:

Two cents on each check, deposit receipt and bill of exchange, express order, postoffice order, and bill of lading; and upon each postal note a stamp tax of one cent.

Each letter or post card mailed in Canada must carry a war tax stamp of one cent.

Upon each package of proprietary or patent medicine or perfumery a stamp of one cent up to ten cents value, and one cent for each additional ten cents.

Non-sparkling wines ten cents a quart.

Champagne and sparkling wines, twenty-five cents a pint.

Sleeping car tickets are taxed ten cents and chair car tickets five cents. steamboat tickets for points not in Canada, Newfoundland and British West Indies or the United States are taxed $1 on tickets costing not less than $60, and $5 upon tickets costing more than $60.

Steamship and railway companies are authorized to add the amount of the tax to the cost of tickets charged their patrons.

No income tax is levied, several reasons being assigned therefore. One is that the tax would probably not yield over $2,000,000, and a large amount of this sum would be used up in the collection. Another is that there already exists provincial and municipal income taxes.

The tariff changes come into effect immediately, and the special taxes (except as above noted) will be brought into effect by order-in-council.

The items in the tariff schedules to which the flat increase of 7 1-2 per cent. ad valorem (5 per cent. British preferential) do not apply include:

Fish from Newfoundland; animals the improvement of stock; cocoa and chocolate products; tea; salt for the fisheries; Indian corn except for distillation purposes; wheat; wheat flour; sweetened biscuits; squid; oysters; seed and breeding; fish and fish eggs for propagating purposes; sugar; tobacco; wines from South Africa; books, printed; newspapers and magazines; news printing paper; matrix paper, nicotine sulphate; ores

TRYING TO MAKE OUT A CASE.

VERY DIFFICULT it is for Dr. Bernard Dernberg to make out his case for Germany. He is going about in the United States preaching the cause of Germany and trying to justify that country's entry into the war. He said recently at a meeting in Detroit:

> "I have been in the west of your United States. There when a man sees another gripping for his hip pocket he draws first. This is what Germany did.
>
> "Russia was massing on our border, and we demanded an explanation. She refused it. France was asked her motive in bringing her army corps to our frontier. She replied that it was none of our business. We had to strike for our life. England, seeing her chance to vent her jealous spite, jumped into the fray with Belgium as a pretext."

He maintained that Germany's life depended on her army, just as England's existence depended on her navy, and went on to say:

> "We have a bitter struggle before us, one upon which our very existence depends. But let me say now that the starving out of Germany, which is now the declared purpose of those who a few months ago were going to crush us promptly, is a pious dream commensurate with the piety of those who are having it.
>
> "What reason had such a country as ours to go to war wantonly? With prosperity at home and peace abroad, with prospect of facing that coalition which she now faces? No, we did not wish to fight, but our life depended upon it. Sir Edward Grey himself justified our invasion of Belgium by asserting that Germany knew it would be a war to the death, and France also knew it, and that Emperor William feared France would violate the neutrality of Belgium if he did not. With that prospect before us, we had to strike first, and we did."

Several thoughts naturally arise from these statements. Dr. Dernberg is the agent of a belligerent country, and his case is naturally one-sided and prejudiced. The fact that Germany was able and did strike first is ample proof that great preparations for war were under way in Germany before Russia and France started mobilizing. If Germany had not been gathering her armies, France and Russia would not have mobilized. They did so only when Germany's preparations made such a move imperative for their national safety. Again, France gave an immediate unequivocal guarantee that she would respect, in the event of war, Belgium's neutrality, when Germany dallied over this problem and gave evasive answers. The fact is that Germany's decision to strike first was dictated, not by any protective consideration, but by the conviction that doing so would assure her of an easy and quick conquest of France and Belgium. Dernberg might employ his time and talents in a more fruitful undertaking.

GETTING ITS MONEY'S WORTH.

THE EXAMINER is shedding hot, bitter tears over the fact that some Toronto newspapers of Conservative persuasion received more government advertising than did the Toronto Star, a Liberal journal. So disgruntled is our contemporary that it did not hesitate to use an absolute untruth, and intentionally at that. It stated that the Toronto Star has as large a circulation as any four Conservative newspapers such as the Toronto Telegram, News, Mail and Empire and World, for it says the Star, by virtue of circulation, would give as much, if not more, value as any four others. This is obviously untrue, and is on a par with our contemporary's usual policy of misrepresentation for political purposes.

If our contemporary was anxious to make a fair comparison, why did it not give the figures for advertising when Laurier was Prime Minister? Then it was the Globe, Star, Examiner that got large quantities of advertising, when the Toronto Mail, Telegram and Peterborough Review got nothing. At that time did the Examiner ever raise its voice that Sir Wilfrid Laurier should give advertising to newspapers like the Toronto Mail and Empire and Peterborough Review? Not once. If the Examiner takes the trouble to publish a comparative statement of what the Globe and Mail and Empire received under Laurier, and what these two newspapers receive under Borden, it will find the comparison is greatly in favour of the Globe. This is what the Examiner seeks to evade in criticizing the apportionment of government advertising.

But that is not all. The Examiner even thundered falsely against the construction work on the Lift Locks because there was not enough pap coming its way. And now it has the bad manners, the effrontery, to say that the Government is not patriotic, and that we are badly governed because Liberal newspapers are not receiving as much advertising as they would like! The Borden Government has been less partizan than ever the Laurier Administration was. The Examiner admits that, because it says Borden has made a new and wholesome departure by sending advertisements to newspapers of both parties. If the Examiner had any respect for decency in its contention, it would have the grace to allow such an appeal to come from the Conservative press. Its own bitter, partizan policy during the palmy days when Liberals were in power, stamp such an appeal as it made in last night's issue with a self-interest that is base, cloaking with patriotism and sophisms as it did, that appeal for government advertising. Getting its money's worth was, indeed, the real subject of its editorial.

WHERE GERMANY'S DEFEAT BEGAN.

THE BATTLE of the Marne will rank among the greatest battles in history, for that was where German arms suffered their first great reverse. The tide of grey-coated German infantry had carried all before it up to that point, and was almost within striking distance of Paris. There began its retreat, with a flanking movement by British and French troops which necessitated a gradual widening of the line of battle, until it reached its present position and dimensions. The German objective was Paris in four weeks, and this object has been defeated. Other objectives, like Calais and Ostend on the west coast, have been defeated or rendered useless.

That Germany recognized the battle of the Marne as a great defeat, is borne out by the proposals of peace made to France after it had taken place. The answer to his move was the agreement by the Allies that peace would not be made without the consent of all three.

The duration of the war is another important point of disadvantage against Germany, for it permits Russia to do what Germany herself admitted to be a feature of superiority, that is, time to bring up her almost unlimited supplies of troops. The desperate fighting during the last few days on the eastern frontier, in which the Germans are reported to have lost in six days of desperate fighting, forty thousand men, shows what a tremendous task the Germans have in holding their eastern lines of trenches. Every day the task becomes harder, and a retreat in that theatre of war can be looked for in the near future.

The Berliner Tageblatt in its leading article on February 2nd, hinted the dreadful realization of coming events when it said:

> "Contrary to official predictions, it is uncertain whether Germany's hopes will be fulfilled and she will be victorious. We know the enemy's strength at present, but not his strength in the future."

About the same time news came of the purchase by the German Imperial family of large blocks of New York State bonds, to preserve part of the Hohenzollern fortune in the event of a German disaster. These bonds are for $51,000,000, and cover canal and highway improvements. They bear 4½ per cent. interest. The sale of the bonds was conducted by the state on the auction principle, on January 21st, 1914. A syndicate formed by Kuhn, Loeb & Company and William A. Reid & Company secured the entire issue, offering 106.077 for each hundred-dollar bond, and outbidding 495 competitors. Since then large blocks of these bonds, of unknown amounts, have been transferred to the Hohenzollerns.

These are ominous signs that Germany fears she cannot hold her present lines of defence in face of the gathering strength of her enemies. Add to these signs the defeats Germany has suffered on the seas, the losses of her merchant marine and colonies, and her shortage of food supplies, and the passage of days only adds to the intensity of the plight she has brought down on her own head. Still, a nation like Germany can offer a long and stubborn resistance, but the cost in the end is such that the human mind staggers in contemplating it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IF GERMANY allows her prisoners of war to starve, as she threatens, Dr. Bernard Dernberg who says Germany has all the food she wants for the duration of the war, will have a hard time defending his country. — Montreal Mail. Thus it strangely happens that the Mail bears out our criticism of this super bagman.

Canada's Spirit.

(New York Evening Post.)

The Governor-General's short speech in opening the Canadian Parliament expressed the spirit of a session which will be devoted wholly to war measures. The pride with which reference was made to the organization of a force of about 100,000 men, of which 30,000 are now believed to be in France, is evidence that the sacrifices entailed by the war will be borne in ungrudging spirit. Their extent is partly shown by the Parliamentary estimate that the total deficit for the current fiscal year will be $70,000,000 — a huge sum for the country that in 1913 spent $190,000,000, and received $205,000,000. It is also predicted that the railways must appeal for aid. Stamp taxes and increased tariff duties on not merely luxuries, but on tea, coffee, and sugar, will increase the burdens of a public suffering from business depression. But there will be no demur in Parliament or outside. Canada is preparing to guarantee a food supply. The lowest estimate puts the increase in her wheat acreage at 25 per cent.

What Canada Should Do.

(Fort William Times-Journal.)

Since the fifth of August the world has learned much, including the fact that very many products which had been conceded to be the special monopoly of Germany can be manufactured elsewhere just as successfully, and Canada might well draw from this the lesson that New Jersey refineries are not an absolute essential for the refining of Canadian nickel.

What Canada should do about it is to inaugurate a policy that will give her the same control of the ultimate supply of nickel as she now has of the raw material. Nature has given her the one, and no amount of artificial barriers should keep her from controlling the other.

THE KAISER RUSHES HOME

He Has Evidently Called Conference on Crucial Situation in the East

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 12. —. The Kaiser's hurried return to Berlin from the east front is regarded here as a very ominous sign. It is officially announced that he received at the imperial palace, Von Moltke, former chief of the German Staff, and other generals. He also saw Eulenberg, Minister of Commerce, and Gen. von Kessel, says the announcement. These officials were guests of the Kaiser and Kaiserin at dinner in the royal palace on the occasion of the anniversary of the Kaiser becoming honorary colonel of the 1st Guards Regiment. It may be taken to hide, in fact, that the Kaiser ordered a hasty council of war to discuss the critical situation of the German army on the east front. The National Tidendes' Berlin correspondent plainly hints that the German capital is kept in ignorance of the fearful slaughter in the eastern war theatre. He wires that there is a mysterious silence, foreboding great events, which may change the course of war. He evidently knows more than he dare write.

MIND AND BODY

A man is handed a telegram. He is eating and enjoying his dinner. He reads the contents of the message. Almost immediately afterward his body is a-tremble, his face either reddens or grows "ashy white," his appetite is gone; such is the effect of the mind upon the stomach that it literally refuses the food; if forced upon it it may reject it entirely.

A message is delivered to a lady. She is in a genial, happy mood. Her face whitens, she trembles and her body falls to the ground in a faint, temporarily helpless, apparently lifeless. Such are the intimate relations between the mind and the body.

Great stress or anxiety or fear may in two weeks' or even in two days' time so work its ravages that the person looks ten years or even twenty years older. A person has been long given to worry or perhaps to worry in extreme form, though not so long; a well defined case of indigestion and general stomach trouble, with a generally lowered and sluggish vitality has become pronounced and fixed.

Any type of thought that prevails in our mental lives will in time produce its correspondence in our physical lives. As we understand better these laws of correspondences we will be more careful as to the types of thoughts and emotions we consciously or unwittingly entertain and live with. The great bulk of all diseases are generated in the body through certain states and conditions of mind.—Ralph Waldo Trine in Woman's Home Companion.

JOCKEYING FOR POSITION.

Hostile Forces Along Western Front Prepare For Real War.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—All signs point to the resumption of the war on a grand scale on the western front almost any time now. It is spring in France, and the appearance of cavalry on the battlefield indicates that the ground has sufficiently hardened to permit manoeuvres. Artillery will soon be in a position to advance, and the present actions both sides are jockeying for a position of vantage. Cavalry fighting in the Argonne preceeded a German attack on Marie Therese and Bagatelle Wednesday. Lancers had a skirmish, and then German infantry advanced in column of fours, a new disposition, along a third of a mile front, presenting a target for the French infantry and artillery that did not stand up very long. The enemy was rapidly mown down and left a great number of dead on the field.

The French occupied a German trench in the Vosges, south of the Chateau de Lusse and north of St. Mary's Hill.

The Germans bombarded Nieuport and the banks of the Yser without doing much damage.

PLAYTHINGS OF THE SEAS

German Submarines Put Into Neutral Port for Relief

LONDON, Feb. 12. — The Daily Mail's Copenhagen correspondent was informed privately from Christiania that during the heavy North Sea gales of a few days ago ten German submarines put into Bergen Stavanger, Trondnjem and other Norwegian ports in terribly battered conditions. The crews reported that they had been many days in the heavy weather, enduring privations, loss of sleep and discomforts through the ceaseless rising and falling of the mountainous seas. The men were in an exhausted condition, several of them being ill. The submarines were escorted to Norwegian waters by Norwegian patrol cruisers and informed that they must leave within twenty-four hours, according to the international rules, or be interned. They remained about twenty hours for rest and carried out some slight repairs. The men were only half inclined to return to their task in the North Sea.

There's a Fine

For selling butter not properly put up and correctly branded.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

Imitation Parchment paper (which some sell) is no better than common tissue as soon as it becomes damp; and cheap inks stain the butter, making it unsaleable. We use only PURE PARCHMENT printed with SPECIAL INDELIBLE INK.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

Harmless Face Powder.

While it may be questioned whether any powder is entirely harmless, a celebrated skin specialist commends this formula for face powder: Rice flour, six ounces; rice starch, six ounces; carbonate of magnesia, three ounces; pulverized boric acid, one and one-half ounces; powdered orris root, one and one-fourth drams; essence of citron fifteen drops; essence of bergamot, thirty drops. Mingle the essences with magnesia and then smoothly rub all together.

Apply the powder over a light coating of cold cream well massaged into the skin and put it on generously so that it may sink in. Then before going out wipe off the superfluous white with a soft cloth. In this way the powder is "kept on" and the skin protected from dust and wind.

The Cold Shower.

The woman who has been accustomed to taking a cold shower bath will find it is a great protection against the cold of winter. It should be taken the first thing in the morning in a well warmed bathroom. Some enjoy the shower tepid at first, afterward allowing it to run cold. The cool plunge is more taxing to the delicate woman, and if a shower bath is not to be had the cool sponge bath is its best substitute. All of these cold baths should be followed by a brisk rubbing with several rough towels so as to insure the healthy glow which imparts a glorious tingling over the surface of the body.

Broom Covers.

The sleeves and legs of old knit underwear are excellent to cover a broom for cleaning dust off the wall. Put the broom handle in the large part of the sleeve or leg and pull it up well over the broom. It cannot slip off, as the more one pulls down on the wall the tighter the cloth will hold.

Asbestos Glove For the Cook.

An asbestos glove to wear in handling pots and pans that are hot would save many burns, for even if a pot holder is hung conveniently close to the kitchen stove it is always out of place when something is boiling over and quick action is necessary.

How to Massage the Face.

With the tips of the fingers massage the forehead from temple to temple with a rotary motion; then slide down to the chin and work upward from the chin close to the side of the nose to the eyes. Slide down again, each time a little farther back, and repeat the motion until the entire face has been covered. Next work under the eyes with the middle finger from the nose outward to the corners of the eyes. Remember that the movements should be rotary and always up and out toward the ears.

Chicken Cheese.

Boil two chickens until tender; then take out all the bones and chop the meat fine. Season to taste with salt, pepper and butter, pour in enough of the liquid to make it moist; then put into a mold. When cold turn out and cut in slices.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

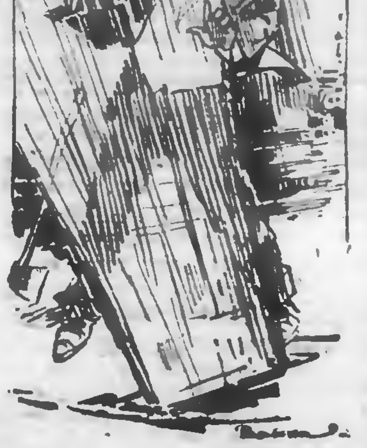
Getting his tools together, he got vigorously to work, ripping off a big patch of the inner skin and laying open beyond the real object of attack. The next step required more delicate methods—more care and skill. One fissure, however small, in the outer planking might admit so fierce a gush of water that the task would have to be rebegun elsewhere with all its attendant delay. But there was no time for delay—not an instant. Above him was the unlocked door—the open hatch, urging him to feverish haste.

He marked a good sized square on the planking, mindful that the copper outside would help to check the inflow, and set to paring the wood away as evenly as he could with the chisel. It was Oregon pine and came off in bright, clean shavings, sticky with gum. He dug deeper and deeper; the square sank into the yellow timber; he was as assiduous as ever, though the effort became harder to keep the surface flat and uniform. He was dripping with sweat; the ax was heavy and extremely awkward to hold, cramping his right hand and annoying him with its cumbersome handle.

Dropping the chisel, he ran his hand down the ax handle, gripped and, aiming the blunt end of the ax at the aperture, let fly with all his strength.

There was a flash of greenish water, a stupefying roar, a blow in his chest that hurled him sprawling backward, drenched, confused, almost senseless. Even at that depth the water was under a colossal pressure; it was as though a geyser had opened in the ship's side; the stream ran solid for six or seven feet, curved and burst. Matt staggered up and regarded it with awe, dizzily trying to collect his bewildered senses. Good God, how would the pumps ever cope with it! The whole ocean was pouring in; it did not seem she could last an hour.

By degrees he recovered some composure, collected the tools and flung them into the blackest recesses of the hold so that they might not rise in judgment against him, for he knew the short shrift he would get were the act brought home to him. He drew himself up the hatch, caught the coaming, and with a sailor's alertness sprang out on the trade room floor, where, trailing water like a spaniel, he hurriedly closed the cover, stamping it into place with his feet. Then with unspeakable relief he went to the door, listened, opened it a few inches and peeped cautiously into the passageway.



There Was a Flash of Greenish Water, a Stupefying Roar.

He looked straight into Chris' eyes. She signaled him to hurry across. He did so at a bound, closing the cabin door behind him, putting his back to it like a hunted man.

"Get me some dry clothes quick," he panted. "The schooner's done for—I've put a hole in her you could shove your two fists through."

The leak was not reported till supper time, when Krantz broke in on the party like a whirlwind. The uproar that ensued was as welcome to him as it was dismaying to the galvanized mate and to the pallid, stuttering Schwartz. Brandeis was on deck in a moment, bawling orders in a voice like a bull; Schwartz behind him, as white as a corpse; Krantz next, his whiskers flying and his heavy tread resounding as he stumbled forward to call all hands.

Naked to the waist, a couple of men were working the handspikes of the pump, which was hoarsely flooding the scuppers. The canvas covers had been cut from the whale boat, and beside it, in a little heap, the Japs, Yonida and Fusi, were stacking provisions and with a tin saucepan were filling a pair of breakers from the water butt. The main hatch was open, gaping to the sky, and within its depths could be heard a wicked, gurgling sound, swishing to and fro with the roll of the ship. At the break of the poop, and showing that Brandeis had at last discovered the source of danger, was the mate himself, vociferously directing the efforts to draw a trysail over the leak and up to the opposite side.

A bellowing command brought Matt to the task, and a second later he was striving with the rest and as energetically busy to accomplish the impossible, for he knew the hole was too near the keelson to be likely to suck—he had cut it there for that very reason—but he worked with a will nevertheless, glad to elude suspicion by an appearance of zeal and gladder still at the murmurs about him, which, although in German, plainly implied hopelessness and failure.

Brandeis' repeated examinations of the hold, from which he emerged like a drowned rat, appeared to show that the water was gaining on them, though Matt was not half as sure that the confounded trysail was not checking the leak to some degree.

Matt snatched an opportunity to tell Chris to keep a sharp watch on the binnacle compass. The Esmeralda's course was W. S. W., and he asked her to warn him in case it were altered by even a point. To have it altered was his one consuming desire, for it meant the culmination of his plan and the shortening of those dreaded bouts in the whaler. Were the schooner laid for the nearest land she might be kept afloat to reach it, sparing them an ordeal Matt had experienced before.

Half sinking as the boat was, Brandeis kept her at it, with no weakening of his resolve to drown her under rather than turn aside.

At midnight, after another stormy altercation between the two, Schwartz seemed to win a grudging consent to get the wireless into operation. A slender pointed steel pole was run aloft. Herman installed his apparatus at the foot of the foremast and, with no pretensions of secrecy and as oblivious of Matt as he was of the rest of the crew, calmly harnessed himself to the wires.

There was no change in the Esmeralda's course. Thus the night passed, and by morning it was plain the ship was doomed. She was submerged to the channels, and had a sickening, undecided movement as she sank in the trough of the sea. The men looked at one another, wondering each time if she would ever rise again, or simply founder then and there and go down like a stone.

The acquiescence of the crew filled Matt with amazement and a bitter, mounting anger. He tried to instill into them something of his own fury; pointed and made signs at the boat; urged them to mutiny, to get away before the ship sank under them. But they listened unmoved, though not without a strained, hungry expression. Life is sweet, and there it was towing a hundred feet behind them, while Brandeis with no weapon but his strident voice held them to a coffin.

By 9 o'clock land was sighted on the port bow, but it caused no relaxation of the killing routine, nor any change in the ship's course. Matt watched it with an exasperation not to be described. Over there was safety; over there, not fifteen miles away, was the end of all their troubles—white beaches, palms, people, law, security. Yet they must stick like flies on a sieve at the behest of that infernal Brandeis.

But no one paid any attention to him, though if he had fallen behind or shirked he knew he would have fared badly. So he kept at it till his arms seemed wrenched from their sockets, till his heart was ready to burst—in a blind, dizzy agony to hold his own with his companions. At intervals the wireless clicked and buzzed; at once, at some message it caught from space, there was much congratulation and even a thin cheer.

The ship was settling fast; at every lurch Matt expected her to founder; she sickened in the depths of the swell, quivered, and threatened to rise no more. Never was there a gladder sound than Brandeis' order to leave her before she left them.

The whaler was drawn up to her quarter, and a hurried descent made into her, the first comers seizing the oars and preparing to back away, in case the Esmeralda suddenly went down.

Instead of making sail and setting a course, Brandeis unshipped his tiller and allowed the boat to bob as she pleased. Matt became very perplexed and anxious. Why did they drift there and do nothing? He longed for the command to step the mast. The mate half stood up in the stern sheets as though at last to give it, but instead of an order it was a shout, with his hand pointing joyfully to leeward. Smoke on the lee horizon! A steamer's smoke, dimming the the azure with a tiny stain.

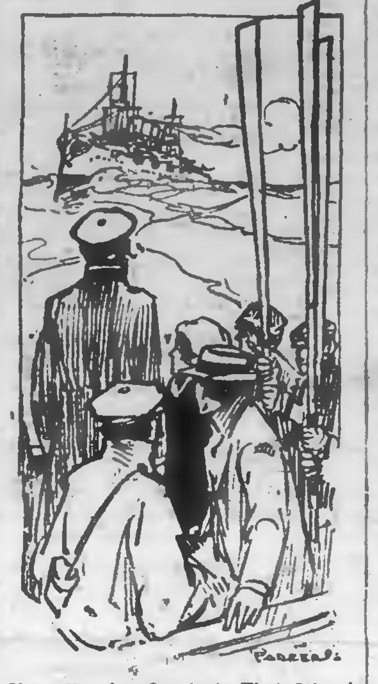
CHAPTER XVI.

John Mert.

SHE was apparently coming up at great speed; the smoke swelled in volume; two smokestacks became discernible; no, there were three! By George, there were four, in a towering, stupendous, black vomiting line—a giant of a vessel, with fighting tops to her squat masts and turrets, sponsons and guns showing above the glistening white of her bow. A man-of-war, a colossus of twelve or fourteen thousand tons, able at reduced speed to encircle the globe and return whence she had started with coal still to spare in her Brobdingnagian bunkers.

Matt watched her with parted lips and straining, fascinated eyes. Was it she, then, who had called up the Esmeralda night after night? It was no chance meeting assuredly, but a prearranged tryst in the waste of the limitless sea. Many a government of importance had not the peer of this magnificent vessel that was racing toward them under forced draught and with all the power of her mighty engines.



She Offered a Spectacle That Stirred the Heart.

As she drew nearer, sparkling with white and steel, she offered a spectacle that stirred the heart. The water flashed at her stem as she cut it asunder and tossed it aside in a rainbow spray; her decks rose, tier upon tier, alive with men; her long, slender guns protruding from the ports were backed with human faces; on the lofty bridge were two officers in uniform, the one standing motionless beside the steersman, the other pacing two and fro, occasionally stopping to use his glass.

Suddenly the throb of her engines ceased and she was gliding toward the whaleboat under no other impetus but her vast bulk. Shrill whistles sounded, white clothed sailors were seen running, and as if by magic the starboard gangway was lowered, its base churning the water or rising high above it as the ship rolled in the seaway. At the head of the gangway, as the boat was cast off and all the survivors of the schooner crowded up, Brandeis, Krantz, Schwartz and Chris were met by a burly officer, who grinned affably and shook each one of them by the hand. As Matt and Chris passed to the quarterdeck beyond the former raised his cap to a group of officers, who returned the salute with naval stiffness. It was a moment of some embarrassment—to stand there with no home under the sun save that strange deck and to know they were dependent on the charity of those disdainful observers, who gave no sign of welcoming them.

But an instant later they were accosted by a young man, also in uniform, who, advancing hurriedly, bowed and in broken English said, "Beg pardon, instructed by captain, follow me, please be so kind."

Guiding them down the stairway to the deck beneath, he led them along a passageway to a cabin, into which he ushered them with this concluding statement: "Instructed by captain, you are here to remain, please be so kind." With that he saluted, clicked his heels with Teutonic formality and departed—presumably "instructed by captain" to report their incarceration.

It was without doubt an officer's cabin and was prettily decorated with photographs, fans, shells, cotillion favors and other trifling mementoes. The pair, thus oddly imprisoned in it, felt a lessening of their tremors and laughed at the sight of themselves in the glass.

"They ought to be afraid of us," exclaimed Chris with saucy confidence, twining her arms about Matt's neck and studying the effect. "I look like the widow of an organ grinder on the bread line, and by the time I've combed your hair a bit you might pass as a Siberian exile who had escaped in a garbage can."

The young officer returned and stood blinking at them ceremoniously in the doorway.

"Instructed by captain, your presence is requested, please be so kind," he said, addressing Matt. As Chris rose also she was told to stay behind.

"Instructed by captain; no, no; please be so kind," exclaimed the young officer, barring her away. "Instructed by captain. The gentleman only will follow me. Please be so kind."

Winter's Chills Bring Out Kidney Ills.

Winter quickly makes you realize that there is something radically wrong with the Kidneys. There can be no doubt as to just what is making your back ache all the time—what causes you to urinate so often—what makes the urine so highly colored and so painful to void.

The trouble is with the Kidneys. They are weak or strained, or you may have taken cold and the cold has settled in the Kidneys. The inflammation has also extended to the bladder, which is irritated also by the excess of uric acid.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

are a perfect protection against winter Kidney and Bladder Troubles, as Mr Dunn will testify.

L'Anse a Louise, Dec. 13th.

"For four years, I suffered from Kidney Trouble and tried four different doctors, all failing to do me any good. I was all but discouraged when I saw your GIN PILLS advertised and after taking three boxes, I was entirely relieved. It is now a year since then and I have had no return of the trouble".

UNDER A FLAG OF TRUCE.

A Reunion and a Compact Between the Blue and the Gray.

My father was a private in the Twenty-sixth Michigan and often told the following story, although I was never wise enough to make a note of the date or the name of the engagement. There can be no doubt, however, of the substantial accuracy of the tale.

There had been fighting, but a flag of truce had passed from the Confederate to the Union lines, and firing was suspended. The lines were close together and both behind cover. As the white flag passed out of sight toward headquarters the lines simply flowed together, meeting in the vacant space between. Officers on both sides tried to prevent it, but their efforts were fruitless. Little groups formed here and here and began to barter. The grays had tobacco, and the blues had coffee and a little sugar, and trade was lively for a time. Then they fell to discussing other things, and to understand their conversation it ought to be explained that the practice of firing on a picket line was regarded by these soldiers, hardened though they were by the awful sights of a dozen bloody fields, as little better than murder. Said a gray:

"Why do you fellows fire on picket?"

Blue—Why do you fire on picket?

Gray—Well, we don't, only when that old Colonel B. from North Carolina is officer of the day; then we have to. He makes us do it. But I tell you, Yank, we'll shoot high! Yes, Yank, we'll shoot high!

The flag of truce came back; the negotiations had failed. The lines reformed, and firing began again. Once more poor humanity referred to the rifle and bayonet the questions it could settle in no other way. But who can doubt that in the hearts of all who witnessed the dramatic scene there was less bitterness than before the truce? Theirs was no vulgar, sordid quarrel; no bitter, personal vendetta. Each side was pledged to the support of antagonistic principles, to maintain which they had staked their lives, but they had no quarrel with their opponents as men.—Youth's Companion.

SYMONS NOW IN PENITENTIARY

Is Given Job in One of the Offices

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 12.—Harry Symons of Toronto, sentenced to five years in connection with the investigation into the Union Life Assurance case, has commenced to serve his term at the Portsmouth Penitentiary. A breakfast was provided for him at the hotel, but he could eat nothing. He appeared to be very much down-hearted and felt his position keenly. He will be given a job in one of the offices.

Three Scandinavian rulers will hold a conference to take action on Germany's floating mines and firing on neutral ships.

SHIP ESCAPES SUBMARINE

British Steamer Attacked While Flying Dutch Flag

YMUIDEN, Netherlands, Feb. 12.—The German submarine U-2 Wednesday attempted to torpedo the British steamer Laertes, which arrived here yesterday from Java. The vessel escaped by adroit manoeuvres and fast steaming. When attacked the steamer was flying the Dutch flag. Capt. Prophet was in command.

The attack on the Laertes was made while the vessel was steaming between the Meuse lightship and Schouwen Bank. The submarine fired several shells, which damaged the steamer's funnel, compass and upper deck. As this did not induce the captain to stop, the submarine made an unsuccesful attempt to torpedo the steamship

The Laertes, when challenged by the submarine, was proceeding without showing her nationality. When asked to stop the vessel flew the Dutch flag.

A despatch from Rotterdam says there is reason to believe that the submarine sank. She was last seen in a cloud of steam.

Allies' Terms Still a Secret.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—"The recent public utterances in Germany give no reason to suppose that the purpose in view will be promoted by adopting the course suggested," was the answer of Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, to a question in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon asking whether, with a view to ending the terrible loss of life in the war, Great Britain was prepared to declare publicly the basis whereon the allies were willing to discuss terms of peace.

The members of the House greeted Sir Edward Grey's answer with cheers.

ORANGEMEN OF EAST DURHAM

John Peacock is the New County Master

The annual session of the East Durham County Orange Lodge was held in Millbrook on Tuesday. The County Master, Bro. J. H. Wilson, presided in a most efficient manner. Mr. Wilson would have been re-elected County Master had he so desired, as he has discharged the duties of the office in a most able manner, but he desired to withdraw in favor of other members. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term:

C. M.—John Peacock.
Dep. C. M.—Norman Henry.
R. S.—N. Belch.
F. S.—A. J. Henderson.
Treasurer—Stewart Fallis.
D. of C.—J. H. Paul.
Chaplain—William Earl.
1st Lect.—William Lynn.
2nd Lect.—T. Aiken.
3rd Lect.—L. C. Russell.

Eloquent addresses were delivered by a number of the officials and others.

It was decided to celebrate the coming 12th of July at Oshawa, providing train accommodation can be secured.

Reports from various primary lodges were given and showed a decided improvement. Bethany leads the way by increasing its membership by 46 since last session. The lodge has now 133 members, the largest in the county. No. 1062, Port Hope, increase 13; they have 97 members.

A letter of condolence to the family of the late T. B. Collins was authorized to be sent.

Degrees For Volunteers.

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 12.—Arrangements are being made by the medical faculty for a special convocation at Queen's University on Thursday next for conferring degrees on the students who are entitled to them and who are going overseas. Twenty-five have been selected to go as dressers to England.

THOMPSON BROS. WITH THE MOVIES

In the February edition of the Moving Picture Bulletin, published in Cleveland, Ohio, a picture of five sons of Mr. Peter Thompson of this city appears. Commenting on the quintette the Bulletin says:

"It is mighty seldom that we find five brothers in a family, all of whom are in the same business. And we imagine that in the moving picture business another family like the one pictured above will be pretty hard to find. Probably every man in motion pictures in Ohio knows one or more of the Thompson brothers. We are taking this opportunity of showing you what the whole five of them look like

James Thompson, manager of the Eclair and Venice Theatres and booking for the Temple, Manhattan, Eclair and Temple Theatres.

C. G. Thompson, manager of the Victor Film Service. Also manager of the United Film Service, Cleveland.

Stanley Thompson, manager of the Roma Theatre, Youngstown.

L. C. Thompson, road representative of the Apex Feature Service Cleveland. He was formerly manager of the Globe and Princess Theatres, Cleveland, and the Majestic Theatre, Lorain.

N. T. Thompson, manager of the Princess Theatre, Cleveland.

RELIEF ACCOUNTS IN NORTH MONAGHAN

The report of the meeting of the council of the township of North Monaghan as appeared in Tuesday's issue stated that Acting Relief Officer H. B. Rye presented bills for goods, distributed as charity, the amount of those bills being $90.23. Mr. Rye had been acting in the capacity of relief officer but a week, and as taxpayers of the township may voice objections to such seemingly extravagance, it should be stated that but $48.61 had been spent by him in supplying families in need with provisions and fuel. The remainder of the $90.23 had been ordered by other parties.

ARMAND LAVERGNE AGAIN ATTACKS BISHOP FALLON

"ONTARIO PRUSSIANISM" BY BOURASSA.

Montreal, Feb. 12.—Rev. Father Lortie, of Ottawa, editor of Le Droit and one of the chief champions of the French-Canadian cause in Ontario, was one of the principal speakers at a demonstration attended by Henri Bourassa, Armand Lavergne, Leo Doyen and all the leading Nationalists of the city.

The reverend gentleman claimed that the trouble came when the Orange party, with the Free Masons, had gained complete ascendancy, not only in the province of Ontario but in the press as well Father Lortie said that it was Dalton McCarthy, "a great Orange leader with an Irish name," who had first declared war against the French and Catholic people of Ontario. He was also very severe upon an Ottawa paper which, he said, had insulted French-Canadian families by insinuating that they were not moral. These insults came from the ignorant, he said, adding sotto voce, "and God knows there are a lot of them."

The order had been given by the "Orange hordes" to attack everything that was French and Catholic in Ontario. On one side were the Orangemen and their allies, while on the other side were ranged the French-Canadian children of from five to fifteen years of age.

Sir James a "Threatening Tyrant."

The clergyman was particularly severe upon the late prime minister of Ontario, whom he called "Mr. Whitney," styling Sir James "a flatterer who became a threatening tyrant."

Dr. Merchant's report was ridiculed unmercifully, the speaker also being very sarcastic as he described the little French-Canadians vacating the schools upon the appearance of the Anglo-Protestant inspectors.

Attacked a French Daily.

He complained most bitterly of a French-Canadian daily in Montreal and although he would not name the paper, he said it was published in the upper part of the city.

Father Lortie then said that four hundred school sections had been organized and that resistance had been and was still the order of the day.

The task, he said, was difficult, for at times the campaigners were afraid that approval would be lacking in high quarters. He added, however, that Mgr. Latulippe and others had gloriously vindicated the position taken by the association. The appeal to the province of Quebec had met with a noble response, and many were the prayers addressed by the pious people of this province on behalf of the "wounded" and the martyrs of the sister province.

Hard to be Moderate.

Mr. Armand Lavergne, who followed, said that he intended to be moderate, but after listening to the previous speaker, he found it difficult to keep his good resolution. He intimated that if the Confederation pact was not maintained, the Union would not last, for if there was no text to guarantee the use of French in the schools of Ontario, there was certainly no text to guarantee the use of English in the schools of Quebec. Dalton McCarthy had claimed, he said, that there should only be one religion and one language in this country. If this principle was to be carried into force, it would certainly be the superior language that would prevail. Mr. Lavergne also quoted Sir John Macdonald's reply to Mr. McCarthy, that by the Confederation Act there were no conquerors or conquered here, and that the two great races were to live on terms of perfect equality.

Blamed Bishop Fallon.

Mr. Armand Lavergne extolled Sir Oliver Mowat's English-French school law, adding that all went well till Bishop Fallon of London came on the scene. The Bishop of London, he added, had decreed that the bilingual schools were of little value. Perhaps, added Mr. Lavergne, Bishop Fallon supposed that if the French schools disappeared the money intended for their support would go to the Irish.

American Rather Than English.

He said that if Canada is to remain British it will be the province of Quebec that will contribute most to this end, for if the French-Canadians are forced to be English they will be American instead.

Mr. Henri Bourassa said that Germany is treating its French subjects better in Alsace and Lorraine than the French of Ontario are being treated by the British. He repeated several times the phrases "the Ontario Iroquois," "our Germans" and "the Prussians of Ontario."

LADY MINSTRELS' PRESENTATION

Large Audience Enjoyed Their Program

Brimming with catchy songs, quips, local hits and rollicking choruses the minstrel performance given by the St. John's Ladies' Dramatic club last night bore all the ear marks of professionalism. But everything was made in Canada while the larger portion of the jokes were brewed. That's why they took so well, backed by the smart manner the ladies put them across. With but one or two exceptions the jokes were clean shaven and pretty smooth, the smoothness being supplemented by the way the ladies got away with them. Local celebrities came in for more than a usual share of the badinage, while the school board, city dads, G. N. Gordon, W. H. Hill and Albert Stratton profited greatly from the free advertising.

The show drew a large audience who were delighted and more than surprised by the capable way the minstrels acquitted themselves. All kinds of talent was revealed. Mrs. Peter Campbell was a very self-possessed and charming interlocutor, while the six end men or rather end ladies had the swing, patter and smart stuff down pat. The singing of the male quartet composed of Messrs. Hanrahan, Minecola, Carlyle and Ward was heartily applauded. About the most popular solos and choruses were "When you Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Rose," "Tipperary," "I Want to go Back to Michigan." The costuming presented a fetching color scheme in black and white. Mr. Carlyle's singing of Canada was extremely popular. The girls danced exceedingly well, in fact old Terpsichore would not have been ashamed in the least at the showing made by those who expounded his art last evening.

Mr. Asa Huycke's orchestra supplied splendid music which aided materially in the success of the performance. It will be repeated this evening and those who missed it last evening will miss something real good by remaining away.

UNITED STATES GIVES WARNING TO GERMANY

Friendly Message Despatched to Great Britain at the Same Time Says Great Responsibility Rests Upon Her if U.S. Flag Were Misused — Drastic Note to Germany Causes a Great Sensation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—A very pointed warning to Germany against causing loss of American life or property in her efforts to enforce a blockade of the British Isles, and a friendly note to Great Britain intimating disapproval of an officially sanctioned general use of the American flag by belligerent vessels, were sent by the United States to the German and British Governments yesterday, and the full texts of both communications were made public last night.

The note to Germany, which is stiffer in tone than was anticipated, warns her that the destruction of American neutral vessels and lives by Germany would be hard to reconcile with friendly relations, and the United States would hold Germany to strict accountability and take any steps necessary to guard American lives and property.

To Great Britain, the United States pointed out "the measure of responsibility" which would seem to be imposed on the British Government "for the loss of American vessels and lives in case of an attack by a German naval force" if Britain sanctioned the general misuse of the American flag by British vessels and thereby cast doubt upon the valid character of neutral ensigns.

The two communications were to have been presented yesterday respectively to the British Government by Ambassador Page, and to the German Foreign Office by Ambassador Gerard. They were prepared by Counsellor Robt. Lansing and revised by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, after consultation with the entire Cabinet.

The British, Spanish and Brazilian Ambassadors who happened to call at the State Department, were given copies of the notes, as were the Ministers of Sweden, Norway and Denmark, who specially requested it. The documents created something of a sensation among the diplomats generally because of what some regarded as their drastic implications.

Diplomats examined with great interest the language of the communications and some of them construed the note to Germany as a warning that the loss of American lives by sinking even a belligerent merchant ship would be covered by the representatives of the American Government, because of the insistence that all merchant ships must be visited and searched and passengers taken off before ships can be sunk.

CENSORS PUT STOP TO WAR FILMS

Act on Instructions From Military Authorities

Toronto, Feb. 12.—After February 15 moving picture audiences throughout the province will no longer be thrilled with the stirring scenes of war. An order has been issued by the Ontario Board of Censors to the effect that all such films are prohibited during the continuance of European hostilities. The action follows a communication from the military authorities at Ottawa, and all the provinces will be forced to impose the same restrictions.

The desire of the militia department is to eliminate scenes which depict actual fighting, and the contact of men in death conflicts. Gruesome details have been absolutely forbidden, and anything that is represented as occurring on the fields of France or Belgium will not be shown.

Chairman Armstrong of the censor board stated last evening that the use of topical films of a military character would still be allowed, but they would be scrutinized carefully. The Ontario board has been very stric in the censoring of films since war broke out, and the effect of the Ottawa order will be merely to make their restrictions more drastic.

When asked what would be done concerning war films already out, and for which the fee had been paid, he stated that unless general complaint were heard about them they would be unmolested. He stated that no Canadian audience had yet seen a film that was reproduced from actual fighting in this war.

Pictures of troop reviews and desolated towns and villages will be allowed, but none displaying passion or conflict.

CASE WITHDRAWN.

Mr. George Brenton of Peterborough appeared before P. M. Jackson on Wednesday afternoon to defend a charge placed against him by Mr. R. Douglas, sanitary inspector, for violating town bylaw No. 869, which deals with plumbers' right and privileges to do business in Lindsay. Mr. A. M. Fulton for the prosecution. After some consideration it was decided to withdraw the case.—Lindsay Warder.

The Minister of Finance in his budget speech said, in part:

"Taking the ten months of the year which have already elapsed, that is to say, from April 1, 1914, to Jan. 31, 1915, the Dominion's revenue from all sources has totaled, in round figures, $109,500,000. This compares with $135,000,000 for the corresponding period of the last fiscal year, a decline of nearly thirty millions.

"Upon the basis of these figures for the ten months' period and having regard to the present action of the revenue-producing services we estimate that the revenue of the Dominion for the fiscal year ending March 31 next computed upon the present basis of duties would amount to $130,000,000. The figures for the previous year having been $163,000,000, this year's loss of revenue would reach a total of thirty-three millions.

"For the whole of the present year we estimate our current expenditure will be $140,000,000, and our capital and special expenditure $50,000,000. Summarizing the estimated results we have the out-turn of the year, stated concisely, as follows:

Current expenditure ..	$140,000,000
Capital and special (other than war) expenditure	50,000,000
Total	$190,000,000

"Our revenue on the present basis being estimated as I have stated at $130,000,000, we should have to meet for this year a deficit of ten million dollars on current account plus the entire amount of our capital and special expenditure. The special war expenditure during the present fiscal year will probably reach the total amount of the appropriation, namely, $50,000,000.

"Taking all the foregoing into consideration, the increase of Canada's national debt for the year would probably aggregate $110,000,000. In this I am, of course, including our expenditure for war."

Hon. Mr. White went on to cite other items, such as drought area relief, the retirement of treasury bills, and seed grain distributions, which he said forced the Government to calculate upon an expenditure totalling $180,000,000. This sum would have to be borrowed, because the market for the flotation of securities would for some time be very bad. His proposals for meeting the situation were:

"So far as concerns our special war expenditure, which may reach one hundred million dollars, I should be disposed, if we had not such heavy and uncontrollable capital expenditure to meet, to recommend that we should pay at least a part of it from current revenue. But it is obvious upon a consideration of the figures which I have submitted, that we shall not by any reasonable supplemental taxation measures be able to close the gap between revenue and expenditure, much less to pay a portion of the principal of our special war outlay. In the circumstances I have no hesitation in proposing to the House that we shall borrow the full amount required under this heading."

In conclusion the Minister discussed the general economic conditions, actual and prospective. The Dominion, he said, has stood the shock of the dislocation of finance exceedingly well. The interruption of borrowing had caused a slackening in many trades, but others had been quickened by the war. The future would show a gradual improvement which would follow with the success of the Allies. A setback to the arms of the Triple Entente would mean a commercial relapse, but such a thing now seemed beyond the range of apprehension.

Brantford will assume its own insurance for accidents to civic employes under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

WORK AT QUEEN MARY HOSPITAL

Tender of John Revoy for Flooring is Accepted

At the meeting of the Board of Health, held yesterday afternoon, a letter was read from City Engineer engineer was "a nine-inch sewer on Bethune St., north of Smith St. The description of the sewer given by the engineer was "a nine-inch sewer on Bethune St. from Smith St. to a point 66 feet north of the south line of lot 15, plan 127, thence westerly across lot 15, plan 127, to the lane at the north of lost 12, plan 127, thence westerly along the centre of said lane to the man-hole at the intersection of Reid and Stewart Sts." On account of Stewart St. being the boundary from Aberdeen St. nearly to Reid St., it was not considered advisable in the engineer's opinion, to run the sewer around the block.

The letter was referred to the Board of Works.

The chairman read the following tenders for flooring the north half of the ground floor of the Queen Mary Hospital:

J. G. Graham	$184.00
Griffin and McCormick	175.00
A. Woods	171.80
J. E. Marshall	160.00
Thos. Hoolihan	155.00
J. Revoy (except finishing)	110.00

It was decided to accept the tender of John Revoy.

W. Forsyth	$165.00
A. Kingdon	420.00
Duncan Bros.	280.00

It was decided to leave the matter of awarding the work to the chairman and Mayor with power to act.

A letter was read from Charles Crowe asking the Board to look into the matter of providing sewer accommodations to 508 Rubidge Street. The matter was referred to the City Engineer.

The chairman reported that he had given the contract for filling the ice house at Queen Mary Hospital to B. Revoy at $26.00.

It was resolved that the following accounts be paid:

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

A TALE OF TWO MOTHERS

The Real Hardship of War Presses Upon the Ones at Home

"Drawing us together—yes. Thank God for that!" This time the sentiment is what is upholding a lonely Ontario mother. She keeps a city rooming-house. The rent all last summer was $38. It is owned by an aging widow, and its income is her only support. Each time she came down to receive her money her insistence that she would have to raise the rent became greater. She was not grasping, but increased taxes had to be met some way; all the neighboring houses were bringing more. At length the tenant was successful in obtaining a promise that no change would be made if she did a lot of plastering, painting, and papering that the old house badly stood in need of. Her boy did the whole job—a handy chap. He was in the 48th, and actually ran in for a day from Long Branch to do the dining-room and give the finishing touches. The contingent departed. Misfortunes did not come singly to the mother. Two of her roomers left. Then she offered to board the two left. Food is very high, there is not much money in that, but she met the next month's rent all right. Her other rooms stayed vacant. One of her boarders overturned a lamp, set fire to the curtains and bedding, and destroyed the paper and woodwork. The landlady came down. She had resuscitated her plea for higher rental, everybody was pushing her. Shown the damage upstairs, she asked why the tenant could not get her son to fix it up. Then there were explanations. There were tears. At last, "Well, I'll see what I can do." The tenant had been able to give but $25 of her rent.

Next rent day the landlady was on hand promptly, and the tenant's heart was in her mouth throughout most of a long interview. There was considerable reference to the great war, the mother remembers, and at last her landlady rose to go. "Well, do you know what my lawyer has at last advised me?" she asked. "To give you this, and this," while from her satchel she produced two papers, handing them to her tenant. They were receipts in full for $24 for the previous, and for the current, month's rent. "And perhaps, now, you'll be able to pay that for the winter." From the same receptacle presently issued a photograph — a smiling, young, erect form in soldier uniform. "That was my son," explained the old lady, wiping away the tears. "He was in the 90th of Winnipeg, and went through the Reil rebellion. Then he took typhoid a year later—oh!"

"Rent my room, ma, that will give you five dollars extra a week and you'll be as well off as ever." Such was the "last word" given by one of the chaps now at Salisbury Camp. His mother had been "fraying along" for some time before that, but although her son was out of work she had kept to herself the serious straits in reality she was in. "And be good to Emmy—ask her up to tea often—and give her any of my little things you think she would like." That is how a widow finds herself most uncomfortably situated because of the war. Along in June, the son seemed assured of a new position he had just obtained after a disappointing experience in Winnipeg, and she had whole-heartedly agreed with her boy's eager determination to become engaged. "Emmy" was frequently a most welcome addition to the small family table. Then the bugles sounded, her son was laid off, and forthwith took up the drilling.

Between the young lady's visits there are unpleasant, but very actual ponderings about auction sales and pawn-shops. How long she will be able to pull along, the widow does not know. At present, upon most of the evenings when she is alone, she takes her fancy work that she sells at a Yonge street store, up to her lad's room. So far she has kept it her sanctuary. His things are on the dresser, the mantel, the table, just as he left them. It is a front room, the best in the house. "Rent my room, ma," often re-echoes in the widow's ears, but she keeps on with her stitching. Her future, like her boy, is "on the way."

Distributing Empty Sacks.

Acting in concert with the British Board of Trade, the London authorities have begun the delivery of empty sacks in which Canada's gift of flour reached Britain. Before being sent out they are marked "N.R.F." and "B.R.F.," indicating that they were sold for the benefit of the National and Belgian Relief Funds, which are priced at five shillings, each being placed for various uses. For instance, the Birmingham Art Emporium has bought a quantity of them and is having them designed with the Union Jack and French, Belgian, Russian and Servian flags, and embroidered in appropriate colors. A laurel wreath will encircle the words, "Canada's Gift, 1914," so that when completed the sacks will form an effective cushion-cover or mat.

Line Carrying Rockets.

The first line carrying rockets were invented in 1820 by an Englishman named Trengrouse and were soon after adopted by the Massachusetts Humane society for use at its stations, where they proved very successful, though today brass cannons are exclusively used for throwing lines to wrecks.

Canadian Musk Ox.

Many musk ox robes are in use in the province of Ontario for cold weather driving. They are rare and too costly to be common. No more luxurious robe can be had than the musk ox. Its long, woolly fur, some of it measuring fourteen inches long, defies the severest cold.

Where Procedure Is Slow.

"What's your excuse for speeding?" asked the judge.

"Oh, we live in rapid times, your honor," answered the motorist flippantly. "Everything has to speed up a bit these days."

"Not at all," said the judge. "And you will observe the contrary if you will sit down and spend the day in this courtroom. Ten dollars."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

SENIOR CHURCH LEAGUE HONORS FOR ST. LUKE'S

Won Championship by Defeating Methodists in Overtime Game

St. Luke's are champions of the Senior Church League. Playing the same brand of hockey that they have shown all year they stepped on the ice in the final match last night against George Street and in ten minutes overtime secured a hard earned 2-0 victory. It was a grand climax to a great season. The East City boys have won all five games without a defeat, in fact but two goals have been counted against them, one in the game with Murray Street and the other in their conflict with St. Paul's. Manager "Sid" Gibbs has good reason to feel proud of his septette for it is doubtful if seven players ever lined up together who had more of the "get together spirit."

George Street presented a very strong aggregation for the crucial game and to the delight of the large number of fans and fanettes they gave the Anglicans a merry old battle for the honors. The heavy ice made the going rather hard and team play was absent. In the first half the Methodists pressed strenuously but thanks to the work of the St. Luke's defence, particularly their goaler, George Butcher, no score was counted. In the second half it was St. Luke's who forced the play and Alec Darling was given ample opportunity to show his ability. He went through a most trying ordeal without a miscue.

When the teams returned for the overtime St. Luke's immediately commenced trying long shots and therein lies the secret of victory. The ice was so heavy that speedy rushes were impossible but the long shots kept the puck in George Street's territory. In the first five minutes of the extra session Alec Butcher slammed in a re-bound and just after the ends were changed he repeated. Full time rang with the St. Luke's forward line pressing hard to make the total three.

George Butcher, who has played stellar hockey for the champions all season was at his best last night and put up a grand exhibition. Hagerman and Regan on the defence were likewise strong while the forward line, composed of Alec. Butcher, Carter, Stewart and Phillips played great hockey. The aggressiveness of the four had the George Street seven playing on the defensive all the latter part of the game.

Darling, in the nets for the Methodists, put up a fine game. Wade and Lowes were on the defence and the latter was about the most prominent man on the ice. He has the size and speed and displayed good head work. Palmer at rover and Stewart at centre both went strong while the wings, Norm Darling and Wilfred Tully were also very conspicuous.

"Ack" Hunter handled the bell and considering the heavy ice and close game, he performed his duties to a nicety. The teams:—

St. Lukes.		George St.
G. Butcher	goal	A. Darling
Hagerman	r. def.	Wade
Regan	l. def.	Lowes
Carter	rover	Palmer
A. Butcher	centre	Stewart
Stewart	r. wing	N. Darling
Phillips	l. wing	Tully

St. John's Won.

In the second game St. John's added another victory to their list when they took St. Andrews into camp by the score of 4-1. For the first half the teams battled up and down the soft surface and neither were able to register but the teams had hardly returned after the intermission when the Anglican forwards broke away fast and netted two. McWilliams of St. Andrews tore through for a long individual rush and score making the total figures 2-1. For a few moments the teams battled strenuously and the result was not certain till Lebar, the defence man of the St. John's seven, relieved with a burst of speed up the boards, beating McDonald with a shot from the side. Just before the final gong St. John's scored No. 4.

For the winners, Morphet, Lebar and A. Heart were prominent while Doughty, McWilliams, Lees and Swanson were most effective for St. Andrews. The teams:—

St. Johns.		St. Andrews.
Clarke	goal	McDonald
Lebar	r. def.	Swanson
M. Pammett	l. def.	McWilliams
Morphet	rover	Doughty

Junior League Game.

Last night the fastest game in the Junior Church League so far this season was played from 7 to 8 o'clock, when Knox shut out Charlotte St. 4-0. Penalties were few and the play was always fast. At half time the score was 4-0 but neither team scored in the last half. All Knox team worked hard out the work of Doughty, Bartley and Clark being especially noticeable, the latter being the best shot on the team. For Charlotte St., Williamson, Soden and Cherrett starred. Cherrett was the fastest on the ice. Mr. Vincent Eastwood, Jr., refereed. The teams:—

Knox.		Charlotte St.
Daynard	goal	Austin
Cunningham	r. def.	Williamson
Montgomery	l. def.	English
Doughty	rover	Soden
Wright	centre	Cherrett
Clark	l. wing	Thompson
Bartley	r. wing	Lyle

COMMENT

As You Like it

"ACK" HUNTER thinks there will be nothing to it in the Senior O.H.A. finals but the Victorias. The dopesters in Toronto think differently. They are of the opinion that St. Michaels are slated to come across with a win. One very important feature of this year's finals is that it will be the last appearance of some of the "grand old men" of the grand old game. Jimmie Dissette, Frank Rankin and "Jerry" Laflamme all have announced that they are through this season, win or lose. A victory would be a grand climax to their wonderful careers.

THE OFFICERS of the Senior Church League are to be heartily congratulated on the successful season their organization brought to a close last evening. When the idea of re-organizing the league came up a few months ago the prospects were none too bright but by careful executive work the league has been a success in every way. The attendance was hardly up to what it should have been but the league was practically in its infancy. Another year and it will go stronger than ever.

BRUCE REGAN, the popular member of St. Luke's rear guard is silently setting up a record for himself in the hockey world. In 1912-13 he was a member of the Tool Room team, champions of the Mercantile League; last year he assisted the Boston exploits in winning the Junior City League and last night he figured prominently in the successful efforts of St. Lukes to win the championship of the Senior Church League. Regan was eligible for Junior O.H.A. this season.

ST. ANDREW'S COLLEGE TEAM WILL ENTER THIRD ROUND

Outclassed Oshawa Juniors Last Night — Collingwood Won From Midland

Toronto, Feb. 12.—By their 11 to 2 defeat of the Oshawa juniors at the Arena last night, St. Andrew's College go into the third round, and will meet University of Toronto at the Arena on Saturday afternoon. The Saints beat Oshawa in the latter town by 10 to 8, and thus have a lead on the round of eleven goals.

There was never a chance for the Oshawans. St. Andrew's had them beaten from end to end, the score by periods being 3 to 0, 3 to 1 and 5 to 1. The college lads had both weight and speed on the visiting team, and, in addition to that, they played a superior brand of the game. Oshawa used little team play, and when they did attempt it their efforts were no more effective than the individual style, because the students backchecked them to a standstill.

Collingwood 2, Midland 0.

Collingwood, Feb. 12.—In the first of home and home games in the second round of junior O.H.A. series the locals won by a narrow margin of two goals, defeating Midland by a score of 2 to 0. The ice was very heavy and watery, and fast play was impossible. The score about indicates the play.

The locals scored first goal in the first period, playing six to the visitors' seven. Their second counter was made in the second period.

BRICKLEY SOUGHT AS COACH.

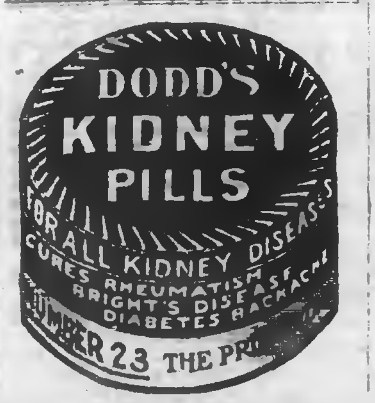
Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 12.—Charles Brickley, Harvard's famous football player, has decided to enter business in Boston rather than New York on his graduation. Despite reports Brickley will take up football coaching next fall, and is entertaining several offers which will not interfere with his business affairs.

Brickley has changed his decision to forsake baseball, and will try for an outfield position when the Harvard squad comes out next month.

"BUCK" FREEMAN, the former Canadian League umpire, now signed by the International League, will have the best wishes of many Peterborough admirers. He was about the pick of the men working in the Canuck League last season.

ALEC. BUTCHER, the centre man for the Eastside Champions, is without doubt about the niftiest mid-ice performer we have lamped in quite a while. His work around the nets last night accounted for the two goals.

CONGRATULATIONS to St. Lukes. They played excellent hockey all season.



BOWLING

In the Y.M.C.A. Bowling League last night the Engineers took two games out of three from the Shop, before a full gallery of ladies, who cheered lustily for their favorites at every opportunity. Manager Bishop, of the Engineers, brought up some of his reserve artillery, who came through with a 209 score at a critical time, and turned the tide in their favor. Following are the scores:—

National Council, at the Oriental Hotel last evening, at which time Mr. Hopper presented the general work of the National Committee in Canada and also the special work being done under the auspices of the Council for soldiers through the Dominion and over the seas. It is thought Peterborough should have a special interest in this welfare work for soldiers in view of the large number of young men who have enlisted from our city.

A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Gray, 489 Aylmer St. last night when about 40 friends gathered to celebrate the 15th birthday anniversary of their daughter Dorothy. The evening was spent in games and music after which refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all present.

Two very interesting papers were read at the meeting on Thursday of the Morning Musical Society. In the first, Mrs. Allan, the president, continued "The History of Music."

The second by Mrs. Meserve traced the development of music in Italy, and served as an introduction to the study of the "Italian School."

The papers were followed by piano and vocal numbers from Donizetti and Mascagni.

The At Home held last evening in St. Alphonsus Lyceum under the auspices of the Total Abstinence Society of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, was one of the most successful functions ever held in the Lyceum. Last Meeting.

The last meeting of the series will be held tonight in the Gospel Hall. Mr. Irving will speak on the Message of Christ to the Church of the Laodiceans. One thing that this lecturer has impressed on his hearers is this, that the coming of the Lord for His redeemed people draweth nigh. The signals are all hung out that the sure word of prophecy says would be out, to warn the people that that day was approaching.

Proud of Major Medd.

The 8th Mounted Rifles under Major Medd are expected to leave Peterborough for Ottawa this week. Major Medd is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Medd, Millbrook, and is a born soldier. He had an excellent legal practice in Peterborough, but when his country's call came to him he was ready for it, and he is deserving of much credit for the way he has worked in getting recruits. We wish him and his company every success. We are proud of such gallant men. —Millbrook Mirror.

Good Singing.

When Mr. Mulligan announced the first hymn, which was sung by the choir of the Congregational Church, Zion Church was crowded, and the great audience in a spirited, whole-souled maner rose to the occasion. A special feature of the song service was a duet by Mr. Mulligan and Mr. Greenlaw. When two great voices blend, as did those two last night, it is indeed a pleasure. Dr. Gordon answered the questions as he only can, and the audience were repaid for coming early. — Brantford Courier.

THEATRICAL

"School Days" was presented at the Grand Opera House last night before a large and highly satisfied crowd. The play was one long laugh from start to finish and was thoroughly enjoyed by the entire audience.

The production was worthy of the name "comedy," and the cast, without an exception, was perhaps the most comical genius seen here in a long time. He kept the audience in splendid humour and was the signal for more than one long, loud outburst of applause by his comical actions and witty speeches. The chorus was made up of a number of pretty girls with splendid voices, added to which were several very fine dancers. Without exception the girls were very small and in their short dresses made fine school-girls.

About 30 of the girl employes of the Barber-Ellis Co. at Brantford are on strike as a protest against having their names stamped on the bottom of envelope boxes.

HOPELESS STRUGGLE IN CENTRAL POLAND GIVEN UP

Every Sign of a Withdrawal of Battered German Forces From the Bzura Rawka Lines is Evident in Poland and Carpathians and East Prussia Will be Scenes of Critical Struggles

PETROGRAD, Feb. 12.—It is now clear that the German onslaught at Bolimow was a demonstration intended to divert the attention of the Russians from the redisposition of the Kaiser's forces in Poland. It was the prelude to the final abandonment of their hopeless watch on the Bzura and the Rawka. For some time mysterious movements were noted among the German armies on the upper Rawka and the Pilitza. The gradual withdrawal of hospitals and store depots and the steady shifting of regiments indicate the trend of a new movement.

Some troops, it appears, were sent to Bolimow to aid in the big demonstration, but the greater number had been sent to Austria. The fresh advance of the Russians over the Carpathians and the danger of their forward movement westward and northward in the lower Vistula basin, and further, the threatening attitude of Roumania had aroused the Germans to an energetic counter activity. Pressure on the Bzura and the Rawka and the holding out of a continual menace towards Warsaw was lately important for the Germans, but now that the main Russian offensive has taken another direction, it becomes less important to maintain the pressure on Warsaw.

The chief task of the Germans for the moment, is to resist the Russian offensive in the Carpathians. The main object will now be to hold back as long as possible all attempts at a Russian advance.

The Polish front is very important, but all signs indicate that for the moment it will be of secondary significance and that the Carpathians will be the scene of the next grand phase of the conflict. The German attack in force at Bolimow was intended to prevent the transfer of Russian forces from mid-Poland to the Carpathians, and the energetic Russian resistance had a similar object with respect to the Germans.

Interesting news has come from Lodz, where a large number of troops drawn from various parts of the front are being sent in the direction of Thorn. The inhabitants of Lodz were forbidden to stand on the streets while the troops were passing, or to watch the movements of troops from the windows. The importation of provisions from Germany has almost ceased. Civilians are not permitted to use the trams. All the stores of wool have been removed from the Lodz factories to Germany.

The conduct of the Germans suggests that they are nervous and excited. It is reported that they intend shortly to evacuate Lodz.

The subborn and successful Russian advance on the German left in the Vistula bend near the debouchment of the Bzura, the increased Russian advance on the German left in the Vistula bend near the debouchment of the Bzura, the increased Russian activity in the Mlawa region, the intermittence of the Austro-German artillery demonstration on the Pilitza and Nida, covering the withdrawal troops, all point to the speedy breakdown of the enemy's effort in Poland.

It is impossible to say yet whether the next big battle will take place in this district or in East Prussia, as Grand Duke Nicholas, with whom the initiative remains, has not disclosed his intentions. He may either strike between Tilsit and Insterburg, in East Prussia, or threaten to cut Von Hindenburg's communications with Thorn by a movement along the Lower Vistula.

While the Austro-German force in the eastern part of the range seems to have been strong enough to compel the Russians to retire in Bukowina, the Russians appear, after the fierce battles of Sunday last, to have almost complete command of the middle and western portions of the mountains.

OPENING ADDRESSES BY REV. J. L. LONG

The annual Bible and missionary convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance opened last night in Bethany Tabernacle with a Bible address by Rev. L. J. Long, Dist. Supt. of Toronto. He spoke on the subject "The Supremacy of Love," choosing as his text 1. Cor. 13:13 (R. V.), "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three, but the greatest of these is love."

This afternoon at three o'clock Mr. Long spoke on "The Things Concerning the Last Times, Foretold in the Prophecy of Daniel." He will speak tomorrow afternoon on "The Signs of Modern Times which Point to Christ's Coming."

Rev. A. E. Thompson, of Jerusalem, Palestine, left Boston last night, and is expected to arrive in Peterborough this afternoon via the C.P.R. He will deliver his first address in the Tabernacle tonight at 8 o'clock. Mr. Thompson has just returned from the war zone, and will have many interesting things to tell.

That Explained It.

"I say, I have just come from my landlord's, and—would you believe it? —I had the greatest difficulty in the world to get him to accept a little money from me."

"Nonsense! And why, pray?"

"Well, because he wanted a lot!"—Liverpool Mercury.

Russian Tipple.

A popular drink among the peasants of Russia is called quass. It is made by pouring warm water over rye or barley meal. It is a fermented liquor and is very sour, but has been used for years by these poverty stricken people. —Liverpool Mercury.

The man who does things may make mistakes, but he never makes the greatest mistake of all—doing nothing.

MUST FACE TRIAL JURY

McCutcheon Brothers and M. A. Cook Are Committed

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—Gordon D. McCutcheon, D. M. McCutcheon, J. H. and C. M. McCutcheon and Marshall A. Cook were sent for trial by a jury by Magistrate Denison yesterday afternoon on a charge of conspiring to defraud Dr. H. M. Weaver and others out of certain sums of money.

After the evidence had all been submitted and when A. J. Russell Snow, K.C., commenced an argument on behalf of the defendants, Magistrate Denison said: "There is sufficient evidence brought here to show that there has been a widespread fraud all over the place. People have appeared before me and sworn that they have received nothing for their money. It is most extraordinary the way this thing has been done."

American Students On Way Home.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Feb. 12.—American students and schoolchildren who remained in German universities and schools, at the wish of their parents, despite the war, now are being recalled. A number of scholars from Munich and Dresden passed through Geneva Wednesday night.

New Trial Is Started.

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—Robt. Brown was freed from the charge of murder yesterday under conditions that a new trial on the grounds of shooting with intent to kill be commenced.

The jury rendered a verdict of "not guilty" from the explanations of Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, presiding in the assize criminal court, in which he set forth that from medical evidence it had not been proven that Mrs. Brown, wife of accused, whom Brown had shot, had died from the result of the wound inflicted.

The new trial commenced yesterday afternoon, and will be continued to-day.

Dacia Has Sailed.

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 12.—Off on a voyage that may prove her last and one that may involve the United States in serious international complications, the American steamer Dacia sailed from this port yesterday morning. When the Dacia sailed the Stars and Stripes were flying both forward and aft. The Dacia sailed with an American crew with the exception of seven men. Four of these are Hollanders and the other three Swedes. The Dacia is bound for Rotterdam, but her cargo of 11,000 bales of cotton will be delivered at Bremen, Germany.

TROUBLE WITHIN THE RANKS OF HOME GUARD

Parade Called at Toronto Failed to Materialize

TORONTO, Fbe. 12. — The home guard meeting, looked forward to by most of the rank and file as a means of solution of the deadlock reached last Thursday night, proved a fiasco last night. Hundreds of members around the entrance to the armouries on Wellington street before the hour mentioned for parade, and awaited the usual opening of the doors.

The hour arrived, and the crowd of men thronged the doors, but no one was allowed to cross the threshold, in spite of the orders calling the parade. Even the press was denied admittance, on the express orders of the commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Stewart.

Men Grow Truculent.

After being called for their usual parade, and being denied admission to their armouries, the men showed a most truculent spirit. They scored roundly Colonel Stewart's order of exclusion, and called the proceedings "a high-handed measure." Such expressions as "We are being treated like dogs," "Why are we shut out from the armouries?" "Why does Col. Stewart shut us out like a flock of sheep?" and "We were never treated like slaves before," showed the temper of the men, which looked at some moments like running amuck.

When the riot was at its height Sergt. Major Vallis came out and called the men to fall in. Out of some 700 only 32 obeyed the order, the balance hurling anathemas at Sergt. Major Vallis and Col. Stewart. Not a man of the 600 moved to enter the ranks on order.

The temper of the crowd showing a dangerous edge, an order from Col. Stewart sent a company of the overseas men of the 109th downstairs, and these drew up outside the doors, keeping back the wild crowd, who were shouting for Major Gillis and fair play.

When the crowd looked at its ugliest mood and threatened the few men drawn up in front of the door, a diversion took place, a captain of one of the companies trying to form a new organization. This was only temporary, however, and wave after wave of incensed home guards broke against the 109th guard, crying for Major Gillis or some other member who would explain why they were shut out.

Whatever went on upstairs, the men maintained their wild demeanour, and loud cries for an explanation of their exclusion for the first time from their armouries rent the air.

Col. Stewart Ignored.

When the crowd had melted away in disgust, Col. Stewart came down and passed through the ranks of those that remained without recognition.

Only the presence of the armed guard of the 109th regiment prevented an ugly outbreak on the part of the incensed home guards.

BETTER CLASS OF TURKS AGAINST WAR MOVEMENT

Rev. E. A. Thompson Tells of the Situation in Palestine --- Witnessed Mobilization of Turkish Army ---Eyes Were Set on Egypt

How he was compelled to make his exit from Jerusalem, following a Turkish decree and other instances concerning the military situation of Palestine when he left and a variety of facts concerning the country was interestingly told today by Rev. E. A. Thompson during an interview at the home of Rev. Mr. Johnson, pastor of Bethany Tabernacle, at whose residence he is a guest.

Rev. Mr. Thompson outlined the military situation particularly, as first hand knowledge permitted him to be more or less intimate with it. He witnessed the mobilization of the Turkish army in Palestine which set in just as soon as the other nations declared war. She called every man to take up arms, under the age of forty, and those over forty were excused unless they had military training. They seized horses, donkeys, and even mules, in fact every sort of transportation available. Even horses belonging to the American mission were not immune to summary seizure. In addition the Turks requisitioned thousands of kerosene cans and receptacles, for use in constructing pontoon bridges across the Suez Canal should they attempt to attack the British in Egypt. Recruiting was systematically undertaken immediately upon the declaration of hostilities twixt Austria and Servia.

Wanted Peaceable Settlement.

In regard to the feeling which prevailed in Palestine, Rev. Mr. Thompson said he knew that the Mohammedans have sent deputations to Lord Kitchener, earnestly requesting him to come over and settle their difficulties. One of the most remarkable things in connection with the trouble was the strong revulsion of feeling which came over the people towards the missionaries. Previously Mr. Thompson was able to travel the length and breadth of the land and be well received, but later only the beaten and principal trails were safe for travelling. The quick transition of feeling was almost inconceivable following the declaration of war. This feeling Mr. Thompson said seemed directed at the British most and their antipathy to all things British was intense. "But,' said Mr. Thompson, "there was a feeling among the more intelligent Turks that the mov[illegible] was folly and unwise." The[illegible] many Germans in Jerusalem a[illegible] Palestine who commenced to get extremely nervous, feeling that if the Turks sustained a crushing defeat, they would be in grave danger.

Turks Wanted Egypt.

Mr. Thompson pointed out that the Turks had their eyes fastened upon Egypt as an objective place to invade and the reconquest of that country. But the possibility of such an undertaking being successful was in his opinion absolutely unfeasible. New Zealanders, Australians, Lancaster territorial regiments, the Egyptians soldiers and 40,000 Ghurkas were ready to forestall and repel any such an attempt and the Suez Canal was protected by a perfect net work of entrenchments and defences. While in Cairo Mr. Thompson received strong and authorative assurance that there was no danger of internal troubles in Egypt. The peasantry there were industrious, contented and growing rich through intelligent cultivation of the fertile soil and enjoyed the prosperity and peace which British occupancy had brought about. The financial situation however in both Egypt and Palestine was bad, especially in the latter country and it was with great difficulty that Mr. Thompson was able to secure adequate funds. A banking system of paper currency was resorted to and helped to keep things going. In Palestine the situation was really acute and the internal resources of the country were very inadequate to cope with the situation

Had Exciting Experiences.

Coming down to some of his personal experiences,' Mr. Thompson who is superintendent of the Alliance work at the American mission said he left Jerusalem on Dec. 26th subsequent to a Turkish decree expelling all foreign missionaries save the Americans. Some of the Britishers had been imprisoned but on stating that he was American he escaped molestation. But he left finally because the clergy of all nations were ordered out. "Had I remained," said Mr. Thompson, "I would most assuredly have been regarded as a spy and—well there is no telling what would have happened to me."

Rev. A. Jorder, an independent English missionary was thrown into prison because of letters of [illegible] character found upon him in which he spoke of "an averted massacre".

During all the time he was in Jerusalem however Mr. Thompson saw no disorder, the Turkish commander and the Governor ruling with a firm hand and keeping the people subservient at all times. The city was also placed under martial law. This governor showed great ability and a kindly spirit which did much to keep order and peace and reassure the foreigners. The French and Russian missionary clergy were sent to Damascus but the American consul, a fine, kindly spirited man, succeeded in keeping the British and Americans in Jerusalem.

"The only indignity that we experienced however during all the troublous time occurred when getting away from the country when we were on the wharf."

Wickedest City in the East.

Rev. Mr. Thompson referred to Cairo as one of the wickedest cities in the Orient and said that it was terrible even to mention some of the things that were carried on there. Without the hand of God directing and sustaining one it was almost impossible to withstand the temptations and allurements the city offered.

Mr. Thompson will be in the city till Monday.

LOCATION OF THE DISPOSAL PLANT

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—By last night's papers we notice that the Provincial Board of Health has NOT authorized the construction of the sewage disposal plant across the river from the street railway wharf, notwithstanding the chairman of the board of works' bombastic announcement to the contrary on his return from Toronto the other day. The city paid the expenses of this deputation, and the ratepayers are surely entitled to a truthful report of the result. Instead of this, it would appear from the published reports that we have been handed a bundle of falsehoods and frothy vaporings. It would also appear that their diplomacy is about on a par with their veracity. The first salute fired at the chief owner of this property in Toronto by the deputation was: "What do you want for your old swamp?" The stenographers and clerical staff in this twentieth century office haven't recovered yet. We were under the impression that Peterborough had shed its whiskers and moss half a century ago.

Yours truly,
"RATEPAYER."

Peterborough, Feb. 13, 1915.

There does not appear to be any reason why the statements of the board of works chairman should be doubted. He expressed himself as quite satisfied with the result of the interview with Dr. McCullough. What reason should he have for making statements which were not in accord with those made by the members of the Provincial Board of Health? Probably the city's position will be made more clear when the report on the interview is made to Council. It has been stated that the Council and the board are working hand in hand with an undertaking that was forced upon the city by the Provincial Board of Health, which is supposed to be supreme in such matters. True, the board has not given a final decision as to the site for the disposal plant. Yet it is difficult to understand why the board should seek to mislead the council.—Ed.

Prosecutor for Murder Charge

Crown Attorney Hatton received word today that Solicitor Gordon N. Shaver, of the law firm of Cochrane & Shaver, Toronto, will conduct the prosecution of Edgar Grose, charged with the murder of William O'Brien on December 24th last, at the jury sitting of the Spring Assizes before Sir William Mulock on Tuesday, February 23rd.

The charge against Grose is that of murder, though it is improbable that the Grand Jury will bring in a true bill, but rather change the charge to manslaughter.

CALLS FOR DESTRUCTION OF BRITISH PASSENGERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 13. — A Daily Express despatch from Amsterdam says the German press, realizing Germany's submarine blockade may not bring about Great Britain's doom, is calling for a more savage policy. One paper calls for the destruction of British passengers, saying: "Persons acquainted with psychology of England know that the German blockade will be effective only if it costs the lives of many British women and men."

MARKETS CLOSED TO GERMANY, FOREVER

PARIS, Feb. 13. — The Russian minister of finance, in an interview, says that one purpose of the meeting of the British, French and Russian finance ministers was to arrange that the Germans, having demolished factories in Poland, Belgium and Northern France, need not think they will compel the Allies, after the war, to buy from her.

"Let her be quite sure," he says, "our markets are closed to her forever."

TWO ATTACKS AT NIGHT REPULSED

PARIS, Feb. 13. — Today's official statement says: "During the night of February 11-12 there were two German attacks on our trenches in the forest of Caures, to the north of Verdun, which were repulsed. Fighting elsewhere was confined to artillery."

SEE-SAW BATTLES IN CARPATHIANS

LONDON, Feb. 13. — Battling in the Carpathians is going on, but information from this field of activities is most scant, and indications reaching London are that it is still a see-saw affair, with both sides sustaining enormous losses.

Further to the south, the Austrians contend they are continuing their advance into Bukowina.

Military experts in London are of the opinion that the Carpathian front still remains an area of prime importance in the east, where a decisive victory by either side would force an abandonment by the other of territory in East Prussia or Poland.

SUBMARINE U 2 BELIEVED GONE

LONDON, Feb. 13. — The Daily Telegraph's Amsterdam correspondent says the German submarine U-2, which attacked the British steamer Laertes, is believed to be at the bottom of the North Sea. She gave up pursuit of the Laertes when she was gaining, and was last seen in a cloud of steam, and apparently in difficulties.

WAR BEGINS NEXT MARCH

France Expects 100,000 Killed and 500,000 Wounded

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The Evening Sun has received the following letter bearing on the great offensive movement to be undertaken by the allied armies in Europe in the spring.

The interview with Gen. Foch, printed Feb. 11 states that the armies of Europe are to meet in the spring when each will be on the offensive. I can confirm this extremely important statement by the French mail which came in yesterday. I received a letter from an officer of the 54th artillery now stationed at Lyons. He says:

"I know authoritatively that we are going to take the offensive in March; and also that our chief counts upon 100,000 dead and 500,000 wounded.

"Each of the allies, I am told, is making similar preparations, and it is probable that this will be a battle such as the world has never seen. This time we shall lack neither ammunition nor guns; everything is ready."

Cargo Ship Torpedoed.

SCARBOROUGH, Eng., Feb. 13.—The new cargo steamer Torquay of Dartmouth was towed into Scarborough harbor last night in a sinking condition, after either striking a mine or having been torpedoed eight miles east of this port. The damage sustained by the steamer was amidships, one boiled having been penetrated. One man was killed and two were injured.

REV. R. G. PEEVER APPRECIATED

At a joint meeting of the trustee and quarterly board of the George St. Methodist Church on Wednesday night, the following resolution was unanimously passed by a standing vote, all the members of the board expressing themselves very strongly in favor of the same.

Moved by D. W. Dumble, seconded by A. W. Cressman, the quarterly Board of the George Street Methodist Church, Peterborough, at its February meeting deem it but just that they should give expression to their feeling of satisfaction at the condition of their church. They find the regular Sunday services well attended, the finances very satisfactory, the Prayer Meetings more than usually well attended, the Sunday School crowded to its capacity, and harmony and peace in all departments and societies in the church.

They feel that much of this prosperity is due to the faithful labors of the pastor, the Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D. and they hereby offer to him their congratulations and thanks with the hope that he may be permitted to serve this church for the full term permitted by the law of the church.

$1800 SPENT ON SNOW REMOVAL

The work of removing the snow from the streets of the city cost approximately $1800, according to figures procured from the city engineer's department and the relief fund office. The books of the engineer's department show a cost running between $1500 and $1600, while the local relief fund went down to the extent of $228.54, which makes an outside figure of slightly over $1800.

G. T. R. is Guarded.

MONTREAL, Feb. 13.—President Chamberlin of the G. T. R. said yesterday that the company's property at Portland, Maine, was being guarded, but would not say as to the possible existence of a general plot of destruction as reported.

"It is true that extra precautions to guard the company's property are being taken at Portland, Maine. Owing to conditions that are general knowledge, the G. T. R., in common with all other large corporations, thought it advisable to adopt precautionary measures, but no alarm need be felt by the traveling public."

FIRE HALL INSPECTED

Over $10,000 Pared from the Estimates

NO EXTRA FIREMEN

The fire, water and light committee, composed of Ald. Duffus, chairman, and Ald. Green, Weir and Evans, met at the fire hall yesterday afternoon for the annual inspection of the department. The committee went over the building, apparatus, and horses, and all expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the manner in which Chief Howard is performing his duties, and they were delighted with the clean and neat appearance of the building in general. After the inspection, the members repaired to the Chief's offic, and the estimates as drawn up by the Chief were gone over thoroughly. The pruning hook played a very prominent part, as can be seen by the fact that some $11,000 was knocked off the total figures. The appropriation now to be asked for will be in the neighborhood of $20,676.11. Last year it was $17,200.

The matter of purchasing a chemical engine was left over for another year, while the purchasing of land for a sub-station will be given attention at the end of the year. In the meantime, options on land will be secured and a bylaw for the purchase of it may be submitted to the people next January.

Ald. Duffus was of the opinion that it was quite in accordance with the usual custom to add to the staff as the city grows, but on account of the present unusual condition the Chief will be asked to get along with the number of men he now has.

One item of the estimates will be for the purchasing of three new horses, provided the right animals can be found. The committee were unanimous in the opinion that some of the horses connected with the fire department have been there a little too long.

The meeting was called at four o'clock and lasted till eight o'clock. At the close, the committee were the guests of the chairman, Ald. Duffus, at supper at the Oriental.

During the meeting an alarm was rung in, and the firemen turned out in record time.

WINES INCREASE AMOUNT OF TAX

P. J. Kenny, proprietor of Kenny's liquor store, stated today that the war tax would have a far greater effect on wines than on champagne. The general use of wines causes the demand to be quite large while the call for champagne is diminishing. The sale of champagae is almost limited to hospitals. The increase in price is just the amount of the war tax.

Mr. Kenny is busily engaged placing the stamps on his stock but intimated that he expected that wines and champagne purchased from the wholesaler from now on will be stamped with the war stamps.

AUDACIOUS IS READY TO REJOIN THE FLEET

Advices Reaching New York Say Battleship Has Been Repaired—British Admiralty Silent

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Feb. 13. — The New York Herald received advices yesterday that the British battleship Audacious which struck a mine or was torpedoed by a submarine, October twenty-seventh off the North coast of Ireland, has been repaired and will rejoin the fleet Monday.

The British admiralty still pursues the policy of absolute silence regarding this vessel and the public will know nothing of her officially until the close of the war or if it happens she is mentioned in a general action When the disaster happened to the Audacious a tremendous quantity of water rushed in despite prompt appliance of sandbags within the collision mat outside, and the effective work of the collision bulkheads and she was consequently so low in the water her hull in fact being entirely surmerged that photographs taken at the time showed her to be in a sinking condition. Nevertheless she was towed in to Belfast fifty miles away. A few hours after the White Star liner Olympic which had stood by her, reached that port.

Since then a small army of men have been working day and night with the result that the immense damage to the great ship's hull and machinery has been completely repaired.

RENEWED DASH TO KEEP KAISER IN GOOD STANDING

HE WOULD TAKE WARSAW

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 13. — Emperor William received Field Marshal Von Hindenburg on the eastern battle front on Friday, and it was decided to make a renewed dash for Warsaw next week, according to a despatch from Amsterdam. The German Emperor, the message adds, is said to be anxious that the Polish capital be taken before the next meeting of the Reichstag in order to induce the House to vote a new war loan without opposition.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1915

THE BUDGET SPEECH

THE BUDGET SPEECH of the Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, which appeared in yesterday's Review, was one of the most important in the annals of Canadian politics. The plan to finance Canada's war bills on borrowed money is good, so long as borrowing is possible for, if the war debt had to be met out of current revenue, taxation would have to be greatly increased, expenditure for public works would have to be almost completely wiped out, and, even then, with a rapidly-falling income, it is doubtful whether the Government could push its war measures vigorously. The duties reach everybody, so that all will have to contribute to the great war.

There will no doubt be efforts made to shift the new taxes, if possible, and some attempt should be made to prevent this shifting. The incidence of the tax on banks may fall on the short-term borrowers by means of an increased interest rate. The stamp duties will likely not be shifted to any great extent. The debate on the bill will, however, bring out points like these, together with their answers.

Another point in the speech that was of more than ordinary significance was the statement regarding Canada's borrowing, which has been in recent years roughly one million dollars a day. Dominion and provincial governments, municipalities, industrial concerns, railways, steamship lines, all trooped over to England for capital, and, the coming of war suddenly putting an end to these borrowings, also guillotined our prosperity. It is now certain that much of Canada's phenomenal prosperity was artificial in that it was due to foreign investments of capital, and not to natural growth within the country. Under the usual conditions, business was bad enough in 1914, but the complete stoppage of borrowing only made a bad state of affairs much worse. Add to this the necessity of raising huge sums to finance the raising of the Canadian expeditionary forces, and the magnitude of the Finance Minister's task is apparent. The manner in which the affairs of Canada have been conducted up to the present moment call for praise. There has been a minimum of friction, and, so long as no serious defeat comes to the Allies, it is reasonable to suppose that Canada will weather the financial storm with comparative ease.

POTASH FOR CANADIAN FARMS.

AMONG THE evil effects resulting from the terrible and disastrous war now raging in Europe is to be counted the cutting off from the markets of the world of the supply of potash from the Stassfurt mines. For many years these mines have been practically the sole source of the potash compounds used for fertilizing purposes, and it is little wonder, therefore, in these days when the employment of fertilizers is ever on the increase, that this stoppage of the supply should have caused consternation.

But on looking more deeply into the matter and considering it especially from the standpoint of the Canadian farmer, we find the case is not so serious nor fraught with such dire consequences as might be imagined from the superficial view expressed by many interested in our agriculture. There is very little cause for real alarm or anxiety, even if the supply from the German mines be not resumed for a year or two. There is no need to anticipate any material falling off in the yields, even of those of the potash-loving crops, for although the quantity of German potash compounds used for fertilizing has been annually increasing for the past few years, the total amount used today in Canada is comparatively small, certainly not more than 8,000 tons per annum. Indeed, this calamity, if such it may be called, will have its useful lessons, drawing attention to our home sources of potash, their use and conservation, to the crops for which potash is more particularly beneficial, and lastly, to those national methods for maintaining soil fertility, which, put into practice, will alone render the farmer largely independent of fertilizers.

The three essentials for soil fertility are potash, nitrogen and phosphoric acid. Clay loams are usually well supplied with potash, so that sandy and gravelly loams and soils rich in vegetable matter are the kinds that usually give a profitable return for the potash invested in them.

The Department of Agriculture for the Dominion, under the direction of Hon. Martin Burrell, has issued a bulletin on the present supply of potash, in view of the exclusion of the German supply. It points out that there is likely a large supply in the hands of importers or manufacturers of fertilizers, but that this supply will likely be procurable only in mixtures, and likely in diminished quantities.

The problem, then, is to utilize the native sources of this element. There are two important sources of supply, manure and wood ashes. The third is from sea-weed. The Department has conducted a number of experiments and found Canadian sea-weeds to have high values of soil elements, particularly nitrogen. Many farmers depend on the air and conditions of nature to work nitrogen into the ground.

Sea-weed quickly decomposes and liberates its constituents readily. It can be employed for all classes of crops, though it will be found most useful for roots, vegetables, and those with an abundance of foliage, since it is essentially a nitrogenous and potassic manure. It has given excelent results as a top dressing for grass lands, encouraging the growth of clover more particularly. Sea-weed gives its best returns on moderately light loams that are warm and moist, and its poorest on wet, ill-drained, heavy clays.

For conserving the supply of potash in manure, the Department recommends a chopped straw bedding, but if any farmers are interested in this subject, a fuller treatment may be had by reference to the pamphlet on the subject, which will be supplied free of charge by writing for it.

A NEWLY-MADE AUTHORITY.

OUR EVENING CONTEMPORARY has recently become an authority on hydraulic and electrical engineering. It was a pity that this authority did not give a pronouncement last summer, BEFORE ice troubles called attention to local power plants and waterworks. Even when ice caused a complete shutdown, there was not a word from this newly-made engineering authority. The chief engineer of the hydro-electric system, Engineer Murphy, of Ottawa, and others will now stand corrected.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MR. H. L. DRAYTON, chairman of the Canadian Railway Commission, who has just announced that the request of the railroads for increased freight rates on lines east of Port Arthur will be dealt with on March 1st, succeeded to his present position on the death of Judge Mabee. Mr. Drayton was born at Kingston, Ont., and educated in Toronto and in England. He was for many years one of the leaders of the Ontario Bar, being Corporation Counsel of the city of Toronto before his appointment to the chairmanship of the Railway Commission, which took place on July 1st, 1912. Mr. Drayton was an exceptionally able lawyer, and brings to his present position a trained legal mind and an impartial judicial manner. Since his appointment he has handled a number of important cases.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Globe points out that the great Stassfurt potash mines in Germany draw their potash from strata of impure salt, and suggests that since the salt mines or wells of Ontario are drilled through several layers of impure salt, these should be explored for deposits of potash. The suggestion appears to be timely, and any expenditure in investigating this possible supply of potash might not only repay the expenditure, but furnish us with a native supply at less than former prices, thus rendering us independent of foreign supplies of this article.

SO THE GERMANS are using phosphorous shells. This latest diabolical device is the natural progeny of the same spirit that began the war, that violated Belgium and the Luxemburg, and declared war on merchant vessels. Note that such natural things are nearly always foredoomed to grief and failure.

THE IMPOSITION of the new war taxes will have the effect of making a lot of people understand what war really means.

A Last Word.

(By Ernest Dowson.)

Let us go hence; the night is now at hand;
The day is overworn, the birds all flown.
And we have reaped the crops the gods have sown;
Despair and death; deep darkness o'er the land
Broods like an owl; we cannot understand
Laughter or tears, for we have only known
Surpassing vanity: vain things alone
Have driven our perverse and aimless band.

Let us go hence, somewhither strange and cold.
To Hollow Lands, where just men and unjust
Find end of labour, where's rest for the old.
Freedom to all from love and fear and lust.
Twine our torn hands? O pray the earth enfold
Our life-sick hearts, and turn them into dust.

Patrolling the North Sea.

(Pall Mall Gazette.)

The raid of German cruisers on the northeast coast of England should bring home to those who think of the North Sea as a rather big lake some idea of its real magnitude. It is not easy to define its northern limits, but the most moderate estimate of its area places it at 140,000 square miles, while a recent careful calculation by a German statistician gives it 548,000 square kilometres, which is equivalent to 2,311,528 square miles. But the ceaseless watch and ward of the British fleet now extends to Iceland, and altogether not less than 400,000 square miles of water have to be patrolled by the scouts of the grand fleet. Big as the fleet is, it is not big enough to prevent a surprise raid at some point of the seven hundred miles of coast on our eastern seaboard.

To insure every square mile of the North Sea itself, from the Shetlands to the mouth of the Thames, being kept under observation, at least six hundred scouting vessels would be needed, for under the most favourable atmospheric conditions, barely three hundred square miles can be swept from the crow's nest of a cruiser; and the German fleet can select its own time and place for its heroic bombardments of undefended towns. And in the Pacific and Indian oceans, where for a brief period German cruisers were at large, the water area for their operations extended to 30,000,000 square miles.

The Nickel Question.

(Stratford Herald.)

The news that the Hearst Government of Ontario will thoroughly investigate the nickel question is assuring. The aim of that government obviously is that the refining process should be applied in Canada instead of in a foreign country. This aim cannot be attained too quickly. The possibility of our nickel having aided to kill our soldiers and allies is hateful to us. Refining in Canada would have the double advantage of assuring control of nickel exports, besides providing additional employment for Canadians.

Make the dollars which come in more numerous than the dollars which go out! How simple, how profound, how satisfactory! RE APOLOGY.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—The apology to Wm. Stock and Sons, signed by A. King, seems uncalled for, seeing Mr. King was working on commission. If it is true that in the summer season Mr. King earned as high as $14.32 and in the fall and winter season, not less than $9.47, or for 33 weeks an average of $11.50, it would appear the commission given by Mr. Stock, was not unreasonable. Mr. King earning small money, the last two months or so, in dull time, is Mr. King's misfortune and not Mr. Stock's fault. The fact of Mr. King mentioning this, to some of his friends and casually to others, can hardly be looked upon as derogatory to Mr. Stock, seeing Mr. King was not on salary. I understand Mr. King was summoned to appear at a certain law office, at a set time, without knowing what was wanted of him; and on going there met Mr. Stock in company with another gentleman. Mr. King was asked to sign this drawn up apology, and being strongly advised by the supposed friend who was in the office with Mr. Stock to sign the paper, Mr. King not taking sufficient time to think what he was doing did so. Mr. King did not keep tab on his weekly earnings, so Mr. Stock in conjunction with the several grocers, who cashed his checks from week to week, are the ones who know, whether Mr. King made an untrue statement, when he stated he earned as low as $8 per week.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for valuable space, etc., I am yours in the interests of truth and justice.

BRITISH NOTE ARRIVING.

It Will Not Be Ready For Consideration For Some Days.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13. — Transmission of the first instalment of Great Britain's supplementary note in answer to the American protest against interference with neutral shipping by the British fleet was completed yesterday, and the State Department's cable experts began deciphering it. About 3,000 code words have been received, and it is understood that twice as much more is to come, and it probably will be two or three days before the communication is ready for consideration by Secretary Bryan.

It is understood that among the new matters introduced is the recent German decree expropriating the grain supply of the Empire.

One of the principal arguments set out in the note is understood to be in support of the British Government's policy in taking suspected ships into port for inspection to determine the nature of their cargoes.

American Ship Flew Greek Flag.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople reported yesterday the sinking of the partly American-owned steamer Washington, flying the Greek flag in the harbor of Trebizond during the recent Russian bombardment of the Turkish port. The Washington was reported last night as an American ship.

Three Years for Rhoades

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—Three years in Kingston penitentiary was the sentence handed out by Magistrate Denison to Charles W. Rhoades, who pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining $825 from W. J. Fursland by fraud and false pretences. Rhoades used fake telegrams and other documents to make his victims believe he was a man of means, when in reality he was worth nothing. A big consideration in the sentence was the fact that he obtained $1,000 from a poor girl, her total savings, and then married her.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

It was not without hesitation that Matt obeyed. He felt a certain chilling of the confidence that had animated him before. The young officer's tone was masterful in spite of the punctiliousness of his words and carried with it a disquieting authority.

The young man led him through various passages and finally brought him to what was evidently the ship's wardroom. Here, seated about the head of the table, were five oldish, grave looking officers in undress uniform. One, white haired, dignified and somewhat bald, wore the insignia of a rear admiral.

"Good day," he said curtly in fair English, motioning Matt to come nearer and dismissing his companion with a wave of the hand. "We would like to talk with you, sir."

"I'm at your service," returned Matt, advancing and drawing himself up very straight, as no offer was made to give him a seat. "May I take the liberty of asking the name of this ship and her nationality?"

The old admiral stared at him frozenly.

"It is I who will ask the questions," he rasped out, "and you will be good enough to answer them. Let me say directly that evasions will be useless and vat we want is the truth." He uttered the last words with a sort of snarl, which was taken up by the others in an angry murmur.

"I am an American citizen," said Matt, with spirit. "I've committed no crime, and I warn you that the consequences will be serious if you interfere with me."

"We are not discussing international law," sneered the admiral. "Might is right, as you say in English. Our patience with you is exhausted. You will tell us vare is a certain individual, or else we make you."

John Mort! So it was he they were after? This ship, these officers, the rendezvous in midocean—all were part and parcel of the same extraordinary business. In spite of his bold front Matt quailed inwardly. Beads of sweat started on his forehead. He felt like a man on the eve of execution.

"I don't know what you mean," he said at last. "An individual? What individual?"

"We're not here to waste time with such breparication," returned the admiral, accentuating every word with a rap of his knuckles on the table—large, misshapen knuckles, swollen with gout. "You know very well who it is we want, though what you do not apprehend is our determination to extort the truth. We are not milksops like those others, who failed so wretchedly in America. We will have the truth if we have to take your skin with it. Vat is your answer to that, Mistaire Broughton?"

"That I am an American citizen," retorted Matt in an unflinching voice. "You are proclaiming yourself a pirate and outside the law of nations. You cannot frighten me, sir. You are a naval officer, and know as well as I do the enormity of such threats, and that it will break you, admiral or not, if you should dare to lay a finger on me."

"That is beside the point," exploded the admiral, reddening furiously. "Come here, and show us that island vare it is."

Matt stood immovable.

"I can't," he declared. "I don't know what you mean. Island? What island?"

His affectation of ignorance exasperated the five officers, and a file of seamen marched in and saluted with the excessive humility peculiar to German ships-of-war. At a guttural command they closed about Matt, and one, a strapping fellow with a scar across his cheek, suddenly caught him round the waist.

To resist was the act of a madman, but Matt's brain was whirling, and his pentup rage burst all bounds. With a wrestler's trick he bent down, carrying his antagonist over his head, and crashing him to the deck like a sack of oats. In an instant he was hitting out with his fists, indiscriminately, crazily, a jaw here, a surly eye there, smash, smash, smash, with blood streaming, blows and yells in return, and a rush that sent him under, burying him in a human avalanche. Had it not been for the officers his life would have been crushed out of him, but they darted into the thick of the melee, restoring order like so many policemen at a street fight.

Suddenly in the midst of the hubbub a hush fell; officers and men might have been struck by lightning, so instantaneous was the change, the silence, the awe expressed on every face. Matt, getting up and following their gaze, perceived an old man, gaunt and very pale, standing in the doorway, regarding the scene with a peculiar fixity. He was in a blue dressing gown and looked ill and broken, as though just risen from a sick bed; but his eyes belied his bodily weakness, gleaming like coals beneath his straggling white brows. Matt had a curious shock of recognition. Where had he seen that benign old face, so hazily familiar, like that of some half forgotten friend of his childhood?

The old man's voice was sharp and tremulously impassioned as he advanced slowly into the ward room and addressed the officers. Reproof, indignation and anger were written on every feature. He moved over to Matt and put one arm protectingly about him.

"Disgraceful," he said in singularly pure English, though with the accent of a foreigner, turning from the cringing officers. "They would have it that I was too ill to be disturbed and have shamed me by their treatment of you. Will you spare me a few minutes' conversation in my cabin? Time is precious, and I feel sure we can come to an agreement more quickly than the gentlemen here anticipate."

Matt acceded willingly, though wondering and mystified. Beyond, at the far end of the passageway and apparently in the extreme stern of the ship, a small group of servants in livery were gathered, who were similarly stricken to statues at the sight of the pair. Walking unsteadily, more from weakness than the movement of the ship, Matt and his venerable companion supported each other, and at length reached what appeared to be the state cabin.

It was the largest Matt had ever seen afloat, taking in the whole beam of the ship, and was furnished with a luxury undreamed of at sea. Beautiful antique furniture, glowing oriental rugs, rich dark hangings of faded crimson, slashed with gold—it was like stepping into a medieval palace or the famed splendors of the Yildiz kiosk.

"You must excuse me if I return to bed," said the old man, whose increasing weariness was becoming painfully apparent. "Sit there and tell me why you are so stubborn in refusing what we ask."

"Put yourself in my place," Matt replied. "Would you betray the best friend you ever had?"

"Betray!" exclaimed the old man. "Ah, that has been at the root of all our troubles, of all our intolerable delays and vexations. You think, then, our intentions are not for the good of this person to whom you are so loyal? You do not know who I am?"

"No."

"Well, I suppose the poor fools must be commended for that. Mr. Broughton, my house has trusted you once, and now the head of it will trust you again, knowing that my confidence will be sacred."

Matt nodded.

At this the old man bent forward and breathed the name of that emperor-king whose dominions embrace a dozen countries and comprise the fifth of Europe. Here, for obvious reasons, it must be omitted, though in that great cabin it was uttered aloud and quavered on the lips of the emperor-king himself.

Matt repeated it with amazement as a hundred pictures of the man before him recurred to his mind—pictures in magazines and newspapers, in geography books and school histories. He rose respectfully and bowed. "Your majesty!" he exclaimed.

"Be seated," commanded the benignant voice. "Yes; I am that personage, who, whatever his faults, deserves the consideration—the compassion of mankind. Now, is it clearer to you who it is I seek?"

"No," returned Matt, with an ill suppressed agitation. "No, your majesty."

"I will tell you," said the emperor-king, hardly less moved, his trembling hands plucking and clutching at the coverlet. "The friend you served with such devotion is—my son!"

CHAPTER XVII.

A Royal Tragedy.

THAT terrible tragedy in which the crown prince was supposed to have taken his life came back to Matt in waves of recollection. He remembered the stir it had made, the shock of horror, the profound mystery in which the affair was shrouded. He remembered the speculations as to what had actually happened in that lonely hunting lodge, some maintaining that the beautiful young baroness had killed herself rather than be forsaken, causing the prince to blow out his own brains from remorse; others, that it had been a double suicide, a death pact, deliberately conceived and as deliberately executed by the heir to one of the greatest kingdoms of the world.

Matt was dumfounded; he could not utter a word. Was it possible, was it conceivable that John Mort was the—

"You know the story that the world knows," continued the old man. "You know the story I myself believed for thirty-six hours, till"— He hesitated, lowered his voice and looked about him. "Listen," he went on. "I mean to hide nothing from you. It is true that the young baroness threw caution to the winds and followed the prince there; it is true she shot herself; it is true that my son in his frenzy tried to turn the same pistol against his own breast.

"To face such a scandal seemed impossible; to escape seemed worse. In either event the throne would be shaken to its foundations and my son's name blackened beyond redemption. He had a valet named Zeitz—Ludwig Zeitz—one of those faithful simpletons who are sublime in the devotion which our house has always inspired. This fellow, who affected to copy the prince and was proud beyond measure of a resemblance no one saw but himself, threw himself at my son's feet. He would shoot himself, he said; his body would be mistaken for that of the prince; death atones for everything, and my son, unpursued, might pass the frontiers without detection and lose his identity in the countless millions beyond.

"His proposal was disregarded, was treated as a gross impertinence. He was roughly silenced and ordered to hold his tongue, while my son in the midst of his comrades persisted like a madman in his desire to die. Suddenly there was a report, and they rushed in to find this Zeitz lying beside the woman with the top of his head blown off. He had dressed himself in my son's clothes, had taken my son's rifle and had resolved the matter in his own harebrained way. But at that moment in their dismayed state it seemed to my son and his friends the solution of everything. They did not wait to ask how the corpse of the valet could pass the examination that would necessarily follow. My son mounted a horse and fled.

"As I said, the imposture for thirty-six hours was not questioned. But the doctors could not be deceived. The body was unmistakably that of Ludwig Zeitz. I myself stood before it as it lay naked on their table and confirmed their opinion. My feelings toward my son were very bitter. He had dishonored the imperial house. I exaggerated in my heart, though God knows it was great enough, the harm he had done it and me. With the connivance of the doctors I accepted the imposture. The world had accepted it, and I decided to leave them in ignorance.

"It was not until years afterward—in 1898, when the empress was taken from me under the most horrible circumstances—that I found in her papers some facts of startling import. Her extravagance, which had been the talk of Europe and to me a perpetual source of discord, had its origin in a vast debt incurred in 1890, on which afterward she had been paying excessive interest as well as steadily diminishing the principal. And the one who had obtained that vast sum was no other man than my unhappy son, who had gone to her in his extremity and had thus acquired the means to hide himself in the uttermost parts of the earth.

(To be continued.)

Real Excitement.

A city man who owing to a business ordeal was obliged to live for some time in a small railroad town frequently felt the need of excitement. Once when he was really depressed with the monotony of his life he saw a wildly excited crowd gathered on a vacant lot. Prominent citizens were there hopping up and down, gesticulating and shouting and he felt that the unexpected had happened and something was doing. He rushed to the lot and gasped out "What's the matter?" "Matter!" shouted a rampant citizen. "Matter! Why, we are going to hive a swarm of bees!"

A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Hundreds of People Have Found "Fruit-a-tives" Their Only Help

READ THIS LETTER

Superintendent of Sunday School in Toronto Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 DOVERCOURT ROAD, Oct., 1st. 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases". "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Woman's World

Mrs. Schall Managed Her Blind Husband's Campaign.

MRS. THOMAS D. SCHALL.

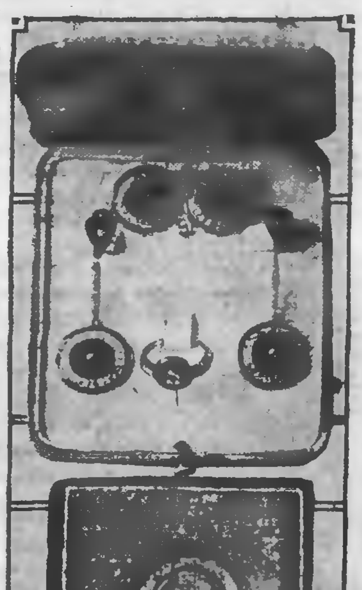
One of the most interesting figures now in the public eye is the wife of the Hon. Thomas D. Schall, recently elected to congress from Minnesota. Like Senator Gore of Oklahoma, he is quite blind and depends entirely on the assistance of his wife to carry on his public work. The lady is not only eyes to him in his legal work in Minneapolis, where he is a successful lawyer, but she acted as private secretary and campaign manager when he appealed to the voters for election.

The Schalls have been married for twelve years. Mrs. Schall frankly admits being thirty-five years old, two years her husband's junior. They first met when both were students at the University of Minnesota, where Mr. Schall won honors as an intercollegiate debater. He is said to be one of the finest speakers before the Minnesota bar. His blindness is due to an accident which occurred seven years ago.

Many persons surmised that this accident would end his public career, but so ably did his devoted and brilliant wife come to his assistance that he has been able to carry on his law practice with success and score a signal triumph in a hot political campaign.

Mrs. Schall is described as a charming as well as clever and cultivated woman, who will be a distinct acquisition to Washington's official society. Her husband's term, unless a special session of the Sixty-fourth congress should be called after the expiration of the present congress next March, will not begin until December, 1915.

BLACK AND WHITE JEWELRY



MODISH NEW TRINKETS.

Jewelry in black enamel and set with small gems is seen in the shops. It is in accordance with fashion's leaning toward somber things this season. The set illustrated here is mounted in a pretty satin lined velvet box and is carried out in black enamel with small brilliants. For good luck is the little diamond horse shoe shown in its separate box.

FAR SUPERIOR TO CASTOR OIL

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They are absolutely safe, pleasant to take and never fail to cure stomach and bowel disorders. Concerning them Mrs. A. Sauve, Sheerway, Que., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my three children and can truthfully say that I know of no other medicine to equal them. They are far superior to Castor Oil and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

● We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest. ●

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health — Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada. — "Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

BURGLARS GO TO CENTRAL

Woman is Given Two Days to Leave Town

Lindsay, Feb. 13.—Drastic punishment was meted out yesterday afternoon by Police Magistrate Jackson to two burglars, Simpson and York or Raymond, who burglarized John O'Reilly's liquor store last week. They were both sentenced to two years less one day in Central Prison, while Simpson was also sentenced a month in jail for the theft at Maunder's hotel and also for stealing Dr. Blanchard's gloves.

The court room was crowded to the doors, and before sentence was passed the police magistrate delivered some salutary advice to the prisoners.

Mrs. Duval, who was a frequenter at the Cleary homestead with the prisoners, was called to the stand, and was given forty-eight hours to leave the town. If she was found inside the limits after the time expired she would be arrested. She took the hint with a brazen smile on her face, and passed a remark when taking her seat, which provoked a titter from the court.

DEATH FAILED TO BRING ABOUT RECONCILIATION

Brothers' Feud of Forty-two Years Lasts to the End

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 13. — When Jaris Wood, aged 82, died in his lonely cabin on Teneriffe Mountain, in East Brookfield, a few days ago, the story of a strange enmity was told in the village. For forty-two years Jaris and his brother John worked side by side without speaking, and when John lay on his death bed neither of the brothers would consent to a reconciliation.

The estrangement of the two brothers forms a love story that surpasses the fondest plots of the novelist. Both men were suitors for the hand of Miss Mary Squires, and it is said by some, never contradicted by either brother, that they fought a duel to see which would be the lucky man. Jaris won, and went to Spencer, Mass., and married the girl. This was back in 1862.

Jaris Wood returned to his lonely farmhouse with his bride, but received no welcome from John. For a time the newlyweds occupied one side of the house and John the other. Mrs. Woods' efforts to effect a reconciliation were fruitless, and this resulted in Jaris building another cabin. When John took sick, Jaris Wood's wife nursed him, but when she saw death was coming and she tried to unite the brothers, neither would consent.

During the funeral of John, Jaris sat upon the doorstep, but did not enter the old house until the funeral cortege had started toward the cemetery. During their lives the brothers eked out a bare existence. No modern improvements were ever used by them, for both were decided to conduct the rocky farm just as their father did before them.

The estrangement was known by all the townsfolk, but neither John nor Jaris would answer any questions of interviewers, and their own stories of the forty-two-year feud were never told.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

The Rev. E. A. Thompson, missionary to the Jews at Jerusalem, who has just escaped with his life since the war broke out, will preach tomorrow morning in St. Paul's Church on "Providences in Palestine."

Mr. Thompson is an old friend of the pastor, Rev. R. Pogue, and though he has a busy time during his visit in Peterborough, he has consented to take the morning service in St. Paul's Church.

The pastor will continue his special series on the "Signs of the Times" in the evening, preaching on the "Great Apostacy," or "Is the World Getting Better?"

Faces As Fair As An Orchid

Are Possible When Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Used After Meals to Clean Up Skin Eruptions And Discolorations.

When a face is covered with blotches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads, etc., Stuart's Calcium Wafers will act like some magical charm. However, there is nothing magical about them. They are nature's own way of cleansing the human blood and preventing it from filling the surface of the body—the skin—with pimples and little skin eruptions.

"With a Face as Fair as a Day in June."

The abolishing of all skin disorders must begin with the blood. Lotions, salves, cosmetics, etc., will do no material good. The trouble comes from within and there the remedy must be applied.

If you really desire quick action and at the same time a common sense, natural, harmless blood purifier, then Stuarts Calcium Wafers is this remedy.

The correct and best blood purifier known to science is—Calcium Sulphide. This great cleanser is contained in proper quantities in Stuart's Calcium Wafers and that is why all blood troubles and skin blemishes rapidly disappear after their use.

An unsightly and pimply face due to impure blood is one of the most disgusting sights one can see, and yet all about us, upon the streets, in the theatre, when travelling, etc., we see these horrible results.

There is no need for this condition if you will take Stuart's Calcium Wafers daily and keep all salves, lotions, cosmetics and other harmful preparations from clogging the pores.

Every first-class druggist in this country carries Stuart's Calcium Wafers, which are pleasant to take, harmless, and may be obtained for 50 cents a box. A small sample package will be mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

FRANCE BANS ABSINTHE.

Sale of Liquor Is Prohibited By Bill Passed in Chamber.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday adopted the bill prohibiting the sale of absinthe.

Indemnities will be granted to manufacturers affected by the bill, and will be covered in a special act later. The bill also applies to Algeria and the colonies, and will be proposed for adoption by the protectorates. The measure now goes to the Senate.

During the debate yesterday, Deputy Edouard Lachaud, a Radical Republican, said: "Absinthe suppression is only the commencement. We will arrive at the suppression of all similar appetizers."

An amendment was offered making the prohibitive features of the bill apply also to alcohol and bitters, but it was withdrawn after the statement was made that this would be the subject of a report by a special committee, and that propositions tending to the suppression of all alcoholic extracts were being considered.

TURK OFFICIALS REFUSED TO HONOR THEIR PAPERS

Rev. E. A. Thompson and Family Had Hard Time Leaving Jerusalem

Rev. E. A. Thompson of Jerusalem addressed a large audience in Bethany Tabernacle last evening on his experiences in connection with his forced departure from that city following the outbreak of the war. His subject was "The Providence of God in Palestine." Mr. Thompson said he had just finished a six weeks' journey and felt tired, but he was unable to resist the pressing invitation extended him to come to Peterborough.

"I have been asked a number of times to tell how I got out of Jerusalem, but I tell you it all because the hand of God was over me."

For the last six months his life had been full of coincidents, in which the hand of God had always been manifest. Before the war broke out there was hardly a village in Palestine where a missionary would not be welcome.

On August 3rd the news of the war came to Jerusalem. The British consul ordered all the English people to get ready to leave, but he and four young Americans decided to stay. Because he was in an American mission the Turks decided he was an American and passed him over. His twelve year old son was attending a German school there and he was subject to their animosity. Shortly after he was stricken with pneumonia for the third time in his life, but was helped back to life by a devoted native.

Finally an order came that priests, monks, nuns, clergy and missionaries of the hostile countries must leave before Dec. 24th. The American consul must have them out of Jerusalem by Dec. 24th, 1914. Everything, however as far as he knew had been perfectly quiet in Jerusalem since he left.

On the day after Christmas he went down to Jaffa where there were about nine hundred people trying to get through the door out on to the wharf. He had his wife and family with him and they had a desperate time of it. But just as he was ready to leave the Turkish commander held them up from embarking, refusing to honor the papers they carried and he was hustled off by a rough quartet of Turkish soldiers. Then the American consul again befriended them and finally they were released and permitted to return to the wharf. But not having the right kind of collar and hat on, the Turkish soldiers again rushed them off. But after some further red tape they finally managed to get a place in the boats and be rowed out to the steamer "Tennessee" and were safe.

Rev. Mr. Thompson will be here over Sunday. He is one of the principal speakers at a two days' convention being held at Bethany Tabernacle.

Five French aviators dropped bombs on the German military aerodrome in the outskirts of Muelhausen and it is believed it was destroyed.

MISSION WORK AMONG ROMAN CATHOLICS

Tomorrow at Murray Street Church the secretary of the Baptist mission to the Roman Catholics of Quebec will tell of the progress of that work. The Baptist denomination have 28 miles from Montreal a school and church and other buildings worth two hundred thousand dollars. In that school at the present time are nearly two hundred pupils, many of them Roman Catholics. Forty of these pupils professed conversion last year. Besides the work of the school, missionaries and colportures cover a large part of the province of Quebec each year. The work is in every way most encouraging. Those who feel an interest in our Roman Catholic fellow-citizens will be glad to hear Rev. E. Bosworth tomorrow.

DEADLY ANAEMIA

Nine Women and Girls out of Every Ten are Affected With This Trouble

It is an unfortunate fact that nine women and girls out of every ten are afflicted with anaemia—which means bloodlessness—in one form or another. The girl in her teens, the wife, the mother and the matron of middle age all know its miseries. To be anaemic means to be pallid, with dark marks under the eyes. You are breathless after slight [illegible] You feel worn out and depressed all day. You have no desire for food and often cannot digest what little you do take. Headaches, backaches and sideaches make life miserable. If you sleep at night you do not feel refreshed in the morning and are utterly unfit for the day's duties. If neglected, anaemia almost surely leads on to deadly consumption. Renewed health can only be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—the most reliable blood enricher ever discovered. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood; they bring brightness to the eyes, and the glow of health to pale cheeks. They have literally saved thousands of women and growing girls from the grave, and what they have done for others they can do fo you if given a fair trial. Here is the proof. Mrs. Wm. Kierman, Watrous, Sask., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with wonderful results. I suffered for upwards of two years with anaemia in a severe form and was doctoring all the time with no benefit. I was so weak I could scarcely walk. I suffered from severe headaches and at times from backaches that were almost unbearable. The trouble affected my digestion, and this caused additional discomfort. Finally through the persuasions of a friend I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I shall ever be grateful that I did so, as after using nine boxes I was fully restored to health. I would earnestly urge all anaemic women and girls to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for I feel confident from my own experience that they will renew their health."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BRITISH HOWITZERS ASSUME ASCENDANCY ON WESTERN FRONT

Eye-Witness Says Terrible Execution is Being Wrought by Big Weapons Whose Noise is so Great It Covers the Approach of an Attacking Force—Germans Have New Inflammable Shell.

LONDON, Feb. 13. — The British army in France is now using heavy howitzers, which according to a report from the official "eye-witness" with the expeditionary forces, have gained ascendancy over the heavy German guns. These howitzers, he states, were used in successful attacks on the German positions in the brickfields south of La Bassee Canal a week ago last night.

"Our heavy howitzers took part in this bombardment, their fire being directed on the railway triangle," the "eye-witness" says. "The boom of these pieces and the detonations of their shells were audible twenty miles away above the roar of the other artillery, while to those close at hand the shrieking of the great projectiles through the air was most impressive, as were the volumes of smoke and debris thrown up. The effect of the lyddite shells was truly terrific, one house being blown bodily into the air, and as they burst among the brick stacks they created great havoc among the enemy.

"The assault was launched against a strong position or 'keep' among the stacks of bricks held by the Germans. Our storming columns rushed the work from three sides at once and captured it with very little loss, for, as prisoners afterwards stated, the noise of the bursting shells was so great and the clouds of dust with which the defenders were surrounded were so thick that they did not observe our men advancing until too late. At the same time trenches to the north of this point, between it and the canal, were stormed by another party. By seizing these points we were enabled to occupy a continuous line southwards from our forward posts on the canal, which formed an advantageous position in front of the brick fields.

"We captured nineteen unwounded prisoners, in addition to many wounded, a trench mortar and machine guns. The Germans left seventy dead on the ground, while our casualties were insignificant.

"The Germans, however, showed no inclination to accept this reverse, for in the early hours of Feb. 7 a body of them advanced along the canal bank shouting out, 'Don't shoot. We are engineers.' This form of stratagem, unfortunately for the enemy, has now lost its novelty. Our men held their fire until the supposed sappers were only a few yards away and then opened with a machine gun, with the result that the 'engineers' fell back, leaving thirty dead bodies in front of our lines. In the afternoon another attack was attempted, but it melted away under our artillery fire and did not arrive at close quarters.

"The Germans rely very much on an incendiary shell for damaging towns, and in their recent bombardment of Armentieres they made use of projectiles of this type packed with candles, composed of celluloid, phosphorus and wax, which material is so inflammable that it will ignite if placed in the sun."

ALLIES RIFLE PARLORS OPEN

Splendidly Equipped Gallery at 370 Water Street

A much felt want in the city will be removed when the Allies Rifle parlors will be thrown open at 370 Water street on Wednesday evening, February 17th, where elaborate arrangements have been made to provide the public with one of the most modern and thoroughly equipped shooting galleries in this section of the province. The Allies Rifle parlors are not the ordinary type, but are large, splendidly fitted up, and have a variety of targets to cater to the amateur or the most experienced and practised marksman. At this time, when so much attention is being directed towards improvement in rifle shooting, the opening of the Allies Rifle parlors is expected to prove a strong impetus to the movement. Everyone is certain to receive courteous treatment and every possible attention.

If a man prefers to shoot at a moving object, four tiers of deer, jack-rabbits, ducks and rats are kept moving by a motor backwards and forwards. Above them are three tiers of birds. The ducks on the lower tier of movable targets are of varying sizes, lending the impression of being further out on a lake and therefore the more difficult to hit. There are six stationary bull's-eyes and forty-five birds altogether.

In shooting, the marksman can secure his target afterward simply by pulling it back to him by means of a cord which is connected with it. In this way he can keep a record of his shooting exactly as though he were shoting at the rifle ranges. The targets are of regulation size. The distance from the targets to the counter where the rifles are is about sixty-five feet. The lighting facilities are excellent and there is no glare on the eyes of the shooter.

Evry facility [illegible] extended to ladies who wish to shoot, and one ladies' club is already in process of formation. The entrance to the parlors is large and beautifully decorated. Flags of the allied countries abound. Large framed pictures of stirring military scenes abound, and photographs of Lord Kitchener, Joffre, Sir Edward Grey and many other notables now in the public eye.

Four brand new Winchester repeaters with a magazine of fifteen shots are available. Mr. Geo. Paxman is manager of the Allies Rifle Ranges, and will give everyone the most courteous attention and assist them in every manner possible to increase their shooting ability.

A big crowd is expected to assemble when the parlors are formally thrown open on Wednesday evening.

Discovered Bubonic Plague.

HAVANA, Feb. 13.—Two cases of the bubonic plague, authenticated as such, have been discovered here. Three days ago there was one death from this disease. All of the cases are believed to have originated at the wharves used by European steamers.

The sanitary authorities are taking the utmost precaution to prevent the spread of the plague.

Prince Albert Rejoins Ship.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Prince Albert, son of King George, who was operated on for appendicitis last September, has been passed by the medical board and rejoined his ship.

SOME POINTS OF THE WAR TAX

The tariff increase of 7½ per cent. intermediate and 5 per cent. preferential went into effect yesterday.

The tax on bank notes, insurance companies other than life and fraternal benefit societies, dates from the first of January, 1915.

The tax on wines and patent medicines went into effect yesterday.

The tax on cable and telegraph messages, letters, post cards, railway and steamship tickets, parlor car seats, sleeping car berths, checks, receipts, bills of exchange, express and postal money orders will go into effect when the budget is passed, which will be in the course of a few weeks

All the war tax stamps will be of a special issue and will have printed on them the words "War Tax."

"War Tax" stamps on money orders, checks, steamship and railway tickets, including parlor car and sleeping berth tickets, will be cancelled by the parties issuing the stamps who will make a return to the government detailing the particulars of the cancellations.

A penalty of not more than $250 for persons neglecting to cancel or attach the stamps will be provided in the act.

Already collectors of inland revenue have been supplied with war stamps which must be affixed to goods affected by the new taxes. These consist of the old type of stamp, bearing the imprint of "war tax" upon them.

The large amount of small taxes to be collected from patrons of railway and telegraph companies will practically force them to hoard large quantities of copper coins.

The government will not need to establish new machinery for collecting these taxes as the companies must themselves forward the proceeds of the levy to the government

The decision to tax checks two cents applying as it does to all banking business done through this medium, great and little, will become vexatious at first but in all probability a special war stamp will be issued in two cent and one cent denominations which can be used for checks, express and post office orders and letters.

Though in his budget Mr. White did not say who was to forward the taxes affecting checks and other banking documents to the government, the institutions handling them will be called upon to do so in company with the war tax on notes they must pay.

It may be that hereafter banks will sell customers check books with the war stamp on each blank as is done in England.

The stamps for checks will be sold by the banks; stamps for letters, post-cards, postal notes and money orders, at the post offices, for telegraph messages at the telegraph offices, for steamship and railway tickets at the railway ticket offices, for express money orders and travellers' checks at the offices where they are issued, and for articles that come under the jurisdiction of the inland revenue department at the offices of that department.

The new budget means that hereafter it will cost three cents to send a letter and two cents for a post card. The cost of postage is not increased but the letter or card must carry the extra one cent war stamp affixed by the sender. If it is not on the letter it will not be delivered but returned to the dead letter office in default of payment of double postage called for by the general regulations of the post office department.

The tax of one cent on each telegraphic or cable message costing over fifteen cents applies to press as well as to commercial or personal messages. It is not a stamp but a special tax of one cent and applies regardless of the length of the message whether it is ten words or a thousand words.

The war stamp on checks, bills of exchange, sight drafts and bills of lading is not applicable also to notes. The person who issues the check has to apply the stamp and without it the bank may refuse to pay the cash.

The stamp on "receipts" is not applicable to the ordinary business receipt but rather to the form used by banks when withdrawals are made.

With regard to banks, trust and loan companies and insurance companies the operation of the law will be under the finance department.

On bills of lading the shipper has to pay the two cent stamp charge.

One effect of the new tariff is to reduce to very small proportions the free list. Save for a few articles specially excepted and others figuring in the conventions with France or the West Indies, all commodities heretofore on the free list are now dutiable to the extent of 7½ per cent on the general and 5 per cent. on the preferential tariff

GRAND CROSS FOR JELLICOE

Commander of Home Fleets is Honored

LONDON, Dec. 13.—King George yesterday conferred the grand cross of the Order of the Bath on Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, comamnder of the British home fleet.

SIR JOHN JELLICOE.

Germany has notified the Scandinavian governments that no more fishing or coasting vessels will be permitted within a certain area off the German North Sea coast until further notice.

WITHDRAWAL FROM EAST PRUSSIA DEFENSIVE MOVE

Grand Duke Will Receive Next Offensive on His Own Ground—Lyck is the Heart of Struggle.

LONDON, Feb. 13. — The official announcement that the Russians were retiring in East Prussia has come upon the public here as an unpleasant surprise, but nothing more. It is impossible, for greatly inferior numbers to meet the Germans on their own ground, and the Russians are repeating their old manoeuvres of choosing a position for defence at home. After all, it is not miles, but men which separate the Russian forces from their ultimate goal, Berlin, and the tactics which will enable the largest number of Germans to be killed at the minimum cost to themselves are the only sure means for the allies to win their war against the nation that has been preparing for decades. The entire strategic front on this side resolves itself now into the centre extending between the lower and upper reaches of the Vistula and two wings, the Russian right reaching away northwards from the lower Vistula and the left from the upper Vistula, stretching away along the Carpathians. The centre has been quiescent for several days, with the exception of some artillery dueling and the usual compliments between opposing trenches. The Russian right wing has retired before the overwhelming new forces of Germans, and the Russian left continues to prosecute the main business of the campaign in the Carpathians with success.

The new situation in East Prussia has a connection with the subdividing of the Austro-German campaign along the Carpathians. Austria must soon lose the prop of her ally. Therefore the German staff has arrived at the conviction that the Austrians cannot be strengthened by the introduction of harder fighting troops from the north. It is evident that the Carpathian army will be left like a torpedoed ship to its own resources for the Germans are now throwing all their spare men to the other extreme end of the Russian position. Their determined succession of forced marches across the northern and southern lines of East Prussia has brought their right wing around the lower end of the Mazurian Lakes three days ago. The Russian columns which have recently been moving in the region of Angorapp and the Inster rivers were threatened by the northern and southern German flying columns, which were backed by a strong force of infantry and artillery. The situation was quickly realized, and the Russian corps readjusted themselves near the line of their own frontier, backed by its fortified positions. The enemy's strength is most evident near the southwest corner, where the network of railways around Lyck is the heart of the battle position.

The new German move has both an aggressive and defensive character. Von Hindenburg has brought probably 200,000 additional men to its execution. Their task is to secure protection for the northern section of Von Hindenburg's command against the Russian invasion, while the attention of the main German army is absorbed by the prolonged battles requiring to the utmost limit its strength in Flanders and France. It is certain that the Germans could not secure this immunity in East Prussia. Had they been able to circumvent the Russian columns between Tilsit and the lakes the situation would have been serious for some time, but the Russians are already adjusted for the purpose now of great operations with their front unbroken for a decisive struggle for East Prussia, and a prolonged and stubborn encounter is beginning.

FIRST STEPS IN BLOCKADE

Germany Forbids Foreign Ships in Area Along German Coast

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 13—Admiral von Pohl's preliminary measure to the blockade which was due to come into operation on Thursday is promulgated from Berlin. The Danish Minister of Marine announces that he has received an official communication from the German Admiralty staff at Berlin forbidding the presence of all foreign fishing and coasting ships within a certain area of the coast of Schleswig-Holstein and the German North Sea coast west of Elbo and Weser and east Frisia Islands. The Danish Minister makes the announcement, but without comment, that this means that neutral coasting vessels plying between neutral ports in the Baltic between Scandinavia and Holland will have to give a wide berth to German territorial waters which are now forbidden.

Britain and America's disbelief in the efficacy of a German blockade of the British coast has greatly angered Germany. The word "bluff" has particularly annoyed the German Admiralty. Certain journals give the assurance that no Danish interests are threatened by the blockade. Other papers, chiefly semi-official, declare that Germany intends to sink any neutral ship without examination if the ship is carrying contraband or steaming to Britain. If any American ship is sunk American must bear the responsibility. Germany will not be influenced from outside quarters.

A well-known member of the German Reichstag, Erzberger, who is closely associated with prominent military circles, writing on the blockade, asks the people not to assume that Germany is bluffing. It will soon appear, he says, that the menace is great and earnest, and will be carried out in the most effectual manner possible.

Germans violently bombarded Nieuport and the banks of the Yser yesterday. The allies' fire, it was stated, was most effective.

BRISK BUYING AT THE MARKET

By 11 o'clock today the inner market had thinned out to such an extent that there was little produce of any kind left. The buying was good while it lasted, and everything brought on found a good demand. Good dairy butter was purchasable at 32 cents, and most of it went at that figure. Eggs sold at the usual price of 35c. Potatoes sold quite readily at 65c a bag—fine healthy looking potatoes at that.

Meat prices did not show any material difference since last Saturday. There was an ample supply on hand. Altogether the beef was of much better looking quality than has been seen for some time on the local market. It fetched 11c to 13c. There was very little lamb, but what was on sold for as high as 18c and 20c. Mutton fetched about 15c., and pork 12c and 13c.

JOE TETRAULT TO PLAY WITH THE SHAMROCKS

Alleged to be "Joe Moinse" of the Peterborough Intermediates — His Appearance in Pro Game To-night Will Clear up Mystery

Toronto, Feb. 13.—The big "pro" game of the season locally is the game at the Arena tonight between the rivals, Torontos and Shamrocks. In the two previous meetings between these teams the Toronto have won by one goal on each occasion. The Shamrocks expect to be at full strength again. Skinner has entirely recovered and will play right wing, with Corbet Denneny and Ronan at centre and Cyril Denneny and a new player, whose appearance here will be of great interest to hockey fans. This new player is none other than Joe Tetrault, who is alleged to be one and the same Moines, the Peterborough player whom the O.H.A. has been investigating. Tetrault is a defence man as well as a forward, with both N.H.A. and Maritime League experience. This player's appearance on the Shamrock's line-up, if he is the man the O.H.A. are after, will create a sensation.

One signed contract has been returned to the Peterborough Baseball Club. It is that of Knute Belting, who has wintered here. Pitcher Ken Tracey and "Don't Worry" Joe Byrne have written to Secretary Eddie Carr for a little information as to who will pilot the club this season and who will compose the board of directors. It is stated that Tracey has a line out for the managerial berth. As yet no word has been received from any of the other players.

The committee recently formed to ascertain the prospects for a team this season, has been at work, and will meet this evening to draft a report to be submitted to the shareholders. It is generally reported that Mr. A. J. Johnston may finance the club this year, but Mr. Johnston stated to the Review today that he has not decided on anything definite. He will be present at the meeting of the committee this evening.

MEL. SHEPPARD RETIRES.

Toronto, Feb. 13.—After thirteen years of championship running Mel. Sheppard has decided to hang up his racing togs and abandon the spiked shoes forever. A fall he got at Madison Square Garden several nights ago, when he was hurt, was partly responsible. Sheppard is well known and well liked in Toronto. He was a rare good athlete and a credit to the game.

Military action to enforce its demands upon China has been threatened by the Japanese Government.

NO TICKETS TILL MONDAY.

(Toronto Star.)

The Arena management cannot accept mail and telephone orders for the senior O.H.A. finals. Many checks have been received, but will be returned to the senders. No tickets will be distributed or sold until Monday, and the competing clubs—the Victorias and the St. Michaels—will get the principal allotment. What remains will be put on sale at the Arena. There will be 2,000 bleacher seats at a quarter, and the same number of standing-room tickets for reserved sections for half a dollar on sale at the rink on the night of the game—first come, first served.

WHITE AND WELSH AGAIN.

Chicago, Feb. 13. — Articles were signed here yesterday for a ten round match between Charlie White of Chicago, and Freddie Welsh, the lightweight champion, to be decided in Milwaukee on February 25. They agreed to weigh 135 pounds at two o'clock. It will be their second meeting, the first having resulted in a draw.

COMMENT

As You Like it

PETERBOROUGH FANS will regret that Bobby Heck, the southpaw hurler for the London Canadian League team, will not be seen in action in this clime during the coming season. The London club has announced that Heck and Shortstop Ray Whitcraft have been sold to higher company. The club where they will perform is not made known. That Heck was "in strong" in "Doc" Reisling's headquarters is shown by the following from the London Advertiser:

"Heck has been with London for two seasons, and he was conceded to be the best pitcher in the league. He is the best southpaw that ever threw a ball in the Canadian League, at any rate, and he could always be depended upon to win his game if given two or three runs. Both years he was with the London club the team was a pennant contender, being in the race right up till the last day of the season. He led the local pitchers both times, and was one of the most popular ball players that ever donned a London uniform."

MANAGER BILL CRISTALL of the Hams is said to have signed enough bushers to supply the whole league. That's just what "Old Folks" Templin did a few years ago for Peterborough.

JOCKO HALLIGAN, whom Joe Byrne named "Old Blind Tom," will be inflicted upon the fans on Fitzgerald's circuit again this summer. According to reports, Halligan was made an offer by the Federal League. That further lessens our opinion of the outlaw organization.

GEORGE MILLER, by far the best arbitrater in the Canadian League last season, will be on the job again. Bob Bedford will also be on deck.

GENERAL SATISFACTION meets the action of President Fitzgerald in not engaging Umpires Lush and McPartlin for the rapidly approaching session. Both were a little below par.

HERB SHOCKER, the Ottawa spit ball artist, has placed his John Henry on his 1915 contract with the Senators. It was generally understood that Shocker would be with Fort Wayne this season.

FRANK SMYKAL has notified Frank Shaughnessy that he is satisfied with the terms and will be back with the Caps. "Shag" will do a lot of swapping before he fills the vacancy caused by the sale of Jack Mitchell.

LOUIE COOK, who piloted the Senators for one season, and also led the Guelph Maple Leafs, will handle the indicator in the Central Association this season.

TO JOIN BRANTS AGAIN.

President Nelson of the Brantford Canadian League Club has received word from Chase, Lammond, and Fried of last year's team that they will be back this year. "Rube" Deneau will again lead the Brants.

"BIG BILL" A HOLDOUT.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 13. — It was learned here yesterday that "Big Bill" James, one of the first string pitchers of the champions Braves, won't join the National League team unless President Gaffney comes across with a different contract than the one already offered, especially in the part concerning the pay envelope.

COLLINGWOOD PLAYERS WERE DOPED IN HAMILTON RINK

Tiger Management Hunting for the Miscreant — Club Not Blamed in the Collingwood Charges

The Collingwood Enterprise charges that the Collingwood hockey players were "doped" in their recent visit to Hamilton, but the club does not blame the Tiger hockey club or anyone connected with it, alleging that it was the work of some unknown miscreant. The O. H. A. asked the Hamilton club for an explanation, but the club had already started an investigation of its own.

The Enterprise says:

"The facts of the case as given to us are as follows, and readers can draw their own conclusions: A pail of iced water was placed in our boys' dressing room for their convenience during the game, and the only player who did not drink from it was the goalkeeper, Clark. All the other players used it, as did several Collingwood boys who went with our team, and one other, a Hamilton boy who formerly worked for A. H. Johnson here, and knew all our fellows. The results were that every one of our players was knocked out more or less with cramps.

"Foulis had to be taken off the ice before the game was over, while at the close of the game all our players collapsed, and doctors had to be called in to attend to them. Some of them are still suffering from the effects. Had it only been the Collingwood team who suffered one might have put it down to the change of water, but when a man who has resided in Hamilton for three years is also seriously affected, the matter looks more serious. Foulis was the first to drink the water, and took more than the others, and was the first to succumb. McLeod did not take a drink till between the second and third periods, and did not have to give up during the game, although having had cramps towards the close. Several of our players found it hard to complete the game, but struggled on bravely. All the boys had drunk water at the hotel before the game and suffered no ill-effects, but everyone who drank out of the pail provided for them at the rink complained of the same effects."

KINGSTON DID NOT SCORE IN FIRST GAME

Lindsay Midgets Played Individual Game With Success

LINDSAY, Feb. 13. — Before a packed rink the Kingston Collegiate Institute team went down to defeat at the hands of the Lindsay Midgets last night by 7 to 0. The ice was very heavy, making individual play prominent. McElroy, Carew brothers and Sandercock were in the limelight all the time while Flavelle's and Haugh's rushes were effective. Lindsay had ten shots on Kingston's goal to one on their own, and proved stayers on heavy ice. For the visitors, Stewart, Ferguson and Walsh played good hockey and were always dangerous. The teams:

Kingston — Goal, Walsh; left defence, Carrill; right defence, Ferguson; centre, Stewart; rover, Paul; right wing, Toland; left wing, Bratton.

Lindsay — Goal, O'Loughlin; left defence, Flavelle; right defence, Haugh; centre, McElroy; rover, C. Carew; right wing, Sandercock; left wing, A. Carew.

Preliminary, 9.30 a.m.

Kingston v. Peterborough.

Byes—Toronto, Belleville, Toronto and Granite.

Belleville v. Toronto Granite.

Final, 7.30 p.m.

Winners of the afternoon.

If a club drawn in the preliminary round is successful also in the semi-final draw, the skips of this club shall elect as to whether the final game will be played on Thursday evening or Friday morning. If not successful the final game shall be played on Thursday, unless the players of the two clubs are agreed as regarding the playing of the final game Friday morning.

The umpire will be pleased to present individual prizes to the winners of a game to be played Friday, the 19th, four rinks to compete, providing the final game has already been played, but if the Tankard game is being played on Friday morning the three remaining clubs to draw, the one securing a bye to play the winner of the other two for the umpire's prize.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The hall of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum was filled last night to hear the debate on the resolution: "That intemperance has caused greater suffering than war." The question was splendidly contested by both sides, the speakers displaying extraordinary power of oratory and memorization. The pudges, Messrs. A. Sharpe, J. Maher, and V. J. McElderry, of whom Mr. McElderry made a most able spokesman, after a long conference, gave the decision to the affirmative, upheld by Messrs. J. New and B. McEvoy. The negative was taken by Messrs. V. McCabe and E. Reynolds. The careful thoroughness with which the debaters had prepared their speeches was evidenced by their delivery, and the large crowd was most enthusiastic over the evening's enterment. The speakers were heartily congratulated by Rev. Fathers McColl and Phelan, and the musical program was composed of a vocal solo by Miss K. Masterson, one by Miss Marguerite Clancy, and two very bright piano solos by Miss Lillian Hill, chairlady; Miss Kathleen McCarthy.

Mrs. D. E. H. Lee was the hostess of a progressive euchre to a number of Mr. and Mrs. Lee's friends Wednesday, Feb. 10th. After the games were over a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess and her friends, while Mr. Lee provided some choice selections on the phonograph, after which their friends dispersed, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Lee for the very pleasant time they had enjoyed. — Lindsay Warder.

Yesterday afternoon a parlor meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Knapman, George St., in connection with the local W.C.T.U. There was a good attendance. Mrs. Whalley, the president, gave an excellent address on The Life and Work of the Late Mrs. Yeomans, who was the first President of the Dominion W.C.T.U. Mrs. Lane sang a solo which was greatly enjoyed.

Another large audience attended the second presentation of the St. John's Lady Minstrels last night. Much credit is due to Mrs. Peter Campbell, Mrs. Stratton, Mrs. Spence and Mrs. Aylmer, who were responsible for much of the success of the affair.

The regular meeting of the Charlotte Street Young Ladies' Mission Band will meet at the home of Mrs. F. C. Neal, 314 Rubidge street, on Monday evening. The religions of Japan will be the subject of the evening.

A successful talent tea under the auspices of the ladies of Park Street Church was held yesterday by Mrs. C. Luffman and Mrs. Geo. Whatley, at the home of Mrs. Luffman, Lafayette avenue. There was a musical program and refreshments.

BRITISH AIRMEN RAID FOUR TOWNS

Bruges, Ostend, Zeebrugge and Blankenberghe, Where Germany is Endeavoring to Establish Submarine Bases Are Visited by Fleet of Air Craft and Great Damage is Reported.

LONDON, Feb. 13—Aerial warfare was waged yesterday on the largest scale in its history and under adverse circumstances from the standpoint of the weather. British airmen, buffeting banks of snow in the air, swept over cities of northern Belgium held by Germans and dropped bombs on Ostend, Bruges and other places.

Thirty-four aeroplanes and seaplanes of the British navy took part in the operations and all of them later returned safely to their base without casualty to their drivers, although two of the machines were damaged. The raid was made in order to prevent the developments of submarine bases and establishments which might further endanger British warships and merchantmen.

Although no submarines were seen the British Admiralty indicates that the raid had satisfactory results, for considerable damage is said to have been done to German postions, railway lines and railway stations. The Ostend station is reported to have been set on fire and that at Blankenberghe to have been badly damaged. German mine-sweeping vessels at Zeebrugge also came in for a hail of bombs but the damage done to them has not been stated.

At various points the airmen were received by the Germans with firing from anti-aerial guns and rifles. None of the airmen is reported by the Admiralty to have been wounded in these attacks. One of the machines, driven by Flight Commander Claude Graham-White, among the most intrepid of the British flyers fell into the sea while returning to its base after the raid was over and the aviator had a narrow escape from drowning. Fortunately for him a cruiser was nearby and picked him up and then towed his aeroplane into port.

Wing Commander Samson who previously had made several notable visits to enemy territory in an aeroplane, was in chief command of the raiding aviators. He was assisted by Wing Commander Longmore and Squadron Commanders Courtney, Porte and Rathborne.

During the raid warships bombarded the German positions along the coast.

The British Admiralty's statement on the raid is as follows:

"Thirty-four naval aeroplanes raided Bruges, Zeebrugge, Ostend and Blankenberghe (all in Belgium). Claude Graham-White fell. He was rescued."

A description of the raid was given out by the official information bureau, as follows:

"The Secretary of the Admiralty makes the following announcement:

"During the last twenty-four hours combined aeroplane and seaplane operations have been carried out by the naval wing in Bruges, Zeebrugge, Blankenberghe and Ostend districts, with a view to preventing the development of submarine bases and establishments. Thirty-four naval aeroplanes and seaplanes took part.

"Great damage is reported to have been done to the Ostend railway station, which, according to present information has probably been burned to the ground. The railway station at Blankenberghe was damaged, and the railway lines were torn up in many places.

"Bombs were dropped on gun positions at Middlekerke and also on the power station and the German mine-sweeping vessels at Zeebrugge, but the damage done is unknown.

"During the attack the machines encountered heavy banks of mist. No submarines were seen.

"Flight Commander Graham-White fell into the sea off Nieuport and was rescued by a French vessel. Although exposed to a heavy gunfire from rifles, anti-aircraft guns, machine guns, etc., all of the pilots are safe. Two machines were damaged.

"The seaplanes and aeroplanes were under command of Wing Commander Samson, assisted by Wing Commander Longmore and Squadron Commanders Porte, Courtney and Rathorne."

100 Years of Peace.

The service in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church tomorrow morning will be in commemoration of the 100 years of peace between Great Britain and the United States. In the evening the subject will be "The Empire."

St. Andrew's Church.

"One Hundred Years of Peace" will be the subject on which Rev. Jas. Rollins will speak in St. Andrew's Church tomorrow evening. Tomorrow is the day set apart for the celebration of the century of peace between Great Britain and the United States of America. No other achievement of these great nations in the century takes rank with this, and the people of Peterborough may well throng the churches tomorrow in celebration of the great event.

The Prodigal Son.

Almost every seat was filled last evening when Mr. R. Irving addressed the children's meeting in the Gospel hall. His talk to the children was on the Prodigal Son. Mr. Irving explained God's easy, artless way of salvation through Christ, with the help of some views on that subject the prodigal's return, which the child's mind could take in. After the children's meeting Mr. Irving gave his last lecture on the Message of Christ to the Churches. All who listened to him felt that what he said was meat in due season.

HANGING YEAR

Member Points to 1914 as Case of Mania for Executions

OTTAWA, Feb. 13. — The House yesterday afternoon discussed crime and criminals upon the second reading of a bill introduced by Mr. Bickerlike (Montreal) to abolish capital punishment. Mr. Bickerdike opened his remarks by saying that 1914 will be known in Canadian history as the "hanging year." The mania for hanging people had been greater than in any time since 1837. Three men had been hanged who were probably innocent; one of them, he thought, was innocent beyond all question. Blood guiltiness, in Mr. Bickerdike's opinion, rested upon everyone who took part in a legal execution, including the judge, jurors and crown attorney.

In the discussion Hon. George P. Graham declared himself against capital punishment, but Mr. Edwards (Frontenac) declared that imprisonment in the Kingston Penitentiary was worse than death.

Sir Robert Borden, in adjourning the debate, said that Hon. Mr. Doherty should be given an opportunity to reply. Personally the Premier had no doubt but that the abuses disclosed by the recent investigation had been corrected.

The bill of Mr. Bradbury (Selkirk) to prevent the pollution of navigable waters was given a second reading and was again referred to a special committee.

Postmaster-General Casgrain said the question of the pollution of boundary waters was now under consideration by the International Waterways Commission. It would in his opinion be almost a breach of faith for Parliament to intervene.

Before the House adjourned Sir Wilfrid Laurier inquired when the Prime Minister proposed to make his statement to the House respecting the Ministerial changes which had occurred during the recess.

Sir Robert Borden replied: "I will move the House into supply on Tuesday for the purpose of making the statement and permitting any discussion that may be desired."

RECEPTION TO REV. F. J. SAWERS

Is Welcomed to St. Peter's Church, Cobourg

Large congregations attended St. Peter's Church on Sunday last when the new rector, Rev. F. J. Sawers, began his ministry there, says the Cobourg Sentinel-Star.

The favorable opinion which had been formed from what had been learned in Peterborough and elsewhere had enkindled a new interest which was deepened as the result of his first Sunday in his parish.

In the morning he spoke on the subject, "Workers Together with God," and in the evening upon "Prayer." His conduct of the services and his preaching were most acceptable. We predict for Rev. Mr. Sawers a very successful pastorate, and congratulate St. Peter's on securing a rector possessing so many excellent qualities.

On Tuesday a meting was held in the Sabbath school to meet and welcome the new rector.

The ladies of the auxiliary and the Girls' Friendly Society were in charge of this function. After introductions and general chit-chat, W. F. Kerr, K. C., took the chair. In a few well-chosen words he expressed the great pleasure felt by all in welcoming the Rev. Mr. Sawers, and the hopes entertained for the future of St. Peter's with his leadership. Songs were contributed by Miss Salisbury, Miss Dick and Mr. Pace, and piano solos by Miss Warner. The rector then addressed the congregation most acceptably. He asked for the earnest co-operation of all his parishioners as being essentially necessary to a successful ministry. He advocated the adoption of the duplex envelope system for contributions to all the funds of the church and expressed the hope that a choir vestry might soon be built. He thought the services of the church the most devotional and helpful of any, and asked all the congregation to join heartily in them, and thanked the congregation for the cordial reception given him and Mrs. Sawers. At the conclusion refreshments were served, thus concluding a very enjoyable gathering.

REV. DR. YOUNG AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

Dr. Young of Toronto, former pastor of George Street Methodist Church, who will speak at the 49th anniversary services of George Street Church tomorrow, was greatly eloved while a pastor in Peterborough, and is still remembered by many who profited under his pastorate. Since leaving the city he has filled the important pulpits of St. James' and Douglas Churches, Montreal, and has served the Methodist denomination on Mission Board, General Conference, and many most important positions of the whole church. Peterborough Methodists will give him a glad welcome, together with his many friends who will be pleased to hear him.

ANOTHER BRIDGE ACROSS OTONABEE

In a secluded corner of the Oriental Hotel the council of North Monaghan are holding a meeting this afternoon. To a reporter who ventured to interrupt the discussion the information was given that they were discussing the idea of having a bridge built across the Otonabee river from a point at the end of the street railway, and were debating the possibilities of securing financial assistance from the government for such a purpose.

Disabled Prisoners Exchanged.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—The first exchanges of disabled prisoners of war under the plan of Pope Benedict were arranged yesterday through the Berlin embassy. One hundred and forty-six British prisoners, unfit for further service, will leave Germany Feb. 16 and Great Britain will release 107 Germans. The exchanges apparently are not on a numerical basis, but all those who are disabled will fall within the scope of the order eventually.

More Fighting Men Needed.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—That Britain needs a stronger fighting force was made manifest yesterday, when the military authorities called upon all those who signed the recent census expressing their willingness to enlist when asked to do so.

GERMANY SEEKS A COMPROMISE WITH GREAT BRITAIN

ATTACK ON MALANCOURT FOREST AND VILLAGE IS REPULSED BY FRENCH

Counter Attack Drives Germans Back to Signal Hill, Which With Village of Norroy Had Been Won

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 15. — The official statement today says:

"In Lorraine, the enemy, after having driven back our advance guard, succeeded in occupying a signal hill and the village of Norroy. A counter attack on our part drove the Germans back as far as the northern declivity of the signal hill, where they are still holding their positions in some trenches. The attempt at an infantry attack by the Germans between Malancourt Forest and Malancourt Village was promptly repulsed.

"Elsewhere there was spirited artillery fighting, but no movements of infantry."

GERMANY WILL MAKE ATTEMPT TO COAX ITALY TO HER SIDE

ROME, Feb. 15. — A Nationalist newspaper says that before the end of this month Germany will make a definite proposal for Italian participation in the war on her side in return for the cession of provinces of Trent by Austria and some other boundary adjustments, and in addition Germany will bind herself to protect Italy's Mediterranean interests.

ROAD IS NOW OPEN TO COPPER WORKS

Russians Capture Strongly Fortified Village in Asia Minor

49,000 TURKISH PRISONERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 15. — The capture by the Russians of Borche, a hastily but strongly fortified village in Asia Minor, opens the road to the copper works at Zanzal, which the Turks seized at the commencement of the war and on which the Germans have been casting longing eyes.

Forty-nine thousand Turkish prisoners, including over five hundred officers as prisoners, have passed through Caucasia since the war began, on the way to a Russian prison camp.

AUSTRIAN FLEET BOMBARDS ANTIVARI

CETTINJE, Feb. 15. — The Austrian fleet sortied from the Gulf of Cattaro Sunday morning and commenced a bombardment of Antivari. Members of the royal family of Montenegro were subjected yesterday in their residence at Riefla village, where they spend the winter, to bombardment by machine guns from two Austrian aeroplanes. King Nicholas, with the Queen and princesses, watched aerial raiders from the palace windows, and several bullets fell near them.

BOARD OF ARBITRATORS HEARING CITY'S SIDE

Before the Board of Arbitrators the arbitration proceedings in connection with the valuation of the Peterborough Light and Power company's plant were resumed this afternoon at 2.30 in the county court chambers.

It is generally known that the proceedings are taking place to decide by arbitration a fair value at which the city shall pay for the possession of the plant and holdings of the company. The arguments from the company's standpoint have been submitted and the city's arguments are slated to be submitted this afternoon. Mr. G. N. Gordon, City solicitor, and M. K. Cowan, K.C., of Toronto, are representing the city's interests while the company is represented by W. N. Tilley, K.C., of Toronto and the bond holders by Strachan Johnston.

RESPONSE NOT ENCOURAGING

Library Board Placed Proposition Before Townships

A short time ago the public library approached the townships immediately surrounding the city with a view to getting their co-operation in keeping up the work of the library. At the present time the residents of the townships are laboring under a disadvantage through having to pay $2 a year for tickets.

The library board has done its best to meet the requirements of the township residents by allowing them extra time for keeping out books and doing everything in their power to help them out, but judging from the reception that this proposal has received from two of the townships there is not much chance of such a proposal being adopted.

The committee merely asked the townships to take into consideration the giving of a certain amount towards expenses of the library in order to give every township resident free access to the shelves.

ALBANIANS ON THE WARPATH

Large Force Breaks Through Serbian Lines

PARIS, Feb. 15. — A telegram from Nish to the Havas News Agency says that the following statement was given out by the Serbian Government yesterday:

"Saturday large numbers of Albanians broke through our lines, crossing the frontier in the department of Prisrend. Before superior forces of the enemy, our troops, as well as the municipal authorities, were forced to retreat.

"The Albanians continue to advance in the direction of Zapod, Topoliana and Glavotchnitz.

"The enemy succeeded in certain places in cutting the telephone and telegraph communications."

Reign of Terror in Trieste.

BERNE, Feb. 15.—A private message from Trieste says that the situation there is daily becoming more serious. Anyone manifesting the slightest sympathy with Italy is immediately charged with high treason and death sentences are of daily occurrence. The new governor, just appointed, is obliged to have all official documents countersigned by two officers of the general staff, one being German and the other Austrian.

FIREWORKS' BALLOONS WERE MISTAKEN FOR AEROPLANES

Three Which Were Sent up at Morristown Exploded High in the Air

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 15. — Aeroplanes, reported last night from Brockville, have not arrived here, and the information is that they flew back over Brockville at 1.30 this morning on the way back to the States.

Dominion police say that it is quite certain two airships were seen.

The report that a fire bomb was dropped in Brockville is denied there today.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Feb. 15.—Young men living in Morristown, opposite Brockville, said today that shortly after 9 o'clock last night they sent up three firework balloons, each of which exploded high in the air above Brockville. It is believed these balloons were mistaken for aeroplanes.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 15. — The aeroplane scare was dispelled today when the remainings of two "toy" balloons sent up from Morristown, celebrating the hundred years of peace, were found.

OTTAWA, Feb. 15. — Sir Robert Borden, the Prime Minister, received a telegram from Brockville, Ont., last night, stating that three aeroplanes had passed over Brockville at 10 p.m., flying in the direction of Ottawa. The aeroplanes came from New York State, over the St. Lawrence river.

The news spread quickly among the members of Parliament, and a number of them made their way to the roof of the main building to watch for the reported visitors.

At 11.18 o'clock orders were issued to darken the Parliament buildings. Every light on the grounds was extinguished and every curtain drawn.

Orders have also been given by Col. Sherwood to darken Rideau Hall, the official residence of the Governor-General of Canada, and the Royal Mint.

Col. Perry Sherwood, chief of Dominion police, said last night that he had had a telephone message from the chief of police at Brockville, who informed him that three or four aeroplanes had crossed the St. Lawrence about ten o'clock from New York State, and had passed over Brockville, traveling in a northeasterly direction, presumably towards Ottawa.

He said that one of the aeroplanes, while crossing the St. Lawrence, had dropped some fire balls or light balls. He was not sure what they were ex-

GERMANY BEGINNING TO FEEL THE PINCH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15. — Count Bernstorff, German Ambassador, today presented the State Department with a note from his Government, stating that Germany was willing to withdraw her intention of attacking British ships provided Britain withdrew her efforts to prevent food stuffs going to Germany for the civilian population.

ENGLAND COULD FINANCE WAR FOR FIVE YEARS

Expenditure for This Year Will be Ten Thousand Million Dollars and Britain is Spending More Than Her Allies

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 15. — Lloyd George told the Commons this afternoon that the expenditure by the Allies for the current year would be ten thousand million dollars, of which Britain was spending more than her allies. England, he said, could finance the war for five years out of her investments abroad. France could do the same for two or three years with something to spare. Hon. Winston Churchill told the House that further action would be taken to prevent the importation of food stuffs into Germany.

BRITISH STEAMER STRIKES MINE.

LONDON, Feb. 15. — The British steamer Wavelett from Pensaaclo for Leith struck a mine in the Channel today and had to be beached near Deal. A small boat with the first officer and several of the crew capsized and the party were lost.

SESSION OPENS ON TUESDAY

Moratorium and Good Roads Vote Likely to be Passed

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—The Ontario Legislature will convene to-morrow for the first actual war session held in more than twenty-five years. This will be the first occasion for the calling of the local House under conditions vitally affecting all Canada, and it is generally understood that all important legislation proposed will be handed with the present conditions in mind.

A combination of circumstances this year will make the new session of unusual interest in its preliminary stages. In addition to a new representative of the crown officiating at the open, a new Speaker, Hon. Dr. Jamieson, will control the affairs of the House, and Premier Hearst, with his honors fresh upon him, will assume the guidance of the Government.

ITALY IS FLOODED AS NEVER BEFORE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Feb. 15. — Italy having passed through an earthquake catastrophe, is now facing floods hardly equalled within the memory of living man. At Rome, the River Tiber is more than fifty feet out of the normal banks and is rising at the rate of two inches an hour.

The Vatican quarter of the city is completely flooded, but the waters have not yet reached the apostolic palace or St. Peter's. In the lower parts of the city, boats are the only means of progression.

FREE NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

NEWSPAPERS do not live on wind. Those who work in the production of newspapers usually eat three meals a day, and they have to be paid wages or salaries, just like other ordinary mortals. A surprisingly large number of people do not appear to realize these facts, for every day someone comes into the Review office requesting a free notice or the insertion of some article free of charge. Whether they think newspaper people pick bank bills off the wall, or draw them from their coat sleeves by some magical method, we do not know. The fact is, they come in with their puffs, notices or other copy.

Frequently the excuse is advanced that the object of the "write-up" is for a charitable or patriotic purpose, but, if people stopped to think a minute, there is no business that is approached so systematically and frequently as the newspaper. When dry-goods or groceries are wanted, or a building is to be rented, these are usually paid for, but notices and such are asked free of charge. Every line in a newspaper costs money to produce, to put in type, and free notices take space that would otherwise be devoted to news or advertising. There is an idea abroad that newspapers are constantly on the lookout for something to fill up their columns. This is not true. The problem for every real newspaper is to save space. There is often good news that cannot be printed for lack of space or typesetting. Every line of free notices is a direct loss to a newspaper. Yet some think there is no limit to a newspaper's generosity or space capacity, and will even try to get free copies, at that. Some people want to use the news columns of the newspapers, and ignore their advertising columns and job work departments as well. This is an exhibition of nerve that is amazing. Imagine asking a man for a donation and then refusing to do busines with him! for that is what such a policy means. The time has arrived in Peterborough for some people to be apprised rather sharply of what a decent respect for local newspapers consists. They are quite willing to do their share of charitable work, but there is a limit to it. There are many organizations that should pay for many things they want the newspapers to do gratis. In this connection it is gratifying to find a plain statement of the case from a source not affiliated with any newspaper, Mr. E. A. Moore, an officer of the State Charities Aid Association of New York, told a charities conference in Philadelphia recently that the newspapers deserved more credit than they commonly got.

The address was delivered before the first North Atlantic tuberculosis conference. Delegates representing seven of the Eastern States were there to consider ways and means for work of the National Association for the obtaining of funds for the general work of the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

> "We," said Mr. Moore, speaking of those engaged in variosu branches of organized charity in New York State, "do nota sk the stationer to contribute the paper we use. We do not ask the owners of the building we occupy to contribute our quarters. But we do ask the newspapers to do the equivalent by giving us space, which is money to them." He went on:
>
> "Buy space. Advertise your work as business houses do, and you will get the best publicity in the world.
>
> "I have seen editors receive each morning stacks of publicity matter which countless organizations want them to print for nothing. It is not fair. All sorts of propagandists are flooding the editors with their matter, and they wonder why it is not printed. The newspapers cannot afford to print it. And, again, it is not news. We have adopted another method in New York. This year we will print 118 half-page newspaper advertisements. We will get into the news columns only when we do something that is news."

MR. WHITE HAS DONE WELL.

THAT the proposals of the Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, will meet with general approval is borne out by an editorial in the Montreal Journal of Commerce, of which the Hon. W. S. Fielding is chief editor. The Journal says, in part:

> "Before the war broke out, the country had entered upon a period of financial stringency. While expenditure had increased, the revenues were no longer flourishing. The war, no doubt, added to the diminution of income. But even if there had been no war, additional taxation would have been inevitable. Whether the money was required for one purpose or another, the situation to the Finance Minister was the same. He had to raise more revenue. If there are any who are disposed to criticise his method, they would do well to reflect whether any better and more convenient way could have been taken. The exemptions that have been made show the Minister had a commendable desire to avoid, as far as he could, the placing of additional burdens on those least able to bear them. Some of the minor taxes may prove more irritating than profitable, but they are not unjust. The addition of five per cent. to the tariff on British goods, and seven and one-half per cent. on other goods, is the main feature of the budget. If the question were one of permanent fiscal policy, these additions would, of course, be open to grave objection. But they are imposed to meet what we all hope is a temporary condition, and if those who for the moment may profit by them distinctly understand this and govern themselves accordingly, there will probably be little objection to this portion of the budget.
>
> Altogether, Mr. White seems to have made the best of a troublesome situation. It will be much easier to find fault with his proposals than to offer anything better as a temporary and convenient money raising scheme."

OTTAWA CITIZEN WAS SILENT.

THE OTTAWA CITIZEN, being anti-tariff and having a corps of writers that frequently write against each other, should not be classed as a Conservative newspaper. There is no honest reason for doing so, and at election times there are some extremely good reasons for not doing so. We agree with the London Free Press. The day after Mr. White's magnificent Budget Speech the Citizen had not a word of commendation.

The speech of the Finance Minister was perhaps the greatest, both from the point of view of the matter dealt with, the amounts involved, the danger of the situation, and the manner of its delivery, ever delivered in Canada.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

At an utterly mis-named "neutrality" meeting held recently in Boston, says an American newspaper — a meeting at which an officer of the Government of the United States was hissed and the Administration of that Government accused of deliberately playing into the hands of the Allies—the charge was made that the American newspapers were responsible for the general American sympathy with the foes of Germany. Such a statement it is hardly necessary to refute. The newspapers have printed in good faith such news as comes across the ocean, German wireless matter as well as all the rest. As to sentiment of the people of the country, if it is overwhelmingly in favour of the Allies, the cause lies in admitted and incontrovertible facts; in clearly understandable official statements; in certain cruel and oppressive results. In other words, the cause is Germany herself. No American newspaper helped perpetrate the Belgian outrage.

THE HON. W. T. WHITE, Minister of Finance, whose Budget Speech was delivered in the Commons a day or so ago, was born at Bronte, Ont., in 1866. Mr. White was educated at the public school, at the Oakville and Brampton High Schools, and at the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall. For a time he was in journalism, then practised law, but was best known through his management of the National Trust Company. In the fight over Reciprocity in 1911, Mr. White broke with the Liberal party, and joined the ranks of the Conservatives. On the formation of the Borden Government, he was called to the Cabinet, and given the portfolio of Finance. Mr. White is an effective speaker, and while he did not possess military experience, he brought to his position a trained mind and an intimate knowledge of finance.

THE HON. W. .T WHITE missed marriage licenses in the new taxation scheme. While the way is still open to matrimonial bliss, he should have appropriated by some duty half of the ministers' tips. The revenue from this source might surprise him.

A Missed Opportunity.

(Guelph Daily Herald.)

The Dominion Government is evidently contented that none of Canada's nickel is now reaching the enemy. With the British navy scouring the oceans it would be no easy matter to smuggle any considerable quantity of this valuable commodity to the enemy. Whatever damage has been done in this regard was evidently done long ago, and it is interesting to recall that many years ago Sir Charles Tupper drew the attention of the Laurier Administration to the valuable possession Canada has in its enormous supplies of nickel. He urged upon the then Liberal Administration the duty of conserving this great national resource, yet his pleading fell on deaf ears, for, though Canada's exports of nickel swelled to large proportions, Sir Wilfrid took no action to compel it being treated in Canada.

Economic Independence.

(From La Presse.)

Too long in the past the trade mark "imported," attached to merchandise, has been considered as proving that the article was ne plus ultra to quality and elegance. Thus many times the popular demand has tempted unscrupulous merchants to affix false labels in order to pass Canadian goods as imported. This was to please the snobs; they paid dearer and the turn was made. But now times are changed. The people now understand that in buying Canadian products by preference they furnish labour to national industry, they stimulate the spirit of enterprise of our manufacturers, and they give effective assistance to the development of the economic independence of our country.

Taft Points Out.

(St. Catharines Standard.)

Mr. Taft points out that the United States does not desire, by any action of her government, to encourage the policy of maintaining great national armaments in times of peace. This he believes she would do if she refused, at the present time, to sell munitions to the countries at war with Germany. The United States stands for peace, and is opposed to national policies such as produced Europe's "armed camp." She does not believe in making it incumbent upon all nations to maintain heavy armaments in time of peace, thus assisting the most warlike of nations towards triumph.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Wheat collapsed in price today 9½c a bushel, the most sensational break since the beginning of the war. The damage exceeds $100,000. Eugene Woodworth, who was passing the store when the explosion occurred, was hurled fifty feet and was taken to a hospital in a serious condition.

NORROY HELD BY GERMANS

Enemy Have Made Gain Near Pont-a-Mcusson

Desperate Fighting in Progress on Moselle

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The most severe fighting of the day in the western area occurred in Lorraine. From both the Paris and Berlin official reports it would appear that the Germans have had the better of the struggle.

Desperate fighting is in progress to the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, where the Germans already have captured the village of Norroy and obtain a footing on the surrounding heights, having occupied what is known as "Hill 365." The Berlin report states that 151 French prisoners were captured in the actions in this vicinity. Paris is silent on the question of losses, but the midnight offical report admits that heavy fighting is in progress, with the result in doubt. The acknowledgment is made that the Germans occupy Norroy, but it is stated that counter-attacks are being directed against them.

In Alsace, according to the Paris statement, the Germans have begun an offensive throught the valley of the River Lauch. Two columns are reported as advancing along the north and south banks of the river. French ski patrols have hampered the advance of these troops, according to Paris, but outpost fighting already has occurred and contact of the main armies is but a matter of hours. Singularly the Berlin official report makes no mention of this new movement.

Yesterday's report from the French War Office said:

"From the seat of the Meuse no infantry action is reported. There have been artillery duel in Belgium, between the Oise and the Aisne and in Champagne.

"In Lorraine, in the region of Pont-a-Moussons we have delivered a counter-attack against the enemy who had occupied Norroy and who had gained a foothold on a neighboring height. The engagement continues.

"No late advices have been received respecting the operations in the valley of the Lauch, in which the advance posts are engaged."

"In Belgium, the bombardment of Nieuport-Les-Bains, of our trenches in the dunes, and of the City of Ypres continued. Our artillery delivered a counter bombardment of the enemy's batteries.

"From the Lys to the Aisne there were intermittent cannonades. Near Noulette a detachment of the enemy which attempted to advacne upon our trenches was stopped short by the fire of our infantry.

"In Champagne there has been quite intense activity on the part of the enemy's artillery upon our front, before Rheims. The city has been again bombarded. Our fire upon the German trenches appears to have accomplished good results.

"From the Argonne to the Moselle the day was calm. In Lorraine German forces moved against those of our advanced elemnets which occupy the signal station at Xon, northeast of Pont-a-Monsson. The results of the battle are not yet known.

"In Alsace the enemy has taken the offensive through the valley of the Lauch with two columns, advancing along the north and south banks of the river. The march of these troops is reported to have been delayed and impeded by our ski patrols. They are now in contact with our most advanced line.

WARNING TO GERMANY.

Copenhagen Paper Points Out Error of Quarrelling With the U. S.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The Politiken of Copenhagen, commenting on the situation between the United States and Germany, is quoted in a despatch from the Danish capital to the Exchange Telegraph Co. as saying that "America is acting with all the energy which might be expected, and her note may be considered a grave warning, so great that war between Germany and the United States can no longer be regarded as an impossibility.

"President and Secretary of State Bryan," The Politiken says, "are peace-loving men, but public opinion in America and anti-German sentiment may drive them further than they desire."

The newspaper continues:

"America stands to win a lot merely by confiscating the German ships now interned in American harbors. Germany has everything to lose, both now and in the future, and it is earnestly to be hoped the American warning will not be without the desired effect in Berlin."

Socialists Discuss the War.

LONDON, Feb. 15. — Representative Socialists of the allied countries met in London yesterday under the presidency of James Keir Hardie, Socialist member of Parliament for Merthyr Tydfil, to discuss the international situation.

The subject of peace was not discussed, as the delegates had decided that "no hope of peace could be entertained until German militarism was crushed.

A PERSON OF SOME IMPORTANCE

By LLOYD OSBOURNE

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

"There is nothing the world will not condone nor forget, and in twenty years a new generation arises to whom the scandals of the old are of slight significance. My people love me; I have no need to surround myself with guards and secret agents, as I move among them, often with my little grandchildren on either side clinging to my hands; my reception is one to touch the heart. Surely, I said to myself, they will be with me if I recall my son. The sight of an old father, white haired and broken, holding out his arms in forgiveness, is one too human, too affecting to be met with scorn. They also will forgive, every father among them, every mother, every son. Then it was I began my search, sending forth agents to every corner of the globe. For years it went on without the least success, until my special bureau, whose service it was to read every paper printed, learned of you in Manaswan and seized a clew we were not slow to follow. We were impelled to extraordinary exertions. I sent my chief of the secret police to New York with unlimited powers and unlimited money. He surrounded you with an army of spies, who reported to him and then to me by cable. Everything was done, permissible or sometimes not permissible, to gain from you that information for which I would have given all the life I have left.

"There is the story, Mr. Broughton. I make no offers of reward; I make no threats. Both, I appreciate now, were mistaken. I simply ask you, beg you, to tell me where my son is."

For awhile Matt remained silent, too dazed to answer.

"I must make a single stipulation," he said at length. "That we land together, alone, you and I, and, if your majesty will permit, my wife, and if your son decides to stay you will promise to respect his wishes."

"He will come," said the emperor. "My son will not refuse."

Matt thought of Mirovna and was less positive. He wondered whether he should inform the old man of her existence, but refrained.

"I can do nothing without your majesty's promise," he said. "The decision must be left to the prince. He must be free to choose—free to stay if he prefers."

"Certainly I promise that," returned the emperor, with a touch of querulousness. "Compulsion would be worse than wrong. It would be ridiculous. Why do you still hesitate? It is not kind to keep me in suspense."

"I am not hesitating, your majesty. I am only asking myself whether you may not be mistaken in thinking my friend to be your son."

"Mistaken! How is it possible to be mistaken? That ring he gave you—it was one he always wore. Moreover, Mr. Satterlee is positive you recognised the miniature he showed you. Isn't that so?"

"Yes. The resemblance was remarkable."

"My son is now forty-seven years of age. Does that not accord?"

"It does, though he appears somewhat older."

"Is he not a violinist of exceptional talent? It was that reference in the newspaper accounts printed of you which first attracted our attention."

"Again you are right, though I would not call it talent, but genius."

"Look at this photograph—almost the last taken of him. Have you still any doubts?"

"No. It is John Mort."

"John Mort?"

"That is the name by which I have known him."

"Mort, you say? Mort! Ah, how like him to choose such a name! Tell me of him; describe him to me. I want to know everything—everything."

"But who was the gentleman who offered me $100,000 in Manaswan?"

"A celebrated criminal lawyer of New York, whom Frankasch, my chief of the secret police, retained among others to assist him. A very clever, able man, who proved himself invaluable."

"And the schooner, the Esmeralda—how was it contrived to have her timed to meet me?"

"She had been bought from the first and was manned by a special detail of picked naval officers. Frankasch suspected you would return to San Francisco, for that is the gateway to the Pacific, and it became a part of his plan to get you there as soon as he discovered he could not bribe you. The vessel lay there for over four months while no efforts were spared to make it impossible for you to remain in eastern America. Admiral von Tripwitz—to you Brandeis—spoke too little English, and therefore for that as well as other reasons it seemed wiser to have as nominal commander Agent Schwartz of the secret service."

"And how were those jewelers Snood & Hargreaves, induced to treat me as they did?"

"Oh, that was simple. They were shown long official cablegrams from Europe, vouched for by our consul, warning them that the ring had been stolen. When these matters were settled to their satisfaction and a substantial bond given they made no difficulty in surrendering the ring to the consulate. Your letter and then your telegram were handed to the consul, who on the telegraphed orders of Frankasch replied to you as he was directed. Of course he knew nothing. He merely obeyed orders. But you must not think our surveillance was limited to San Francisco. The whole western coast from Vancouver to San Diego and Mazatlan was under a constant watch."

"Your majesty will, of course, give directions that Snood & Hargreaves are undeceived? It would not be fair that I should remain in their estimation—a thief."

"No, no, no! You do not understand, Mr. Broughton. Frankasch never accused you of theft. It suited his purpose to make you out innocent—a sailor who had picked up the ring for a trifle, for he would have been glad had you brought suit against the jewelers in order to force from you the particulars of how you came into possession of the ring. It was even arranged to guide you to a lawyer who should betray your confidence! Shameful, yes detestable, but were we not justified?"

The old man unrolled a chart and flattened it out, not without difficulty, on the bed. Painfully excited, with his emaciated hands shaking and his voice senile and broken, he besought Matt to show him the spot where his son was.

"There," said Matt, running his finger over the sheet to a speck marked "Reef e. d." "There, your majesty!"

The old emperor bowed his head over the chart and seemed to be struggling with a terrible emotion. "Call Admiral von Todloben," he gasped, falling back on his pillows. "I must instruct him to alter the ship's course at once."

CHAPTER XVIII.

Lotoalofa.

LOTOALOFA was in sight, a straggling row of dots to those on the bridge—surf, beaches palms and shining shadowy lagoon to the watchers in the foretop. Gathered on the bridge, and surrounding the venerable monarch who reclined in a deck chair, was the little party privileged to be with him—Matt with binoculars to his eyes, standing beside stout old Von Todloben, and overtopping him by a head. Chris, an officer's cloak, seated on the elongated end of the emperor's chair, a position of honor to which she had been specially called. Brandeis, now Von Tripwitz, in a borrowed, ill fitting uniform, punctiliously remaining aloof from the frequent consultations.

As night closed in an animated discussion took place, with Matt in the center of the group, and for the moment the most important individual there, for it turned on him whether or not the vessel was to hold her position till morning, or venture the entrance of the lagoon by moonlight. Matt's own counsel was for caution, for the man-of-war drew twenty six feet of water, and while he felt reasonably sure of piloting her safely through the northern channel (there was another, the western channel, deeper but more tortuous), he shrank from assuming so great a responsibility in the dark. Admiral Von Todloben sided with Matt, as did the captain and the navigating lieutenant. But the old emperor, lying in the deck chair, could not be made to appreciate the risk. He reiterated his request to have the ship taken in at once. From suave he became impatient.

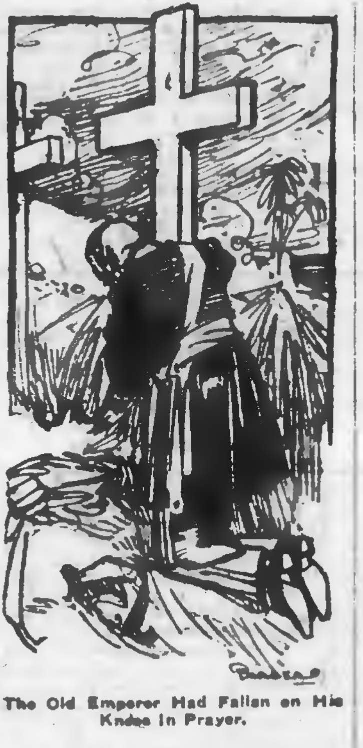
"Your majesty is unwise," he said bluntly, waiting till the old man had recovered his sorely shaken composure. "If you will permit me to suggest it, why not take one of the steam pinnaces, and let the ship hold off till dawn?"

This simple expedient was hotly resisted by the officers, to whom the personal security of the emperor was of almost sacred importance, but the latter was more than pleased with the idea and welcomed it enthusiastically. While the pinnace was being hoisted out and steam raised in her boiler, the warship's searchlight began to flash its dazzling and spreading beam, and as though in answer a spot of light glimmered on the horizon like a red-hot coal. It was a primitive beacon, reared and brightly burning on the beach of the island, to help the ship keep her position and ride out the night without danger.

Such concern for strangers surprised Matt and made him wonder. In his whole previous experience but three vessels had ever entered the lagoon, and John Mort had resented their intrusion and shortened their stay with the utmost bitterness, refusing them water and firewood, banning any intercourse and disputing, rifle in hand, their right to land. In contrast, this friendly beacon struck Matt as odd, indeed, and at variance with everything he remembered. But he had little time to give to such reflections, for the pinnace was soon ready, and they descended the gangway and took their places in her cockpit—the emperor, Chris and Von Todloben, with himself at the tiller.

The end of the pier was clustered with natives who stood waiting without a sound for the boat to approach. It made a bumpy landing at the stone steps, the boat hooks scraping the slimy sides of the pier and bringing it slowly to rest. Matt leaped out first, crying "Talofa" right and left and was mobbed in the throng of half naked humanity that surged about him, calling and repeating his name with unrestrained joy. What nose rubbing! What excitement! What a rush and jostle of Kanaka affection! But what was Peau saying. Peau, grave and dignified in even that press, with his chiefly carriage and earnest eyes? To be prepared for evil tidings! What did he mean? Where was the chief? What was all this about the hand of God?

"Where is he?" quavered the emperor. "Why is he not here?"



The Old Emperor Had Fallen on His Knees in Prayer.

"He is dead," Matt said at last.

The old man tottered and would have fallen had not Matt sustained him. He was assisted to an upturned canoe, where he sat, half fainting, supported by Von Todloben. He beckoned Matt to him and in a tone strangely colorless and so low it was almost a whisper, asked, "When did it happen?"

"He tells me it was about four months ago," returned Matt. "It was a fever; he was hardly ill two days, though for some time before he had suffered attacks of pain; he passed away suddenly and was conscious and without any thought he was in danger till an hour before the end."

"And did he leave no word, no letter?"

Matt translated the question to Peau.

"No, excellency," replied the latter in Samoan. "Though I asked him for one in our protection lest we be accused of his death. But he answered mockingly he did not intend to die, and was not Mirovna there, besides, to speak for us?"

Matt repeated this with some omissions. Then determining to conceal nothing he went on: "He was not alone, your majesty; he had with him here a young and beautiful woman, who loved him devotedly and who killed herself on his grave. He called her Mirovna—a very beautiful woman. They are buried side by side."

The old man listened unmoved. "It is not for me to judge her," he said. And with this comment never referred to Mirovna again, remaining silent for a long while and sunk in a sort of stupor. At last he rose unsteadily to his feet and asked to be taken to the grave. "It is the end of my long journey," he said. "The end of many, many things."

The little party, guided by Peau, found themselves in a barren region broken in little hillocks and open to the unshaded brilliancy of the moon.

Here, in a sandy hollow and unutterably melancholy in their aspect, stood two small wooden crosses painted white, surmounting a pair of narrow mounds side by side.

They stopped, and the white men uncovered. Peau, who wore nothing on his glistening, black hair, reverently inclined his head.

"Which is my son's?" asked the emperor, gazing at the ground.

Peau pointed at the nearest grave.

"The chief sleeps there," he said in native to Matt.

The old emperor had fallen on his knees in prayer with one arm about the cross. It seemed a sacrilege to watch him, though not an eye was dry and rugged Von Todloben was shaking with sobs. The unceasing moan of the surf, the weirdness and loneliness of the spot, that frail, tragic figure crouching in the moonlight—all affected the little company profoundly.

Nothing was said; the unspoken wish was obeyed. They slowly retraced their steps, the old man walking apart, unassisted. In this funereal manner they reached the pier, where the emperor at last broke the oppressive silence.

"And you?" he asked, turning to Matt. "Tell me what I may do for you. Tell me how I can reward you."

Matt did not answer, though perplexity and dismay were evident on his face.

"You are right," continued the emperor. "It is for me to give, not for you to ask. Would it please you—would it content you—to remain on this island and receive it from me as a gift?"

"Oh, your majesty, nothing in the world could make me happier."

"Then assemble these savages and let us inform them that you are now the master."

"It is not necessary, your majesty. They will believe me when I tell them."

"And I must do more," went on the old man, with pathetic earnestness. "That sum once offered you as a bribe and so honorably refused—it must also be yours. I shall send it to you by a vessel, and if then you find this isolation greater than you can bear my officers will be instructed to take you wherever you wish."

Matt was overwhelmed.

"I should be most glad of the vessel," he said after stammering his thanks. "But as for money, what there is here must already be a fortune."

"Accept the one from me and the other from my son," returned the emperor. "Goodby, my friend, and keep us both in your remembrance, as I on my part will ever cherish you in mine."

With another word to Chris, whose hand he bent over and saluted with stately courtesy, he descended into the pinnace and took his place with Von Todloben. The latter looked up and raised his cap. Even as he did so the boat was pushed off, and the water began to boil under her stern. A moment later she was skimming over the lagoon toward the lights of the man-of-war, now twinkling at the entrance of the pass. Matt and Chris, hand in hand, gazed after her spellbound.

A deprecatory cough brought them back to earth.

"The great house has been prepared for the reception of your excellencies," said Peau. "And if it be your high chief desire a trifle repast awaits your condescension."

THE END.

Train and Track.

The new gas-electric railroad cars are extensively used in Germany.

British railways use motorcars in calling for and delivering freight, and they also endeavor to increase their passenger traffic in parts of the country which their rail lines do not reach by means of road motor service.

A naphthalene locomotive just constructed at the Creusot works in France weighs eighteen tons, develops seventy horsepower, costs 0.7 cent per hour to operate and is expected to be used where water is scarce or bad as for military operations.

Chance For Punctures.

"You know the road to perdition is paved with good intentions."

"I wonder what kind of an auto track they would make?"

"Very dangerous."

"And why?"

"Too many broken bottles are mixed in with them."

Something to Bump.

Were flying but confined to flight
We'd hold the sport in more regard,
But in the end one must alight,
And this old earth is mighty hard.

Not So Easy.

"Remarkable fellow, Brown."

"That so?"

"Yes."

"What is remarkable about him?"

"He is rich."

"There are lots of rich men."

"Yes, but Brown got rich and stays rich."

The Improved Kind.

"Was he overjoyed when you called at his office?"

"No; he said I butted in and wrecked a train of thought."

"No damage, I hope."

"Mercy, no! It was equipped with hot air brakes."

THE GREATEST EMPIRE THAT HAS EXISTED

Services Commemorative of Peace Sunday at Charlotte St.

The services in Charlotte Street Methodist Church yesterday were commemorative of the hundred years of peace that have reigned between Canada, or rather the British Empire, and the United States. The pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., preached at both services, his subject in the morning being the Hundred Years of Peace between Britain and the United States, and in the evening the Empire.

At the evening service his text was "Our Citizenship is in Heaven." Paul was proud he was a Roman citizen. The Roman state was held to be of Divine origin, some of the Emperors even claiming to be gods. At the present time the state exists for the citizen. In Germany the people exist for the state. The British Cabinet is responsible to the people, the German Cabinet to the Emperor.

Our Empire is the greatest that has existed in extent, population and power. It is a most cosmopolitan Empire, yet its population is held together without force.

Britain is a world power. She has been called a robber. While this is hardly true and while she has done things that should not have been done yet the people she has taken charge of are better for it in every way. That is why they are all loyal.

The British Empire keeps renewing its age. Britain has taken possession of the vacant lands of the world where the British people can breed stalwart British men without deterioration. The strategic naval points and the vantage points in commerce are in Britain's hands. The reason is that there is liberty under the British flag. It underlies the Bill of Rights and the emancipation of the negro. individual right is one of the greatest points in British government. The same spirit is in the colonies, now no longer colonies but overseas dominions. It is the spirit that Righteousness exalteth a nation.

The navy and army are not the great force in the unity of the Empire but the principles they represent. If England became false to those principles she would be swept away.

Paul says our citizenship is in Heaven. He does not say was, or will be. He had a double citizenship. We should not forget our citizenship, but it is much more lamentable to forget our heavenly citizenship. Our freedom depended, the speaker concluded, on maintaining this double citizenship.

The church was suitably decorated with Union Jacks and Stars and Stripes.

The music was appropriate to the occasion and was well rendered. Mr. Harold Lee took the solo part in the anthems, the morning one being "Recessional" by De Koven. Miss Ada Richardson's solo was "There's a land," by Allison. The evening anthem was "Land of Hope and Glory" by Elgar, and the solo rendered by Miss Richardson was "O Canada," the choir singing the chorus.

$20,000 FOR THOSE LEFT BEHIND BY MEN UNDER ARMS

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—The end of last year Canada had paid $11,885,107 for war in allowances to rank and file and maintenance of men and horses. Saturday the paymaster of the militia department sent out $20,000 a month for assigned pay and separation allowances to men on service in Europe and Canada. About fifteen per cent. of the men on active service are married and five per cent. were the supporters of widowed mothers. In the case of the first contingent a majority of the men assigned a portion of their pay to dependents.

LOCAL MAN GETS LICENSE OF HOTEL AT LINDSAY

Lindsay, Feb. 15.—At a meeting of the License Commissioners Saturday, the application of Mr. James Houlihan, of Peterborough, for a transfer of the King Edward Hotel license was considered. The Commissioners gave the application favorable consideration and the new proprietor will take possession at once. He was formerly a bartender at the Grand Hotel in Peterborough.

Mr. A. J. Ashmore, the late proprietor, will reside in Lindsay.

SESSION OPENS

Adjournment will be made on Wednesday in honor of the memory of the late Premier, Sir James Whitney, and business will begin on Thursday.

The war promises to be reflected in all the deliberations of the members. One of the most important measures will be a Government bill providing for a moratorium. Its purpose will be to prevent the hasty foreclosure of mortgages and the unfair action of those in a position to bear heavily on others under financial obligations to them.

Great interest centres in the Government bill on highways. Provision has been made for the expenditure of $30,000,000 on Ontario roads, and arrangement will likely be made for the advancing of the first instalment. That the beginning of this project would assist in solving unemployment difficulties is taken in some quarters to argue for a material beginning.

Temperance legislation of a more or less radical nature is also expected. There will be a measure proposed for the purpose of restricting the drinking of intoxicants by uniformed soldiers. Increase of revenue will be sought in all likelihood by increasing the bar sales tax or raising license fees, and the Government may decide to place all licenses under one broad commission.

U. S. Parcel Held Up.

LUXEMBURG, Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, Feb. 15.—The German military authorities here have refused to transmit a package containing the American consular agent's accounts because it was sealed in an envelope addressed to the State Department at Washington. The package, under instructions from the commandant, was returned to the agent unopened.

Interference by the German authorities with United States official correspondence already has elicited a protest from the State Department at Washington.

The state department at Washington has notified Ambassador Gerard to bring to the notice of the German authorities Ambassador Van Dyke's complaint that his official despatches as ambassador of Holland to the Duchy of Luxemburg, were held up by a German military commander at Treves.

$5 FINE FOR BAD BEHAVIOR

Herb Peoples and Herb Baker Both Short Grained

Herbert Baker charged with using abusive and insulting language towards Herbert Peoples, pleaded not guilty in Police Court this morning.

"I wasn't speaking to the man," said Baker.

Peoples' story was to the effect that as he was walking on George Street, last Thursday night, Baker walked close to him and called him a vile name.

"I kept going on," said Peoples, "and he repeated the insult. He's been pitched out of the house for interfering."

Peoples said he walked to the Arcade, and returned to George Street by way of Simcoe Street. Then he walked north as he did not wish to have a row.

To Mr. Widdifield, who defended Baker, witness admitted he had been in police court as a defendant. He was alone at the time and so was Baker.

Dennis Conway, a boarder at 332 Water Street, did not hear any words between the two. After Peoples passed, Baker said he did not think very much of him for being in Peoples' company. "I told him I didn't know anything about Peoples." He said Peoples had got him into trouble and he would get me into trouble. My impression was that he had had a few drinks, and also that he was looking for a row.

Baker in his defence said Peoples came to him from across the road. He was standing beside a post. Peoples passed by but he (defendant) did not say anything. Neither did Peoples speak. He did not see Peoples again that night. Peoples he said had always tried to get him into trouble.

To the Chief witness said he did not know anything about Peoples. "You promised me that you would not interfere with him?" "Yes."

"You both shook hands?" "Yes."

"How many drinks did you have?"

"I only had tea and water."

"Did you give liquor to a black lister last week?" "No."

John Sutherland said Baker was with him between 7.30 and 8 o'clock that night. Baker and Peoples used to board where he did and there was always a bone of contention between them. He gave Baker a good character.

Peoples he said was a little bit cranky at times. Both were short-grained.

"Men that have a grudge are dangerous," said his worship in his judgment, in which he found Baker guilty and imposed a fine of $5 and costs of $3.85.

"Men who provoke rows of this sort should be punished," returned his worship when Mr. Widdifield asked for a reduction of the fine.

Wm. Tevins was fined $2 and costs of $3.75 for using profane language.

Placed on Blacklist.

Cyril Moher said he was not guilty of having been found drunk.

Jas. McCleggott said he saw Moher in two hotels and on Hunter Street. He was drinking in both hotels. Defendant, he said, would drink whenever he could get it and he squandered his money. He had four sisters, his father and mother being dead. He believed it would be a help to have him placed on the blacklist261MII him placed on the prohibited list.

His Worship made an order to have Moher placed on the blacklist.

"Graduating," commented his worship, when Moher said he was twenty-one years old.

$1 Per Week.

"I've made arrangements to give her $1 and keep away from her," said Wm. McCliggott, whose case had been enlarged in the hope that he and his wife would live in peace.

"He's my lawful husband and I'd like him to come home," said Mrs. McCliggott. His Worship suggested divorce but Mrs. McCliggott protested against having another husband.

She supposed she would have to be contented.

FIREWORK BALLONS WERE MISTAKEN FOR AEROPLANES

actly. However, he understood that they fell in the river.

A searchlight on the roof of one of the local theatres is scouring the sky watching for the invaders.

Sharpshooters have been told off to various points of vantage on Parliament Hill. All picked shots of the Dominion police are fully armed.

The greatest excitement prevails and the Premier and Cabinet Ministers are being informed from time to time as to the situation. The Duchess of Connaught is also being kept informed. The only light on Rideau Hall or the Government buildings are those in rooms which have heavy blinds and shutters.

Notices have been sent out to Smith's Falls, Perth, Kemptville, Merrickville and other towns in eastern Ontario to keep a sharp look out and report at once if any of the aeroplanes are seen. Later communication with Brockville says that the aeroplanes passed over Morristown, N.Y., on their way over the St. Lawrence.

A few months ago an order was issued by the Government and notices posted that any aeroplanes flying over Canadian territory without authority would be dealt with as enemies.

Passed Over Brockville.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 15. — Four aeroplanes passed over this city at 9.15 last night and sped in the direction of Ottawa. The city was wildly excited by the sight of the aircraft, which seemed to burst into sight almost right overhead. The first machine was flying very rapidly and very high. Very little could be seen, but the unmistakable sounds of the whirring motor made the presence of the aircraft known. Five minutes later the second machine could be heard. In crossing the river three fire balls were dropped. They were dropped at one minute intervals. In dropping they left a streak of light, from where they had been thrown out, and it was this that attracted the attention of the residents. Hundreds of feet the three lights fell. They dropped into the river and extinguished. It is not thought they were explosive, although, if they had been, they would not have exploded in the river. They were apparently dropped to show the airmen their direction.

A few minutes later another machine passed over the east end of the city. In another interval a machine came over the other end of the city.

Big Revenue Expected.

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—The war tax of one cent on letters and postcards, when it comes into effect, will yield a very considerable revenue. During last fiscal year the number of letters mailed in Canada was 673,000,000 and postcards 64,000,000, a total of 737,000,000. If the same number were mailed in the coming year, they would pay in war taxes $7,370,000. Even allowing for a substantial shrinkage in business and social letters, the revenue should be at least four or five million dollars.

Two British Airmen Killed?

BERLIN, Feb. 15.—(Via London.)—Repeated attempts have been made of late, by British and French airmen, to reach Brussels. On Thursday of last week, a British aeroplane approached the Belgian capital presumably to bombard the German camp there. A German aeroplane ascended and a fierce fight ensued, ending in victory for the German. The British machine suddenly crashed to the ground and its two occupants were picked up dead.

QUEEN ELIZABETH READY

Great Britain's Biggest Dreadnought Passes Her Trials

LONDON, Feb. 15.—H. M. S. Queen Elizabeth, Britain's newest Dreadnought, passed her trials last week, and is now waiting at Portland with her full crew on board. She is a ship of 27,500 tons, 2,000 tons more than the Audacious, whose crew she has taken over. She carries eight fifteen-inch guns and 16 six-inch, with 12 anti-airship guns and four submerged torpedo tubes. She was built at Portsmouth, and was completed in October last. The Queen Elizabeth is equipped with Parsons turbines, and burns only oil. She is heavily armored against aerial attack and the estimated cost is $12,000,000. The designer estimates she will make 25 knots.

The international joint commission at Ottawa will hear applications from the St. Croix Water Power Co. of Maine, and from the Sprague's Falls Manufacturing Co. of Canada, for rights to obstruct and divert the St. Croix River near Grand Falls. The St. Croix is an international boundary water.

OBITUARY

JAMES GALLAGHER.

James Gallagher, who had been an inmate at the House of Providence, passed away on Sunday, aged 77. The funeral was held this morning to the Church of the Immaculate Conception and St. Peter's cemetery.

ALEXANDER YETTS.

An old and highly respected resident of Smith passed away at his home early this morning in the person of Alexander Yetts. He was troubled with asthma and had been accustomed to rest in his chair and this morning other members of the household noticing a light in his room, went in and found him dead. He was 79 years of age and was unmarried. He leaves one sister, Miss Mary Yetts, to mourn his loss. The late Mr. Yetts was born in Scotland and came to this country when a boy, Asphodel being his first place of residence. He settled in Smith about fifty years ago and has resided there ever since. About that time he travelled extensively visiting New Zealand and other countries. The funeral will take place from his late residence, lot 14, con. 5, Smith, at 2.30 on Wednesday, Feb. 17th, to Little Lake cemetery. There will be a service at the house at 2 o'clock. Rev. James Rollins will officiate.

Goodyear TIRE PRICES Again Reduced

For the Third Time in Less than Two Years, Saving the User in All an Average of 37 Per Cent.

When war began we resolved to keep our factory wheels moving. And now the new war tax, severe as it seems to some, has only fired our determination more.

By March 1 we will double the capacity of our plant at Bowmanville, Ont.

And instead of raising our prices we announce a radical reduction.

Yet every particle of material that goes into Goodyear Automobile Tires is subject to the War Tax. And this Company---not its Customers---will pay this extra cost.

We will give the user more in tire value than his money ever bought before.

Due to Gains

In other years as rubber came down in price, we lowered our tire prices apace.

As men and methods improved, we improved Goodyear quality. To give you the utmost at the lowest fair margin of profit has always been Goodyear's business-religion.

As our output multiplied, reducing factory cost, our prices came down with it. Last year alone the sales of Goodyear Made-in-Canada Tires were 29 per cent. greater than the year before.

Men bought, in numbers, more than one Goodyear Tire for every car in Canada.

We offer this---not as a boost---but as certain evidence that proves how Goodyear Tires are winning pluralities throughout the Dominion.

It shows why we double our capacity. It shows why we can lower prices this way.

For this is our third reduction in less than two years. And these three Goodyear reductions have saved you a total of 37 per cent. on tire prices.

GOODYEAR
MADE IN CANADA
Fortified Tires

Exclusive Features

Men call them Goodyear Fortified Tires because in five costly ways they combat tire trouble. And these are Goodyear ways---no other maker has them. You get them regardless of price reductions.

Please learn these five---they are listed here:

Fortified Against Rim-Cuts---by our No-Rim-Cut Feature: Against Blow-Outs---by our "On-Air" Cure; Against Loose Treads by many Rubber Rivets. Against Insecurity by 126 braided Piano Wires; Against Punctures and Skidding—by our double thick All-Weather Tread.

For a long, long time most tires have sold much above Goodyear's prices. Some makers have asked you one-third higher. A few have sold lower and always will, because of less rubber, less science in construction.

But we give you now, as we have always, more for the money than any rival tire can offer.

We can do it, remember, because of the large number of men that Goodyears are winning. Then also because we are content with small profit per tire.

This policy in four short years, has put these Tires at the top.

BELLEVILLE LADIES MAKE GOOD SCORES IN RIFLE SHOOTING

Belleville, Feb. 15.—A very great interest has been taken in the city recently in rifle shooting and the scoring has been remarkably high. The men's club has been in existence about two years, and a little over a year ago the local ladies also got together, with the result that after a few week's practice their scores are as good and in some instances better than a good many of the marksmen of the male association. Great credit is due to the efforts of Mrs. Wheatley and Miss M. B. Falkiner for this efficiency amongst the ladies. A challenge was issued by them a short time ago, to shoot a match against the men which was accepted and took place in the Armouries. The ladies are to be greatly complimented on the exfficelent showing they made, losing only by 7 points. The conditions were: distance, 25 yards, half inch invisible bull's eye. Six members a side, 16 shots .22 calibre rifle. Highest possible score 100.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN FLAGS WERE ENTWINED

Buffalo, Feb. 15.—Services commemorative of one hundred years of peace, following the ratification of the Treaty of Ghent, were held in all the churches of this city yesterday. Mingled with prayers and hymns of thanksgiving was a deep note of supplication for peace in the Old World, and the hope was expressed in many of the sermons that the United States ultimately would become the peacemaker among the warring nations.

This sentiment found a response from the other side of the International border in the sermon of the Rev. R. F. Renison, D.D., of Hamilton, Ont., who occupied the pulpit at special services in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

"Never," he said, "has there been such an opportunity for America to win the moral leadership of the world. If lust of power! if selfish blindness should make you take the lesser part, the opportunity never will return. But if it be known among the nations that this country stands for freedom, for justice and for brotherhood of mankind, happy shalt thou be."

The pulpits in many of the churches were decorated with entwined British and American flags.

PUT TAX ON CUPID.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—It is understood today that the Ontario Government is preparing a schedule of war taxes, one feature of which will be the doubling of the cost of marriage licenses. Last year there were twenty-seven thousand marriages in the province of which twenty-four thousand five hundred were by $2 license. The possible doubling of the fee would mean an extra fifty thousand dollars revenue.

BASEBALL MEETING.

Business of importance as to the future of baseball in Peterborough will be discussed.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS HEARD REV. DR. YOUNG

George Street Methodists Celebrate Forty-Ninth Anniversary With Former Pastor in the Pulpit

The 49th anniversary of George Street Methodist Church was observed yesterday by services fully in keeping with such an occasion. Congregations that filled the church rallied at morning and evening services, and the enjoyable commemoration of the day was enhanced by the presence in the pulpit of a former pastor, Rev. W. R. Young, D.D., of Toronto. Many members welcomed him and were delighted with the characteristic vigor and beauty that marked his two messages.

Truth in Jesus was the theme upon which he dealt at night taking a text from Ephesians 4.21, "As the Truth is in Jesus."

Jesus Christ spoke words of truth which caused even his enemies to wonder he said. People should not limit their thought in speaking this truth to the relation between the Teacher and the truth. The closer the intimacy between Christ and the truth; between the preacher and his sermon, the more effective would be the message. Take any of the writers of the Bible and the lessons they taught. Not one of them was a bit lessened by the elimination of the personal. But is was impossible to eliminate Jesus from His messages. John cried "I am the voice of one crying from the wilderness," but Jesus said "I am the truth, the light and the way." Truth in Jesus was Jesus himself, in character, in person, in life, in death. Men were not saved by believing in Jesus alone but by believing in the words of Jesus.

Creeds Had Their Place.

Rev. Dr. Young spoke on creeds in their relation to truth. Creeds had their place but to find real saving truth they must only be taken as guides. Truth in Jesus was the main creed.

We were living in an age of enquiry and speculation said Mr. Young. A great portion of our lives was taken up in trying to answer the whys of many things. There were certain doubts in our mind regarding expressions of fundamental truths concerning our religion. He once heard a discussion in a men's Bible class over whether Deborah was a suffragette. But it was possible for men to speculate upon the Bible and yet preserve their purity and integrity of life. In youth right and wrong were strongly impressed upon our minds and consciences, but later when we got into social, political and business life right and wrong got so hopelessly intermingled that it was almost impossible to find the distinction in many lives. Many men were looked upon as ideals, but in some moment of temptation fell and the idol shattered. That man might have been leading a double life for years. The distinction between right and wrong was never so much needed in the world as at this very hour.

There were many men whose lives seemed purposeless. With some it was a continual round of drudgery and with others a round of social slavery.

Truth in Jesus should be cultivated amid the shadows of failures or in the heights of success.

Rev. Mr. Young told the story of Valentine Worth, who, converted from sin by Moody endeavored to live a better life. But people disbelieved in his conversion and he found no one who would employ him. Finally the sheriff of St. Louis after having him shadowed to see if he was really seeking to live an honest, decent life, found out that he was sincere and offered him a position and three years later Valentine Worth was one of the most trusted officers of the sheriff's force and he attributed it all to his grip upon God.

There will be a congregational rally in George Street church tonight when the commemoration of the anniversary will be continued.

HUNDRED YEARS OF PEACE LET IT BE ONE THOUSAND

Two Flags as One Not an Impossibility for the Future Says Rev. Jas. Rollins.

During his discourse at St. Andrew's Church, last evening, Rev. Jas. Rollins, B.A., did not think it impossible for the future to see the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes as one flag—the flag of the Anglo-Saxons. He said the thought was good enough to come true. "I am optimistic enough," he said, "to believe that it is the good that does come true in the long run. The best things we can conceive; the best things we can think are most likely to come true. We should conduct our life with our neighbors so that the peace of one hundred years will grow into a peace of one thousand years until it shall be impossible for any exigency to force us to settle our disputes by arbitrament of the sword instead of arbitrament of justice."

The text was I Samuel, chapter 20, verse 16: So Jonathan made a covenant with the house of David.

The real text, the preacher said was to be found in the newspapers, in the magazines and on the lips of every man and woman—one hundred years of peace—the outcome of a covenant made one hundred years ago.

As one American writer has said: The greatest gift of the war was the treaty with Great Britain, which ended the war. The terms of that treaty, Mr. Rollins pointed out, were moderated until little was left of that which each nation at first deemed absolutely necessary, save the general wish for peace. And we must remember that neither nation was exhausted by the war.

The leading causes of the war were briefly related. It was remarkable he said that the situation then was like that of today and against which the government of the United States entered so lately its protest. In those days shipping trade was in the hands of United States to a larger extent than today. United States then had as great a grievance against France as with Britain. Great Britain set up the claim not merely that she had the right to investigate any American ship for contraband but also that she had the right to investigate any ship for British born sailors. United States felt that Britain should abandon that claim. This difference was the cause of the war more than anything else. But, the preacher explained, this and other claims by the nations did not figure in the treaty.

It was signed Christmas Eve, 1814, at Ghent but it was not till January 8, 1915, that the last shot of the war was fired. Three years later another treaty decided the boundary of the two countries and for a solemn hundred years not a shot had been fired.

War Made Repellant.

The kinship thus created had made war repellant. "While we had had periods of sharp differences of opinion, we have kept our heads and for the most part our tongues and this has increased respect and confidence of the American people in our good intentions."

In the present war the United States was neutral but there was no doubt as to the sentiment of the people towards us and our cause.

At the time of the Spanish-American war when it seemed that European nations would be embroiled, Great Britain took pains to let it be known with whom she would throw in her lot. That was a most natural thing, because of the kinship that existed.

The nations of the world were coming to realize the great fact that we all stand for the same thing—that we cherish very largely the same ideals, aspirations and development the kindred outlook. For these the nations are willing to make sacrifice, even to the sacrifice of their sons.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The postponed meeting of the Finance Committee will be held this evening at 8 o'clock. It has been decided to hold a men's mass meeting in the Empire Theatre Sunday afternoon next at 4.15 o'clock. Mr. H. H. Stevens, M.P., of Vancouver, will address the meeting, using for his subject "Canada's Duty to Her Immigrants." Mr. Stevens is considered the leading authority in the Dominion on the subject of immigration, and is a very enthusiastic and entertaining speaker, so it is expected that the theatre will be filled to its full capacity.

FAMILY OF FIGHTERS.

Bobcaygeon Independent.—Sergt. Major Sims, in a letter received from his home in England, learns that his brother had his arm shot off while fighting in the trenches at Soissons. The shoulder splintered and the arm so badly damaged that amputation was necessary. The sergeant has one brother on H.M.S. Lynotte and out of a family of five sons four are soldiers in the British army.

Simple Living Economy

Isn't scrimping one's food, or subsisting on an unpalatable diet, but it's cutting out indigestibles, surplus quantities; and planning meals to balance up essential food values.

The ordinary diet is generally deficient in some of these values, such as the mineral elements, the lack of which is often responsible for anemia, listlessness, nervous breakdown and general inefficiency.

A daily ration of

Grape-Nuts FOOD

has been a boon to thousands. Made of prime, hard wheat and malted barley, it contains all the nutriment including the vital mineral elements, phosphate of potash, etc., which Nature has bountifully stored in these rich food grains.

Grape-Nuts is long-baked, very easy to digest, and comes ready to eat from the package. A crisp, appetizing food that combines good, simple living and true economy.

SEIZE ALL OATS

German Government Takes Steps to Conserve Food Supply

BERLIN, Feb. 15.—(Via London.)—The Bundesrath yesterday decided to expropriate all the domestic stocks of oats, with the exception of seed oats and the grain necessary for fodder for horses. The order becomes effective to-morrow.

The Bundesrath also raised the maximum price of oats by 50 marks ($12.50) per metric ton.

The action of the Bundesrath, or federal council, in expropriating the domestic stocks of oats is a further step in the direction of the German Government's policy of conserving the food supply of the country. On Jan. 26 the federal council ordered the seizure by Feb. 1 of all stocks of corn, wheat and flour.

The Ontario County Council has taken over the Children's Shelter as a county institution, and will contribute $1,200 a year to its maintenance.

ENEMY HALTED BY RUSSIANS

Grand Duke's Army Makes Swift Move in East Prussia

Result of Rapid Operations is to Prevent Recurrence of the Disaster at Tannenburg—Von Hindenburg Hopes by Weight of Numbers to Put East Prussia in Safety

PETROGRAD, Feb. 15.—North the battle line now stretches over a front 80 miles wide, from the Nieman due east to Tilsit, where there is fighting on the frontier down to the southeast corner of East Prussia. This positional culmination of the well-masked and swiftly conducted advance across both ends of East Prussia, is in itself a bitter disappointment for the Germans. Unquestionably Von Hindenburg projected the last operations in the north in the belief that he could bring off another Tannenberg. The Russians recently got some distance across the old scene of the battles of the early days of the war. The army in the north was in a region of plains partly covered with bare woods. It reached the neighborhood of Insterburg and Tilsit, when a strong German column formed at Konigsburg, was shot forward at great speed into the gap between the Niemen and Insterburg. Concurrently with this advance Von Hindenburg sent another flying column across the northern edge of Poland behind a screen of cavalry, which has been in continuous fighting contact with the Russians in the region of Serpetz and Mlava for a fortnight. The southern German line has been pushed into East Prussia south of the region where the Russians had long been facing the German entrenched positions among the lakes.

The Russian left wing had time to draw into more open country and turned upon the Germans on the plain near Lyck where they still hold back the Germans, and where they inflicted severe losses on them. The aggregate result of Von Hindenburg's major tactics is that he must bring still more men into the wide space of the comparatively flat country below the Niemen or submit to renewed pressure westward by the Russians, whose northern army is still practically intact. Its only appreciable loss fell on one of the divisions which had not time to link up with the main unit. The ardent hope of the Kaiser that he could by this last rush campaign, place East Prussia in comparative security and turn a substantial proportion of his men who had been hitherto held there, to the western theatre of war for the great battle of the spring, must be abandoned.

The entire length of the frontier in East Prussia remains open for battles on a large scale. The first of them is already preparing in formidable dimensions. A thaw has set in among the river courses of central Poland, but Mackensen is busy moving his columns across the muddy fields under Russian shell fire. The emptiness of his comrade's achievements in the north may impel him to make yet another onslaught on the Russian lines along the Rawka position.

In the Carpathians the situation continues satisfactory. The Russians have pressed on behind the head waters of the San and have seized some fortified positions which the German engineers had prepared for the Austrians. German troops are still fighting desperately for the heights which control the Muukkacz road, and part of one of their divisions has entrenched itself only 40 paces from the head of the rock shelters held by the Russians. A thorough scrutiny of the situation has convinced observers that the reports from Bucharest of the Austro-German campaign against Serbia having already begun, are untrue. Nearly all the troops which might have been thrown against Serbia have had to be sent to meet the Russians in the Carpathians. Probably all the other spare units are needed for Bukowina.

POINCARE INSPECTS TROOPS.

Alsatians Welcome French President With Tears of Joy.

PARIS, Feb. 15.—President Poincare and Minister of War Millerand, who are on a tour of inspection of the western battle front, were received enthusiastically by the people of Alsace. Tears of joy streamed down the faces of the older inhabitants, while younger persons, dressed in the national Alsatian costume, presented hand-made gifts to the French chief executive. The houses in the province were decorated with tri-color flags which had been hidden in Alsace since 1870. The mayors of the various towns expressed their gratitude at the deliverance by France in voices choked with emotion.

President Poincare inspected the French trenches and decorated several officers and men for valor.

The President said that he was well satisfied with the healthy appearance of the troops and he also commended the remarkable strength and cunning of the fortifications.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

WHY COMISKEY COPPED COLLINS FOR HIS TEAM

Club Also Put Under Charge of New Manager

Charles A. Comiskey comes out in the special Eddie Collins March number of the Baseball Magazine with a statement as to why he purchased Collins. He also gives the interested public an inkling of his reason for appointing his new manager, Clarence Rowland. Comiskey says:

I have watched Collins come into the league and develop. While following his daily performances in contending against our club on the south side grounds, I have become convinced that he was without a doubt as great a ball player from every angle as any playing the infield today. I secured him for the White Sox fans simply because I considered him a premier, all-round player in batting, base-running and fielding.

Still another advantage in Collins is his quick-thinking brain, a most essential talent in the ball club contending for a pennant. If the White Sox are fortunate enough to have his services throughout the championship season of 1915, I believe he will prove to the fans of this country that he is the greatest exponent of quick thinking, the brainiest player in the game.

It is always my aim to give the patrons of the Sox a heavy hitter whenever such a player appears and can be gotten for money or the equivalent. My energy is expended at all times in searching through the minor leagues for heavy-hitting talent that will make my ball club a pennant-winning one. Chappelle was sought by every ball club in both major leagues. He was touted as a wonder not only by other scouts but by my own also as probably the greatest minor league hitter of the time. I made up my mind I would secure him at any price, and did not see how I could make a mistake, as all the experts seemed agreed about him and so many clubs wanted him. So I secured him for my club for the main purpose of strengthening the White Sox in the batting line-up. But unfortunately for the Sox, Chappelle was taken down with blood-poisoning in our spring practice of 1914 and so has been unable up to the present time to give me the service they say he is capable of giving in the batting line. However good a man may be, the owner cannot guard against his being sick, and in consequence never knows how much or how little he may count upon the very player he needs most.

I am putting the club in charge of a new manager this year, which may have caused surprise to some people. This is always an important move, but I have considered it carefully. Rowland is by no means a new man to me. I have been watching his work most carefully in the minor leagues for the past seven or eight years, and have been greatly impressed with his aggressiveness and his judgment. He is particularly good at picking ball players, and has sent up quite a few to the White Sox during that time.

I cannot say that we will win the pennant this year. I hope we may; but a pennant is always a great uncertainty. But I can say that I have done what I could to bring a pennant to Chicago. And that is all I can do.

BLIND TRAINER HANDLES HORSE MINUS ONE EYE

Queer Combination That is Sometimes a Winner on Mexican Track

"Juarez" is much like any other race course after all," remarked a recent visitor to the track, "in spite of the fact that it is in Mexico, for it is an Americanized bit of that rebellion-ridden land. It reminded me more of Guttenberg of the old merry-go-round days than anything else. Its most striking novelty is a blind trainer with a blind horse. The horse runs in the races and wins occasionally, I am told.

"Albert Wilkinson, of Butte, Mon., is the trainer and Alco is the horse. Wilkinson is blind in both eyes, but the horse is blind only in one. Wilkinson gets out with the other trainers every morning and puts his single racer through his regular exercise, and with considerable judgment as to how a horse should be trained, so the other trainers tell me. He goes to the rail with his head lad, who acts as his eyes during the process, and 'clocks' the animal as he goes through his work, though Wilkinson directs what should be done with the horse at all times. I happened to see him working the horse through the stretch one day, and it was weird, as well as pathetic, to see Wilkinson looking out in the direction of the track with sightless eyes and with a strained expression on his face as though he was trying to hear what he could not see on the track. In the paddock, after the trial, he listened to the report of the jockey as to how the horse worked and personally supervised the work of rubibng down and cooling out, his ears and hands supplying the place of eyes during the process.

"Wilkinson finds his way about the betting ring alone and listens to the gossip and the shifting of the odds with a strangely intent look on his features, and the boys say he is moderately successful in his ventures in the ring. While a race is being run he is led to a place against the rail and while his attendant describes the running in its early stages, he is 'all ears' for the run through the stretch and actually seems to scent what is going on in those final struggles.

"I am told Wilkinson was a miner and lost both eyes in a premature blast in a mine. Then he took up selling tips at the Montana race tracks until he had accumulated money enough to buy a race horse, which was the height of his ambition, though he aspired to an entire stable when he was a miner. After he bought Alco some one asked him why he had bought a blind horse.

"'Didn't know the brute was blind in one eye,' he answered. 'I should have remembered the old saw. "'Tis a fool that buys a horse without both eyes wide open." But what do you think of a man who would sell a blind man a blind horse? Doesn't that come pretty close to the limit?'"

Mrs. Wilson, Deseronto, has three sons at the front. One of them, Henry Wilson, has been twice wounded and is now reported to be in the hospital.

COMMENT

As You Like it

(Toronto Globe.)

The Peterborough player whose identity was questioned by the O. H. A., was on the ice for a few minutes in the last period, but, from all he showed on this occasion, there is no reason why anybody should pay him for playing hockey, and it is no wonder that Peterborough did not have him on the team in any important game. He told the O.H.A. sub-committee and everybody else that he met here a week ago that his name was Moinse, and that he never knew a person named Tetrault. His name was announced to the officials on Saturday night as Joseph Tetrault, and it remains to be seen whether the O.H.A., the N.H.A., or the public has been humbugged in the matter.

(Mail and Empire.)

Secretary Hewitt, of the O. H. A., stated Saturday night that Tetrault, who was in uniform for the Shamrocks, was the same player who had appeared at the O.H.A. meeting under the name of Moinse. No affidavits were taken at the O.H.A. meeting, so therefore the latter are unable to do anything. As a hockey player Tetrault did not look very good.

At eight o'clock mass in St. Peter's cathedral this morning, Miss Kathaleen Loretta Hynes of Smith and Mr. Francis Joseph Lazure of Niagara Falls were united in marriage by Rev. Father Phelan.

The groom's sister was bridesmaid and the bride's brother supported the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Lazure will reside in Niagara Falls where the groom holds a good position.

His numerous local friends will extend to Mr. and Mrs. Lazure, congratulations and best wishes.

Mr. Bert Thompson of St. Marys, Ont., was the guest of Chief of Police Thompson on Saturday.

Mr. Graham Bell of Toronto and Mrs. Frewer of Mimico were the guests of Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse for the week end.

Corp. Frank D. Anstin, of the Signalling Corps of the Third Contingent at Ottawa, is home on leave visiting his parents, 548 Weller St.

Mrs. J. H. Renwick, 567 Aylmer street, will receive tomorrow afternoon (Tuesday) from three-thirty to six and every third Tuesday in the month afterwards.

The Conservatory Orchestra will practise tonight instead of Wednesday. This change is made necessary by several members going to Toronto on Wednesday to attend the concert by the New York Symphony Orchestra.

The members of the Commercial Travellers' Association proved themselves excellent entertainers, when they threw open their rooms on Water Street, Saturday evening, and provided a very enjoyable time for a large gathering of their friends. In progressive euchre, Mrs. Harry Overend won a handsome dinner gong. Mr. John Firth was the winner of the gentleman's prize. Dancing followed and refreshments were served.

The local branch of the Red Cross will forward to Toronto, February 19th, a box containing supplies for the hospitals in England and Northern France.

The needs of the men in the trenches are very great, and the Society feel they should have the support of all in trying to meet these needs. Articles for the soldiers in the trenches will be forwarded by the Red Cross free, if marked "Soldiers' Comforts," and will be distributed where the need is greatest, by the Canadian War Contingent Association, of which the Hon. George Perley is president. Supplies will be received at the Y.W.C.A. for the above box not later than Thursday, Feb. 18th.

MR. MOWAT SPOKE TO LIFE PROBLEM CLUB

Mr. A. Mowat, school inspector, addressed the Life Problem Club of the Y. M. C. A., Sunday afternoon. Mr. Mowats' address was on the development of the countries of the world of the past century along the lines of nationalism and liberalism. He showed that the spirit of the past century as well as the present time was looking toward self-government on the part of the common people. Mr Mowat showed that Great Britain leads the world in the development of Democratic Government and in all but exceptional cases, gives the common people the right to govern themselves. Russia's development along this line has been slow, but since the Japanese-Russian war considerable progress has been made.

Austria had been making some progress toward popular government before the war. France has attained a very high development along this line.

Germany, controlled by the Prussian military spirit has placed but very little power in the hands of the common people. The Kaiser feels he is accountable only to God for his actions. The German ministers are not accountable to the people but to the Kaiser only, therefor it is only natural that Germany could not be in sympathy with the popular government of the other countries of the world.

Mr. Mowat did not belittle the development of the German people, for he says that in education they rank very high, but the curse of the German people is the Prussian rule.

Taking a look into the future Mr. Mowat expressed his opinion that the war up to the present is only a preliminary to the warfare that we will see this coming summer. He believes that Germany will be driven back to her own boundary, but as she has so thoroughly entrenched herself it will require a great investment of men and money before she is subjected.

Mr. Mowat's address was of the greatest educational value to the young men who listened to it and a hearty vote of thanks was given to him.

PTE. ORMSBY BOYD ASKS FOR COMMISSION

Writing to an old friend in Toronto, Private Ormsby Boyd, a member of No. 2 Company, 17th Battalion, Nova Scotia Highlanders, who is at present stationed at Tidworth Barracks in England, says: "The English people are treating the Canadians very well indeed; at first too well, and gave most of them an exaggerated opinion of themselves. Some of our fellows were up to Scotland at Christmas and New Year's, and they were treated like princes."

Private Boyd states that he has applied for a commission in the British army, but has not yet had a reply from the War Office. He does not state when he expects to go to France, and has been fortunate in not having a day's illness since he left Canada.

Private Boyd is the eldest son of Dr. H. O. and Mrs. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon, Ont., and he was on the staff of the Bank of British North America in London, Ont., before he enlisted. He is a second cousin of Colonel George T. Denison and Col. Septimus Denison, and a grandson of Major-General Boyd, late of the Indian army.

GERMANS ARE MAD

United States Leaning to Britain Rouses Ire of Teutonic Press

BERLIN, Feb. 15. — The German Foreign Office, after studying the American note respecting the declaration by Germany of a war zone in the waters around Great Britain and Ireland, states that the terms are much friendlier than that previously been expected by reason of the incomplete newspaper despatches published here.

The Foreign Office even recognizes that from the American standpoint certain of the points raised are justified.

Germany, however, it is declared, intends to adhere to its own viewpoint.

Various officials, diplomatic, naval and military, whose opinions have been sought, profess to see no elements of danger in the situation, and are convinced that the naval campaign can be conducted on the lines laid down in the Admiralty proclamation without involving difficulties between the United States and Germany.

The Berlin newspapers' comment on the note, while generally of a determined nature, is friendly. Conspicuous exceptions to the rule, however, are furnished by Die Post and The Tages Zeitung, the former of which employs rather sharp phrases.

"When something does not suit the Yankees," says Die Post, "they are accustomed to adopt as threatening and as frightful a sabre-rattling tone as possible. They reckon that the person thus treated will let himself be frightened and give in. If this does not come to pass, however, if the person thus treated and threatened with the strongest expressions pays no attention and shows that he is not scared and will not let himself be driven into a state of funk, the swaggering Yankees calm themselves soon and quiet down."

TURKS ARE DEFEATED

British Surprise and Annihilate Two Hundred

LONDON, Feb. 15.—A force of 200 Turks and Arabs, under German officers, who were preparing to attack the British station of Tor at the entrance to the Gulf of Sues, were attacked and either killed or taken prisoners Friday by a British force, according to a British official report from Cairo. One hundred soldiers were taken prisoners, and of the others it is believed that not one escaped death.

The official report states that in January fifty Turks and two German officers approached Tor, believing that the place was undefended. Finding Tor garrisoned by 200 Egyptian soldiers, they sent for reinforcements. These arrived, and a force now numbering a little over 200 occupied a village to the north of Tor.

On their arrival becoming known, a small detachment of British troops landed in their rear, and, advancing over the hills, made a surprise attack on their position at dawn Friday.

A Belgian War Romance

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

One quiet evening in the summer of 1913 a pair of young lovers stood on a bridge that crossed the river Lys, in Belgium. They were there for a parting. The young man was to leave for the coast early the next morning and thence for America. Nothing could be more peaceful than the scene about them. A young moon stood in the west. If an occasional breeze stirred the leaves on the trees they were stirred lightly. As for sound, there was only a slight gurgle beneath them as the current passed the abutment of the bridge.

"Mina," said the young man, "cheer up. It will not be long before in America I shall have saved enough money to send for you. That we may have a definite time to be reunited I promise you that one year from today, if not before, you shall receive the passage money to bring you to me."

"And I, Hans, will work and save so that if you do not succeed in gaining enough to send for me I may have enough for the journey."

When the year had passed a great change had come over Belgium. The Germans were pouring into the country from the east, the French from the south. Wilhelmina had received letters from her lover in New York that money would be sent her for her passage, but before it was dispatched the war had stopped the mails.

On the anniversary of their parting, at evening, Wilhelmina went to the bridge on which they had stood a year before. It was now a ruin, more than half of it having been destroyed. Here and there across the fields were flashes, followed by a distant roar of guns, while searchlights sent their columns of light across the sky like the tails of nearby comets.

What should she do? Her home had been that day in the line of fire and was a ruin. Before leaving it she had snatched up her savings, and these she had with her. Standing there in the identical spot where she had stood in quiet with her lover, she resolved to go to him if possible.

There was no way of announcing her coming beforehand. She had neither writing materials nor a way to send a letter. Indeed, it was doubtful if even she could break through the line of war to reach the coast. And if she arrived at a port would she find a vessel? Nevertheless she turned her face toward Holland and set off in the darkness.

Her adventures are a long story by itself. Fortune favoring, she reached Rotterdam in safety and there found that she had the means to buy a steerage ticket on an outgoing steamer to New York.

On the arrival of the vessel the emigrants were landed at Ellis island, and Wilhelmina among others was brought before the emigration commissioners. There she was asked how she would be provided for in America, and when she said that she had no money she was told that she would be sent back to Holland.

Her modesty, the consciousness that she was coming to marry a man without a special bidding, had caused her to conceal what she expected. Besides, suppose Hans had changed! But the prospect of being sent back to a land running in blood, where even the little home in which she had been born and always lived had been leveled, overcame her reticence, and she told a love story that no pen, however inspired, could put on paper.

"Hans must be found!"

Such were the instructions given to a messenger, who departed on his errand.

There is a committee of Belgians in New York whose purpose it is to look after their incoming fellow countrymen. The head of the committee was found, and he in turn started a hunt for Hans.

Ever since the war had broken out Hans had been anxious about his Wilhelmina. He had not dared to send her his savings for fear they would be lost. Indeed, one of the troubles brought on by the war was the inability to send funds to Europe. He had written her, but without expectation that she would receive his letters. As to receiving letters from her, he had no faith in that either.

Hans was at work one afternoon when a fellow workman came to him and told him that the boss wished to see him in the office. Hans laid down his tools and reported as directed. He found beside the boss a man, who asked him:

"Are you Hans Wichtel?"

"I am."

"There is a girl on Ellis island who came over from Belgium. She says you will marry her."

"Mina?"

"She says her name is Wilhelmina."

"Marry her! Of course I will marry her. Where can I find her?"

Hans wished to go at once to Ellis island, but suddenly remembering that a man in overalls was not in wedding costume tidied himself up, then set off to join his sweetheart.

If the authorities had any doubt about Wilhelmina's story it was dispelled by the fervent embrace of the lovers. But Uncle Sam's emigrant officials take no man's promise of marriage, and there are no breaches of promise in his large family. A man went with the couple to the city hall in New York, where a license was procured. Then the pair went to the office of the Belgian committee, where the marriage ceremony was performed.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Herbie Reynolds, who died Friday, Jan. 15th, 1915.

By F. A. Conners.

In a little snow-white casket,
In the corner near the wall,
Lies the form of little Herbie
Who has answered to the call;
It was the voice of Jesus,
As He said, "Come unto Me,"
And Herbie answered softly,
"Yes Lord I'll follow Thee."

He is gone to be with Jesus,
In that land of Light and Love,
Where with Jesus all the ransomed,
Are gathered safe above;
And we'll go some day to join him,
In that mansion bright and fair,
Where we'll never know earth's sorrows,
And we'll go some day to join him,
And there'll be no parting there.

Now there comes to you this message,
Who are here and well today,
They're the precious words of Jesus,
And to you they softly say,
"Come unto Me ye weary,
And I will give you rest."
Take My easy yoke upon you,
And your soul shall then be blest.

We are passing, swiftly passing,
As the hours speed away,
We may be gone tomorrow,
Who are here and well today.
So to you I bring this message,
Now beneath His chastening rod,
Make ye ready for the journey,
"Prepare to meet Thy God."

In loving memory of Herbie's birthday, Feb. 15th, 1915, by the family.

FIRELESS COOKER, HOW TO MAKE ONE AT HOME WITH SMALL OUTLAY

A Box Lined With Asbestos Board Neatly Tacked in; Two Dividing Partitions of Asbetos, Three Asbestos Nests Wired Together and Some Sawdust Complete an Inexpensive Utensil

The cooker in question was designed by a young housewife and was made by her husband under her supervision. It is a compact box about thirty inches long by fifteen deep. The cover, instead of fitting over the top, fits just inside, and it is fastened in place, when the box is closed, by two wooden buttons set on to the edge of the box by screws.

The box is lined on the inside with asbestos board, which is neatly tacked in. Two fifteen-inch squares of the same asbestos material divide the interior into three chambers or compartments of equal width. The round openings or "nests" into which the cooking utensils are made to fit are made by rolling pieces of asbestos into cylinder shape and fastening them together with a fine wire.

These round nests vary slightly in diameter, the smallest being six inches and the largest seven inches. The spaces between these nests and the sides of the compartments are filled with sawdust, which is packed closely.

A large sheet of asbestos, cut to exactly fit over the top of the box, has three round openings for the three nests. This piece is tacked firmly in place and presents a very neat appearance. It fits close in at the top of the box, so that when the cover is shut down there is no space between.

There are three small squares of the asbestos which are for covering over the nest openings when food is set in them to be cooked.

Two of the cooking vessels used in this homemade cooker are five pound lard pails, which have tight fitting covers. The third is a larger can, also of tin. The pails have wire handles and the large can has a small wire ring in the cover, by means of which it can be lifted. The smaller cans are designed for cooking cereals, puddings and vegetables and for baking round loaves of bread, while the large can is designed for cooking meats.

The feature of this cooker, which distinguishes it from most homemade articles, is that it has soapstone and iron plates, which can be heated so that roasting and baking can be done in the cooker. There are two soapstone plates, roughly cut, it is true, but they answer the purpose for which they are intended. They are made from a soapstone warmer, this having been cut in halves and the corners of each half sawed off, so that the soapstones have a hexagonal shape. The two iron plates are small, round stove covers.

The owner of this ingenious cooker declares that it is entirely practical and serviceable. By heating the two soapstones and placing one at the bottom of a nest and the other on top of the cooking vessel, after the food has been put inside and the cover put on, she can bake bread or roast meat. In doing the roasting, however, she browns the meat in a frying pan before putting it into the cooker.

In cooking breakfast cereal (which is put in the cooker the night before) and in boiling vegetables neither soapstones nor iron plates are used.

This cooker, which cost about $1.50, is expected to take the place of a range oven for its owner. She has a two burner alcohol stove, on which steaks and chops will be cooked and over which the soapstones and iron plates are heated. At night some water is heated over the alcohol stove to put into the "fireless" and kept warm for toilet use in the morning. The cereal also is brought to a boil and then set into the cooker. In the morning there is no building of fires necessary. The cereal is ready for the table and coffee can be made and eggs or fish cooked in a few minutes over the alcohol stove. While breakfast is being eaten the dishwater is heating.

After breakfast a fricassee or stew or braise is made ready for the cooker and set into it to cook for the midday meal. This does away with excessive heat in the kitchen, and the clever woman who contrived the cooker declares that it has already proved to be worth much more than the small amount of money it cost.

MIDNIGHT SUN REALLY SEEN BUT ONCE A YEAR IN THE POLAR REGIONS

For One Whole Day, About June 21st at the North Pole and About Dec. 22 at the South Pole, Old Sol Keeps His Blazing Face in Full View

"The midnight sun" is one of those seemingly mysterious natural phenomena which exercise a perpetual charm over the popular imagination. The northern part of Scandinavia has acquired for itself the distinctive name of the "Land of the Midnight Sun," but the title should be extended to include a complete circuit of the earth along the arctic circle. Then, too, the southern hemisphere has a precisely similar phenomenon, which occurs along the antarctic circle, including a portion of Wilkes Land.

Properly speaking, a midnight sun is seen but once a year in either hemisphere.

Confining our attention to the northern hemisphere, the midnight sun is visible near the arctic circle on the date of the summer solstice, which occurs about June 21 at the time when the sun in its apparent annual circuit of the sky reaches its greatest northern declination, which means its greatest distance north of the equator. This distance in angular measure is about 23½ degrees, which is precisely equal to the inclination of the earth's axis of rotation from a perpendicular to the plane of its orbit around the sun.

The arctic circle is situated this same angular distance (23½ degrees) from the north pole. When the sun is directly over the equator, about March 21, its light reaches simultaneously both poles of the earth. As the sun begins to move northward the light quits the south pole, which then enters its period of six months' night. But at the same time the sun rises higher at the north pole, which in its turn enters upon its period of six months' day.

In the meantime, along the arctic circle, the days grow longer and the nights shorter, as the sun comes continually northward, until, at the solstice, when the sun is 23½ degrees north of the equator, there will be one period of twenty-four hours during which the sun does not set at all in the arctic circle.

At the hour of midnight on that day the sun, describing a circle through the sky, just touches the edge of the horizon in the north, like the bob of a gigantic pendulum, and then, without disappearing, immediately begins to rise again to describe the other half of its sweep in the sky.

This is the phenomenon called the "midnight sun."

Conversely at the time of the winter solstice, which occurs about Dec. 22, when the sun is at its greatest southern declination, there is one absolutely sunless day on the arctic circle, when the sun skims just under the southern horizon at noon.

As a matter of fact, owing to the effects of the refraction of the atmosphere, which means the power of the air to bend the rays of light so that the sun appears to be above the horizon by about its own diameter, when it is really its own diameter below it, the phenomena just described are visible half a degree (about thirty-five miles) south of the arctic circle.

After the day of the solstice the sun begins to dip below the horizon again, because it is then going south once more, and the nights, beginning with a length of only a few minutes, gradually increase until they, too, for one single occasion, attain the length of twenty-four hours.

Within the arctic circle the days and nights, alternately, greatly exceed twenty-four hours in length. At the very pole, as we have seen, they each last six months. In Lapland they may be a month long and at the North cape three months.—Garrett P. Serviss in Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Shoes For Soldiers.

A study of the orders given by Napoleon indicates the care he exercised to have a sufficient supply of shoes provided. On one occasion he wrote, "You know that shoes are always needed in war, and at another time he said to Baron Lejeune, "Shoes help on marches, and marches win battles." To Sir John Burgoyne's question addressed to Wellington, "What was the first requirement of a soldier?" "A good pair of shoes," he replied. "And the second requirement?" "A good pair of shoes for a change." "And the third?" "A pair of soles for repairs."—Scientific American.

THE TWO CLAIMANTS

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

Howard Prower and Ralph Cunningham, two young Englishmen, met in the gold country of Colorado and became fast friends.

These young men, having compared notes, learned that they came from eminent British families. Prower was a younger son of a nobleman, and Cunningham claimed to be a graduate of Oxford. Besides the fact of their being fellow countrymen, there was a strong resemblance between them. They were nearly the same height and build and both light complexioned. There was one difference between them, though it was scarcely noticeable. Prower's right eye was of a slightly different shade of blue from his left eye.

But there was a great difference in the character of the two men. Howard Prower was a kind hearted, noble man; Cunningham was a devil. They prospected together for a time, agreeing that if one struck paying dirt he would share it with the other. Finally Cunningham dug a hole in the ground for which he was offered a hundred thousand dollars. He had no intention of sharing it with Prower and was deliberating how he could beat him out of his portion when a letter came addressed to Howard Prower, earl of Brokefield.

Prower was away on a prospecting tour when the letter came. Both men had been away from England for ten years. If Prower were out of the way Cunningham might return, pass himself off for the new earl and thus appropriate the title and estates. While he was deliberating on this plan word was received that Prower had been attacked by claim jumpers and murdered.

Cunningham went to the place where the fight had occurred and tried to find his friend's body. He was told that a number of persons had been killed in the fight and they had all been buried side by side. He was shown the graves, but saw no reason why he should exhume his friend's body. Returning to his cabin, he opened the letter that had been received and learned that Prower's father and two older brothers had been taken ill and all had died within a period of a few weeks.

A month from that time Cunningham appeared in England and claimed to be Howard Prower, now Earl of Brokefield. There was no one of the family to receive him except a sister of the late earl, who did not doubt that he was her nephew.

No one disputed the identity of the claimant except Lady Gladys Pembroke, the daughter of a neighboring nobleman who would have been Howard Prower's wife except for his poverty. She had not married and when the heir returned expected a happy meeting. To play the part of her lover was more than Cunningham could accomplish, and she at once pronounced him an impostor.

But notwithstanding this assertion, which was not very largely accepted, Cunningham established himself as the Earl of Brokefield. He had played the part of a peer some four months, when who should appear but the real earl. Prower had been left for dead by those who had attacked him and those who had joined in his defense. Before they had returned to bury the dead he had crawled away. When he had recovered he looked for his chum, but did not find him. Later he had heard of his father's and brother's death and at once started for England.

When one day Howard Prower walked into his home and met his old friend face to face the latter turned pale. There was one of two courses which he might choose—step down and out or claim that the newcomer was an impostor. He chose the latter course. He ignored his visitor, saying that he had come to personate the real Howard Prower, but that he would be unable to substantiate his claim.

Prower, aghast at such treatment, withdrew and entered suit against the man who had usurped his title and his property. His aunt unfortunately adhered to the opinion that Cunningham was her nephew. This left Lady Gladys Pembroke the only witness in Prower's favor, and her evidence was not counted so valuable as that of a member of the claimant's family. Nevertheless, Lady Gladys warmly espoused Howard's cause, and the relations of lovers that had existed before he left for America were resumed.

One witness was found in an old woman who had nursed Howard when he was a baby. But she had never seen him since that time, and her evidence was not considered of much value, especially since in her old age she had lost her eyesight. However, at the trial she was called to the witness stand and testified as follows:

"I have not seen Howard Prower since he was a baby, when I used to give him his bath and wheel him in his perambulator, but if I could see plainly now as then I would know him, for I noticed on him a defect I have never seen in any one else. His eyes were of a different shade of blue."

The two claimant's were at once examined carefully. Nearly all the examiners pronounced that the blue of Howard's right eye was slightly lighter than that of his left.

This settled the case definitely, and he was adjudged to be the Earl of Brokefield. He married Lady Gladys. Cunningham was sent to prison for a term of years for making false pretensions.

The Single Theme.

'O men who furnish us with books,
  Who write the studied modern plays,
Who reel off poems by the yard
  And tune your harps to ragtime lays,
Remember this in dealing dope
  All wise, prophetic or profound
To please a race with ancient tastes:
  'Tis love that makes the world go round.

You may have skill and art and strength
  And understand the hidden laws
That hold the planets in their place,
  That follow as effect from cause,
But don't get gay for all of that.
  Though you a diamond can dissolve,
When you would touch the hearts of men,
  'Tis love that makes the world revolve.

The simple little village tale
  Of lovers sighing at the moon
Or walking slowly hand in hand
  To find a quiet place to spoon
Has readers where the books of wars
  Lie rotting with their leaves uncut,
For in the hearts and lives of men
  The book of love is never shut.

Pass up the problems hard to solve,
  And health hints in the background shove,
The tariff tangle put to sleep
  And give us quantities of love.
The world can never get enough.
  To pasture put your theories out
And turn your old typewriters loose
  On what the people read about.

Killed in the Trenches

William Patterson, a Scottish farmer, was the founder of London's great institution in Threadneedle street, the Bank of England. His plan for a national bank was submitted to the government in 1691, but it was not till three years later that the chancellor of the exchequer, Mr. Montague, and Mr. Michael Godfrey, one of the richest merchants in London, put the scheme into operation. At this time England was at war with France, and Godfrey, who was the bank's first deputy governor, left his peaceful occupation to visit Namur, then being vigorously besieged by the English forces under William III. Godfrey had undertaken this perilous journey in order to consult the king respecting the supply of money to the army necessary to carry on the war. Thinking that the safest place would naturally be somewhere near his majesty, Michael ventured into the trenches and soon caught the eye of the king.

"Mr. Godfrey," said William gravely, "I think you ought not to run this risk. You are a civilian and can be of no use here."

"True," courteously replied Mr. Godfrey, "but I am no more exposed than your majesty."

"Yet," returned the king, "I am in my duty, and therefore have a more reasonable claim to preservation."

At this moment a cannon ball, fired from the ramparts, struck Michael Godfrey and killed him instantly.

This sad event greatly affected William, and he commanded the body to be taken to England, where it was laid to rest in St. Swithin's church, near the Bank of England. In the church records Godfrey's memory is honored thus:

"He died a bachelor, much lamented by all his friends, relations and acquaintances for his integrity, his knowledge and the sweetness of his manners."—Pearson's Weekly.

Staggs—To keep from catching up with that fellow Baxter. He's the worst bore in town.

Object of Education.

The entire object of true education is to make people not merely "do" the right things, but "enjoy" the right things; not merely industrious, but to love industry; not merely learned, but to love knowledge; not merely pure, but to love purity; not merely just, but to hunger and thirst after justice.—Ruskin.

Why He Loved Spain.

Gioachino Rossini, who was a great jester, was once seen embracing a Spaniard with great effusion. Asked the reason, he replied, "Because without Spain we would be the last nation."

He Won Her.

"I am just starting out in the city," remarked the young man.

"The world is your oyster," suggested the young lady.

"Yes, and I have found a pearl right away."

Mark of Distinction.

"What is notable about him anyway?"

"He was born with a full set of teeth."

"Judging from the way he struts around, I thought he might have been born with his boots on."

Had the Facts.

"I shall sue him for breach of promise."

"But I thought you refused him."

"I did."

"On what do you base your case?"

"Everybody knows that a woman's 'No' means 'Yes.'"

"Yes, but I know a man it doesn't trouble."

Getting Out of It

By EUNICE BLAKE

David Edgerton, a young American, was spending some time in an Italian city.

One day Edgerton was sitting on a bench in the park sucking the ivory head of his cane when a girl passed him with an older woman. The young lady was a beauty. Nearly all Italians are brunettes, but this young lady was one of the few blonds one sees in that country. It seemed to Edgerton that she had walked out of a painting of Titian's that he had seen at the Borghese palace in Rome. Her hair was light, tinged with gold; her eyes were the only feature in her face that were of the prevailing Italian kind, being a liquid brown.

It was evident from her appearance, from her dress and being attended by an older woman that the girl was of the higher class. There would be no such thing as scraping an acquaintance. Edgerton followed her with his eyes till she passed out of sight; then a man who had been sitting on an opposite side of the walk arose and, advancing toward him, raised his hat politely and said:

"Would signor like to make the acquaintance of the young lady who has just passed?"

"Most assuredly!"

"With a view to marriage?"

"Can I not make her acquaintance without marriage?"

"With what object? The young lady is of a marriageable age; her parents do not desire young men to be attentive to her except with a view to marriage. But we have a custom here by which you can be introduced to a lady with a view to marriage. If you do not care to complete the transaction you simply forfeit my fee—I am a marriage broker—and any other expenses that may accrue."

Edgerton was so desirous of seeing more of the beautiful Italian that he gave the broker an order to arrange a marriage between him and her at once. The man did not seem to hesitate at making the proposition, especially when Edgerton told him that he had an income of $10,000 a year. The man was somewhat disappointed that his client had no family crest, but thought the income would make up for this deficiency.

The introduction took place. Edgerton spoke very little Italian, and Signorina Conti spoke no English. But they managed to make themselves understood, and Edgerton enjoyed a very pleasant visit. Later the American was informed that his proposition was accepted.

The question arose as to what should be Edgerton's next step. He had made the proposition for the purpose of meeting in a friendly way one whose beauty he so ardently admired, relying on the fact that he could forfeit the commission and no harm be done. But now that his offer had been accepted it occurred to him that to back out would be a slight to the young lady. He did not consider such a marriage best for either her or him. Signorina Conti's connections were all Italian, while his were American. He would have to take her away from her native land, for which she would always pine, and, as to making Italy his home, it was not to be considered. But how withdraw from the arrangement without appearing to put a slight upon the young lady?

Edgerton was nearsighted and wore glasses. Rather he wore a monocle, for he had lived in England, and at that time monocles were more common than they are now. He called on his marriage broker and said to him:

"Before completing this arrangement I have a confession to make to Signorina Conti."

"The signorina, signor, has nothing to do with the matter. It is all in the hands of her parents."

This made Edgerton feel easier in his conscience. He had no especial objection to the part he was playing, provided no one was concerned except the old folks.

"Well, then," he continued, "I desire that you inform Signor Conti that I am not a perfect man. I wear a glass eye."

"I do not think," said the broker meditatively, "that this will prevent the marriage so far as the parents are concerned. Signorina Conti may object to you on that account, but, after all, she must obey her parents."

"That will not suit me at all," replied Edgerton. "I wish a written statement from the signorina that she marries me because she loves me and with the knowledge that I wear a glass eye. Unless you will bring me a statement to that effect signed by her I will consider the matter off."

Edgerton convinced the broker that unless he followed his direction he would lose his fee. He therefore delivered the message to the young lady without her parents' knowledge.

The signorina had an aunt who had lost one of her eyes and wore a glass eye in its place. Seeing the article removed at times and replaced in its socket had been so repugnant to the girl that she could not stand the prospect of living with a man who was in a similar condition. She took the responsibility on herself of releasing the applicant for her hand.

Edgerton not only paid the brokerage, but sent a handsome present to the young lady. He didn't reveal the fact, however, that his glass eye was worn outside a natural one.

The Rose of Sharon.

In Asia the rose of Sharon is considered the emblem of resurrection. Throughout Syria, Judea and Arabia it is regarded with the profoundest reverence. The leaves that encircle the blossoms dry and close together when the season of blooming is over, and the stalk, withering completely and drying in the shape of a ball, is carried by the breeze to great distances. In this way it is borne over the sandy deserts until, touching some moist place, it clings to the soil, where it immediately takes fresh root and springs to life and beauty again.—London Mail.

PACKAGES IN PORTUGAL

Messengers Carry Them, as Stores Do Not Use Delivery Wagons.

Light delivery in Portugal is done almost entirely by men and women. Delivery wagons, such as are used in American cities, are unknown here. Some of the large department stores are now using motor trucks, but none has introduced a special parcel carrier.

Lisbon and Oporto, the only large cities in the republic, are built on hills, and most of the streets are very steep, attaining a grade of 17 per cent. They are paved with stone and generally are in good condition. The roads immediately about these cities are fair and the grades are easy. County highways are a mixture of very good and very bad. They are not kept up as they should be and for short distances are apt to be extremely rough.

Nearly all articles such as are delivered in the United States from a light wagon or motor vehicle are sold here by men and women, who go through the streets crying their wares. Fish, fowls, vegetables, bread, oil, fruit, etc., are all carried on the head or shoulders of the vendor. Delivery of goods from small shops is made by boys or by the "galego," who is found at every street corner. These men also transport pianos, furniture and other articles of a similar character.—Consular Report.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

YOU can't throw so much mud on other people that there will be none left to besmirch yourself.

Where matrimony is a farce alimony becomes a stern reality.

Some men haven't brains enough to feel a headache with.

There are people who spend so much of their time being strictly moral that they never have any fun.

What every woman knows is that she just hasn't a single thing fit to wear.

There are people who seem afraid that you won't find out who they are—and it doesn't much matter if you don't.

Our only salvation is that there are more people who would rather earn a dollar than steal one.

The trouble with some people is that honesty has nothing to do with them or their affairs.

The man who says the least doesn't always have the most to say.

There are people who can't understand the difference between being the big noise and the whole thing.

Because of Its Cost.

"How do you like my gown, hubby?"

"It is a dream."

"Isn't it?"

"It is—a perfect nightmare."

Good Picking.

"Who is chaperoning little Miss Millions for you?"

"Mrs. Muchly."

"What—the rich widow?"

"None other."

"Isn't that too much of a good thing?"

"Not by a long shot! I stand to win one or the other of them sure as you live."

Beating the Game.

"There doesn't seem to be any possible way to remedy the high cost of living."

"Oh, yes, there is."

"What is it?"

"Go to the tropics, where you won't have to wear much clothing."

"Well?"

"And live on a fast."

Forewarned.

Lives of great men oft remind us
When the record is complete
We should be real shy about it
When we buy a senate seat.

His Discovery.

"The waiters themselves are revolting against the tipping habit."

"I hadn't noticed it."

"But they are. I gave one a dime yesterday in a swell place and he handed it back to me and suggested that I buy a farm with it."

She Explains.

"Do you enjoy your husband's fishing trips?"

"Yes, immensely."

"Why, I thought you said you never go with him."

"That is why I enjoy them."

Breaking the News.

"I will never speak to him again, so there."

"What?"

"Well, I won't."

"Dear me, why not?"

"He's dead."

Got It Coming.

"I never had any misfortune in my life."

"Indeed!"

"Never a bit."

"You have some busy years ahead."

Quick Action.

"Who is your choice for president?"

"Have you been mentioned?"

"Well, not exactly."

"Could you lend me $5?"

Seasonable.

Summer's ripe, and are we happy?
  Does it really touch the spot?
Is there solid joy in finding
  Once again that heat is hot?
Are we really, truly grateful
  Ere the days melt into fall
That the thing is fixed by nature
  So the coal man does not call?

Every season has its drawbacks.
  Summer also has its share,
But it has some fine attractions
  Scattered through it here and there.
We can loaf about in shirt sleeves,
  With the free air at our throat,
Stoutly sweating out our meanness
  Without collar, without coat.

We can lie where shade is thickest
  If we do not have to work,
Tossing brickbats at the weather
  And the patient weather clerk.
Or if we are fond of fishing
  Where the merry waters dance
We can by the singing brookside
  Bend a pin and take a chance.

Summer is the king of seasons;
  Winter is the chilly queen.
Who would not if chance were offered
  Change the garb of white for green?
Though the ones who dote on springtime
  At the summer days may scoff,
Summer is the time for pleasure
  If the boss will let you off.

When Old Boreas Blows He Makes Ice and Snow.

© by American Press Association.

MISS EDNA HOYT COASTING.

Old Boreas has been asleep for a long time, but now his nap is over. Boreas, you know, is the North Wind, and Jack Frost is his son. When Boreas wakes up he sends Jack out to let people know that cold weather is on the way. Jack Frost is quite gentle when he starts out on his tour. He breathes on the flowers and trees and grass, and soon they go to sleep until spring shall awaken them. Then old Boreas opens his mouth and blows a tremendous blast. That is how winter begins. Snow and ice take the places of flowers and green trees. Little folks, however, are glad when Boreas wakes up, for he makes lots of splendid sport. Without the snow and ice there would be no skating or coasting—about the jolliest kind of fun there is. Here is the picture of a little girl who was caught by the photographer as she was coasting down a hillside in Central park, New York city. Her name is Edna Hoyt, and she is having a glorious time. Snow brings joy to thousands of kiddies all over this country and in others far away, although the war has saddened the winter for many children.
